Suggestions for...

Picking a new coach

By DON JELLISON
Reporter Editor

Noblesville Schools recently invited the community to give views on what Noblesville should look for when selecting a new superintendent to replace retiring Dr. Libbie Conner.

Good idea, but I wonder who will process all of these opinions and then make a decision as to who will be selected. The way things currently are going with Noblesville Schools, maybe that person will be the fifth grade teacher a Hazel Dell Elementary School or maybe the gym teacher at one of the middle schools.

That would make sense since Noblesville Schools now have announced that the high school principal will select a new head basketball coach, after, of course, firing a coach who has given 20 years to helping make Noblesville a better place to live.

That – giving the principal the power to pick a coach – isn't a bad deal, either. Noblesville's principal, who has been a principal for three years, has a lot of great experience in the world of high school basketball. In fact, he learned from one of the best, once being a member of Dave McCollough's Miller staff. Kind of funny when you think about it. McCollough hires a young man looking to get started in coaching and then years later that young man, Jeff Bryant, fires McCollough, who has the 13th best career record among all active basketball coaches in the state.

Another former coach on McCollough's staff was Ryan Bales. You Miller fans may remember Ryan Bales. Good guy. Good coach. I don't know why Bales comes to mind, except, perhaps, if Noblesville is riding a fast freight to hiring a new coach, then having someone already in mind probably is the way to go. Bales currently is at Plymouth, where his three-year overall record is 48-21. He was 11-11 last year and in three sectionals he has won one game and lost three.

But, I've gone off into nowhere and I'm missing my point. What does Noblesville want when picking a new basketball coach? Glad you asked.

*Coach should be a guy who can look parents smack in the eye and guarantee a winning season. And, of course, Mom & Dad, your son/daughter will be a starter on that team and will average 20-points-plus a game. That's what parents like to hear.

*Coach should guarantee parents that he will push the players so that the team will play at a high level. Although, of course, he will not push your kid all that much. Got to be careful with pushing kids in today world.

*Coach will smile at parents and will always have an open door for them to come in for coffee and donuts.

*When the coffee and donut thing doesn't work and parents go to the (weak, non-supportive) administration, Coach will not defend himself because in this process that isn't allowed.

*Coach will guarantee at least a 50-50 season, which is perfectly fine in all sports at Noblesville.

*Finally, as a Noblesville basketball fan, Coach will guarantee me that year-after-year he will win the local sectional by beating Hamilton Southeastern, Carmel, Fishers, Westfield, North Central and Zionsville.

*When that doesn't happen, Coach will assure all of us that he will win. It is, he must say, a rebuilding process and he can and will get the job done in eight or nine years. The talent level, you know, is down right now.

If the principal can find that kind of coach, then all will be fine in Miller Nation and the principal can go back to doing what he should be doing, being a principal.

Let me say one thing in closing. Principals don't fire or hire basketball coaches. If that has happened at Noblesville High School, it hasn't been in my several trips around the block. It just doesn't happen.

What happened to search committees, comprised of students, folks from the community, athletic directors, teachers, players etc.? Nope, no principals that I can recall.

All of those folks should stop and realize who they are losing. Just ask Dave McCollough's former players; they'll tell you.

Or, ask long-time Miller faithful Charles Holland, Class of 1962, who has been one of many to write letters to The Reporter.

"I read your lead story Thursday and it made me cry. Then it made me mad. They can't do that to us.

"I have been in the stands watching Miller basketball since 1958. I have followed all coaches from Glen Harper to Coach Mac. We have had some great ones and some not so great. But, we just lost the greatest of all-time.

"You know it and I know it, but what is with that new principal? He sure is not a J.B. Stevens or a Maynard Wolf.

"Do you think that we have any recourse?

"Why must we be destined to mediocrity?

"We should demand doing the right thing, not the easy thing.

"I have invested a lot in our schools through taxes and more and I feel cheated by some of the bonehead decisions that are being made."

Charles, I could not have said it any better.

Farmer's Market On The Lake will be Hamilton County's newest market. The market is accepting vendors for weekly Saturday morning sales.

Cicero's farmer's market like no other

By JEFF JELLISON

Farmer's markets are no stranger to the Hamilton County area. Most communities have them; however, a new farmers market planned for Cicero will be like no other in Hamilton County.

Farmer's Market On The Lake is what organizers are titling the county's newest market which will be located at 409 W. Jackson Street in Cicero

Gregg Boyd, one of the lead people behind the market, indicated his group is accepting vendors for the Saturday 7:30 a.m. – 11 a.m. weekly market. Those needing information on booth space should contact info@lazyfrogg.com.

Boyd indicated the market has room for approximately 20 vendors. Ideally they would like to see farmers, high school groups, church groups and vendors selling plants, food and crafts setting up along the lakeshore, next to Boyd's other development, Lazy Frogg on Lake Cicero.

Lazy Frogg on Lake Cicero, formerly the Waterfront Inn, has been described as a Jimmy Buffett meets Martha's Vineyard type of setting.

Boyd said, "The Lazy Frogg will feature a beer and wine garden named The Lilly Pad, a shrimp hut serving fresh shrimp and family dining. "Guests will be able to view from our hilltop lake setting what some say are Indiana's most beautiful sunsets...God's unbelievable landscape backdrop over Morse Reservoir," Continued Boyd.

Boyd first unveiled his plans for The Lazy Frogg late last summer and had hopes the restaurant would open this spring. Delays in necessary permits and an extremely harsh winter delayed remodeling of the building.

"We received a redevelopment and building permit in March. Within 24 hours of receiving the permit we began remodeling," said Boyd. "We are working hard every day trying to get our people organized with our tradesmen, without stepping on each," stated Boyd.

The Lazy Frogg on Lake Cicero will be opening this summer with a Grand Opening being planned on July 31.

House Republicans achieve legislative priorities

By BRIAN BOSMA
Indiana House Speaker

When the General Assembly began its work last November, as Speaker I pledged a session driven by five main issues: increased road funding, enhanced job training, early childhood education, fair business taxation and cutting government red tape. With the 118th General Assembly behind us, it is clear Republicans accomplished each of these priorities, and much more.

Due to conservative Republican budgeting principles, Indiana is in one of the best fiscal positions of any state in the nation. This fiscal strength gave us the ability in a non-budget year to allocate up to $400 million to new major highway construction projects. These state funds could leverage an additional federal funding to bring new construction to bear on major interstate highway choke points, creating thousand of Hoosier construction jobs and greatly improving the safety and economic benefit of our self-styled Crossroads of America and our growing logistics sector.

And while our unemployment rate as a state is the lowest since 2008, we still must continue to attack the “skills gap” between the training Hoosiers are currently receiving and the 21st century jobs available to Hoosier workers. This session, we successfully championed new incentives for employers who partner with schools and universities to encourage on-the-job training internships that result in high wage, high demand employment, especially in the high tech manufacturing sector.

Our three-year effort to provide high-quality preschool opportunities to low-income Hoosier families was successful this year with the adoption of a pilot program combining $15 million in state and private sector funding to provide thousands of low income students with an early education opportunity they would not otherwise receive, preparing them for success when they begin kindergarten. This common sense program aimed at Indiana’s poorest children has the potential to reap great benefits for the future.

An additional short session goal was to continue making Indiana’s tax climate one of the best in the nation for job creation and new business investment. We cut individual and inheritance taxes in 2013 and this year further reduced financial institution and corporate taxes to give Hoosier businesses the second lowest corporate tax in the nation when fully phased in by 2022.

We also gave new tools to local government to exempt employers from business personal property taxes on an optional basis beginning next year. This will grant cities, towns and counties the opportunity to spur new investment and employment throughout the state.

Detractors no doubt will claim this year's session was dominated by social issues, or that little of substance was accomplished. Privately, however, even our Democrat colleagues have stated their appreciation for the bipartisan tone of this session and the exceptional work accomplished in a short 10 weeks.

There are Democrats on the ballot in Hamilton County

By JIM BLESSING

Hi. My name is Jim Blessing and I am a Democrat . . . from Hamilton County! Since Fred Swift recently noted a lack of Democratic candidates in the upcoming local primary election, I'd like to let you know about the Democrats who are on the ballot.

While we have only one Democrat running for a county or township post, there are three Democrats running for Fishers council seats, including Greg Purvis, Kent Nelson, and Justin Kilgore. Sherry Peters is running for the Sheridan Town Council. Democrats are well represented in State Senator and State Representative races. J.D. Ford is running for Senate District 29, currently held by Mike Delph. Three Democrats are running for State Representative seats including David Russ in District 39 against incumbent Jerry Torr (who has primary opposition); Bob Ashley in District 32 running against incumbent Eric Turner (who also has primary opposition); and Joe Marcum in District 29 against Kathy Richardson.

Also, three Democrats are running for the District 5 U.S. Congressional seat currently held by incumbent Susan Brooks (who has primary opposition). The Democrats are Shawn Denney, Allen Davidson, and David Ford. There will be a debate between these candidates on Wednesday, April 23 at 7pm at the American Legion Post #155, 852 West Main Street, Carmel. This will allow Democratic primary voters to be fully informed on these candidate's views.

I have heard most of the candidates talk in local Democratic meetings and I think they are an excellent group! They range from being a school teacher, to an engineer, to ex-military, to a journalists, to a lawyers, to a retired person and to younger people making a living in this economy. Most are running for the first time and aren't the entrenched officeholders and politicians that the State and County seems to have an ample supply, including some that have been in the news, not in a positive way.

State Senator Mike Delph has alienated his own Republican colleagues by seemingly throwing a temper tantrum about his party's reluctance to pass a constitutional amendment that banned not only gay marriage, but even civil unions. For that he was given a "Time Out" by Republican leadership and was forced to sit in the back of the room. State Representative Eric Turner is also in a lot of hot water for trying to secretly lobby his fellow Republicans to kill a bill that would harm his family's and his own financial interests. Again, some of his Republican colleagues exposed his behavior and he is now subject to an ethics investigation. Meanwhile, other Republicans continue to pass measures like allowing guns in school parking lots and more tax cuts for businesses, while individuals see their paychecks shrink and tax burden rise.

Since the 2010 election, Republicans have controlled virtually all levels of state government. With each passing year, they are enacting more extreme measures. One-party government, with little checks and balances, is not healthy for a state. This allows more extreme members of the party to exert power to close off more moderate viewpoints. When traditionally-minded Republicans balk at some of these measures, they are often threatened with hard-right primary opposition, which seems to scare them into accepting their right-wing colleagues' propositions.

Talking about hard-right primary opposition, that's what U.S. Representative Susan Brooks has in her primary opponent David Stockdale. Ms Brooks indicated in Facebook that one of her proudest achievements thus far in office was joining her Republican colleagues in their 53rd attempt (or whatever the counts is now up to) to override or defund the Affordable Care Act. However, her primary opponent complains that she is too liberal, because he wants more extreme measures such as defunding and shutting down the government over this issue. Of course, Ms Brooks supported the shutdown of the government with several votes last fall.

According to the Office of Management and Budget, that shutdown costs billion of dollars which increased the federal deficit, had a significant negative effect on the economy, such as lost tourism dollars from closing of National Parks, and impacted millions of Americans, such as delaying $4 billion in tax refunds.

The founding fathers designed a federal government system that requires legislators to compromise in order to act for the greater good. Does anyone really think that shutting down the government by "standing firm" on defunding the Affordable Care Act was worth whatever it was that the Congressional Republicans like Ms. Brooks, thought they'd gain by it?

Opening Night at Noblesville Youth Baseball

Reporter photos by Richie Hall

Noblesville Youth Baseball conducted its opening ceremonies for the 2014 season Friday evening at the Bobby Mills Field of Dreams. Pictured are several of the teams that will be playing in tournaments over the spring and summer.

LEFT: Trevor Corbett of the Pirates makes contact during a home run-hitting skills test that took place before the opening ceremonies.

Trent, 15, approached NYB about doing a service project for his Eagle Scout Service Project. They decided on the pitching facility, and construction started on March 27. The facility features four mounds and pitching lanes, adjustable home plates and a six-foot backstop. The project required 550 man-hours. Trent raised $1,650 dollars for the project. The cost was $1,000, the remainder of the money went to an NYB scholarship. Pictured with Trent are brother Trevor, father Tyler and mother Joni.

Millers, ‘Rocks win Showcase relays

Friday's Franklin Central Showcase had the best weather the meet has had in a long time, and it certainly showed in everyone's performances.

That included some championship runs by Hamilton County schools. Carmel and Hamilton Southeastern's girls were dominant, and Noblesville and Westfield's boys teams got big wins in the relays.

The Greyhounds went 1-2 in the girls mile, with Haley Harris clocking in at 4:58.72 and Kelsey Harris right behind her in 4:58.99. The Royals' Rachel Nichwitz finished fourth with a nice time of 5:01.39, and her teammate Jessica King placed sixth in 5:02.56.

The Millers won the boys 4x400 relay, as the team of Dontay Wells, Max Milkey, Michael O'Reilly and Jake Owens cruised to a finishing time of 3:22.42. That turned out to be 1-2 county finish, as Fishers was the runner-up in 3:24.84. The Shamrock boys were 4x800 winners in 8:01.18 (Westfield names were not available for the relay.)

In the boys mile, Guerin Catholic's Joseph Taylor was the top county finisher, placing 11th (4:21.17). Westfield's Aaron Bennett finished third in the freshman mile (4:35.51). Carmel's girls got a third-place 4x400 relay finish (4:08.71) and fourth in the 4x800 (9:43.04).

Meanwhile, Hamilton Southeastern's Austin Hogan competed in the Throwers Showcase at Warren Central. Hogan won the discus event and finished eighth in the shot put.

Dominant doubleheader for ‘Hawks...

Sheridan unloads, 13-1, 13-0

Sheridan’s lucky No. was 13 last evening as Coach Matt Britt’s Blackhawks swept a home double-header from Indianapolis Washington, 13-1 and 13-0.

With 1-0 win over Green Bay...

Indy Ice reach Eastern Conference finals

For the second time in as many nights, the scoreboard looked the same.

It was the end result, however, that was the most special as the 1-0 shutout of the Green Bay Gamblers propelled the Eastern Conference regular-season champions over the host Gamblers and into the Eastern Conference finals.

The odds favored Jason Pawloski again as his 22 saves earned the narrow victory in the lone-goal contest while Denis Smirnov tallied the matches' only lamplighter.

There weren't many penalties in the first 40 minutes (six penalty minutes)as the bitter rivals battled to represent the Eastern Conference in the Clark Cup Finals, but Indy only needed 72 of 120 penalty seconds to make Green Bay resent the high sticking call as Smirnov redirected a Matt Roy shot from the point for the 1-0 tally.

Roy launched a laser from the blue line where the Penn State-commit Smirnov's stick caught enough of the biscuit to sneak past Gamblers' goaltender Jared Rutledge for the second Ice goal in the past 48 hours, but enough for the 1-0 win.

The victory advances Indy to the Eastern Conference finals against the winner of the Dubuque Fighting Saints and the Cedar Rapids RoughRiders. Game one and two of the finals will be played at Pan Am Pavilion on Friday (4/25) and Saturday (4/26) at 7:05 pm.
