Sunday special: When is enough, enough?

Noblesville apartments

By DON JELLISON
Reporter Editor

Mark Boice believes that Noblesville, despite growing to a 50,000-plus community, has been able to maintain its “small town charm.”

Boice is president of the Noblesville Common Council.

“It’s not about population,” Boice said. “It’s about the people we have living here. It’s about the events that we put on in the downtown.”

“Carmel (with even more growth than Noblesville) has done a good job keeping its hometown flavor. Fishers? I’m not sure what will happen there as they become a city.”

Boice thinks what is happening in Noblesville is good.

But, the seven-man Council he heads earlier this week passed ordinances allowing for 800-plus new apartments, most on the southeast corner of the city.

“I don’t think that will happen again for a while,” Boice said.

“I think, for now, we have enough.”

That’s the question. That’s the Catch 22. What is enough? What is enough without slamming the door to growth?

Understand, the subject at hand is multi-unit apartments, often built for low income families. The subject is not the huge subdivisions being built in Noblesville and Noblesville Township, homes which often are in the $1 million-plus range.

“That’s the question we’re facing,” said Councilman Rick Taylor. “When is enough, enough? I don’t want to slam the door on Noblesville growth. I voted for all three ordinances to allow for more apartments, but I did so with mixed emotions. This type of housing often brings along crime, which means we’ll need more police and fire protection.”

Boice

“And, schools,” Taylor added. “We have to reach out more to the schools for their input. We’ve tried. City Hall and Noblesville Schools need to be more on the same page. We need to know what the schools are thinking.”

“No more apartments,” said Councilman Steve Wood. “We’re stretching local services, police and fire and schools. The schools need to take a part in the decisions we’re making.”

At the Council meeting on Tuesday, Mayor John Ditslear said he already has met

Two tickets to paradise

By JANET HART LEONARD

Our Bags were packed and we were ready to go. We weren't just California dreaming. We were headed for Palm Springs, California. Paradise was awaiting!

Chuck had packed two pair of shoes and one bathing suit. I had packed five pair of shoes and three bathing suits. He asked me why I needed three bathing suits. My answer was simple...because.

I had been told that the temperature in the desert is a dry heat, no humidity. I will tell you that 112 is still 112. We enjoyed having breakfast outside when it was only in the 80's. We would read a couple of newspapers and enjoy a leisurely two hour breakfast, splitting a Belgium waffle and drinking lots of coffee. Sitting there I realized that paradise isn't about anything fancy but it is in the simple moments that hug your heart.

The time difference of three hours confused our bodies. We woke up at 6:00 everyday but our inner clocks told us it was 9:00. We often had the restaurant's veranda to ourselves.

One morning I did not hear Chuck get up and get ready. He later sent me a text that he was waiting at a table near the water.

Anyone who knows me knows that I never go out without my hair and makeup done. I couldn't make Chuck wait 45 minutes (or more) for me. So I plopped my beach hat on my head, brushed a bit of blush on my cheeks, curled my eyelashes and dabbed on a bit of mascara. I was sitting with Chuck in less than 15 minutes. That was a record for this lady.

I laughed as I picked up the Wall Street Journal. There I was, bed head hair hidden by a hat, very little make

Cat show means feline fun on Saturday

By RICHIE HALL

So who was the coolest cat of them all at the Hamilton 4-H Fair on Saturday?

Actually, everyone who participated in the cat show was pretty cool - owner and feline. There were 52 cats being shown at the event, which took place in the Exhibit Hall.

Jackie Morgan, the cat project leader, said that there were 60 4-Hers that completed the project this year.

The Reporter at The Fair

“We have some 4-Hers who are showing more than one animal,” said Morgan. “Our numbers are greatly increased over last year.”

At a cat show, judges are looking at two things: The quality of the animal, and it's care. That includes making sure the ears and nose are clean, the nails are groomed, and careful inspection of the coat.

“You can tell by how well the animal is cared for by the condition of its coat,” said Morgan.

Cats are grouped in either the kitten category, which is for those aged four to up and ME reading the Wall Street Journal. THAT was a Kodak moment but no selfie!

Later in the day we came in from the pool. Chuck sat on the sofa, reading one of his 500 page crime mystery books. I was sitting in bed reading "Calling me Home", a southern mystery/romance/laughter/tears chick novel. He asked me why I was wearing my hat in bed. My answer was simple...because.

It was a wonderful few days with no agenda, no alarm clocks, no sight seeing, just relaxing.

Of course all good times must come to an end. We had a 3 hour layover in Phoenix. As it came time to board the plane there was an announcement that the gate was changed from one terminal to another. We quickly walked an airport marathon, along with 200+ others, to the right gate. It was then that we were told that the plane was delayed 30 minutes. We finally settled into our seats. It was midnight at home.

We hoped to sleep awhile but the captain announced that we would be hitting some turbulence. Great. I kept trying to think that it was just a bumpy road. Well if I'm on a bumpy road for 45 minutes I'm going to find a different road to take. I didn't take a nap but I did take a Xanax.

We arrived in Indianapolis about 2:00 a.m.. When we got to the place where we left our car, they were busy and then they couldn't find it. We arrived home about 3:30 a.m. Our bodies were so confused and jet lag had set in. 3 hours isn't a very long time but try telling that to bodies that are our age.

My alarm is set for 7:00 a.m. Yes, it is back to reality. I head back to work and Chuck, of course, heads back to the golf course.

with new Noblesville Schools Superintendent Beth Niedermeyer.

Most of the new apartments which will be built are located on Highway 37 at 146th Street. Councilman Jeff Zeckel points to a similar housing/rental project just a few miles to the South in Fishers.

"That is a good example of some of the developments that have recently been proposed for Noblesville. It is located just south of us in Fishers at 37 & 131 Street," Zeckel points to. "In this new development they have the multi-housing component along with a new smaller Wal-Mart and several new retail businesses, including many new restaurants that are coming into the area."

Zeckel, as did other Council members, asked Planning Director Christy Langley how Noblesville compares percentage-wise to other communities in multi-family housing. Langley said a study is underway.

"I think it is important to find out the national or regional average for the percentage of multi-housing units in a community of comparable size," Zeckel said. "We can then see how Noblesville stacks up. The last information we received from the Planning Department, Noblesville's percentage of multi-housing is around 10 percent of our total housing stock. Are we below the average at 10 percent, or are we above?"

"If it is determined Noblesville is below the average percentage," Zeckel continued, "I am more inclined to approve additional apartments, given that the applicant has met all other requirements. If Noblesville is above the average, I would be more inclined not to approve additional apartments. However, we also need to look at the type of multi-units proposed. For example, if it is determined out of our total number of apartments, we lack retirement units, I would be inclined to approve additional retirement units. It is more important than ever to monitor our total units and type of apartments."

There was some discussion about housing in the downtown, but "downtown" appeared to mean different locations to different Councilmen.

Councilman Brian Ayer, a realtor, owns a couple buildings in the downtown with a total of four apartments in them.

"They are always full," Ayer said.

"I have people stop in my office quite often looking for downtown apartments. I do believe that there is a demand for apartments that residents could walk to the downtown amenities. That being said, I don't think we need a large complex that will overshadow our downtown area," Ayer added.

"I would need to see some specifics," Zeckel talked about downtown. "Are we going to tear down older homes to make room for an apartment complex? The west side of White River would have more potential than the east side for units similar to the ones in the downtown Carmel area, in my opinion."

"The west side of the river might be good for apartments," Taylor said. "Maybe around the Kroger area."

"Something near the downtown, west of the river," suggests Wood. "I don't think we want condos in the greater downtown."

Boice has a different view of "downtown." He said, "We've been trying to develop South 8th Street; maybe a little more south would be a good spot for townhouses, condos and apartments."

CAT SHOW

eight months. After that, a cat is a senior, and then divided into either the longhair or the shorthair category.

Maris Bulger's cat Sammie is a long-hair, but actually came to the fair with short hair. She had to deal with matted fur, so the Bulger family had to shave her. It didn't matter - Sammie won an honor ribbon and a blue ribbon.

"We liked the haircut because it doesn't really hurt her," said Bulger. The matted fur was uncomfortable for the cat, and Bulger said that Sammie is "a lot happier and nicer now" with her new haircut - even though Sammie wasn't feeling too sociable on Saturday.

"She's hiding in the corner right now," said Bulger, 9, who will be a fourth-grader at Our Lady of Grace in a few weeks.

In addition to the cat show itself, some of the 4-Hers enter the cage decorating contest, where they pick a theme for their cat's cage and decorate it accordingly. Also, anyone beyond their first year in the cat project must prepare an exhibit or poster. Morgan said it can be about any subject, as long as it's related to cats.

"They also have the opportunity to participate in what we call the cat knowledge portion," said Morgan. That involves a written test as well as an oral test.

Cats are popular with younger 4-Hers - in fact there was one first-year member who was showing an 18-year-old cat. Morgan said that she's noticed the average age of the cat are getting older as the years go by.

Ice cream contest gets creative

Ice cream contest judges John Newton, Steve Dillinger and Paul O'Connor sample a flavor. There were over 20 different flavors at the Saturday contest.

By RICHIE HALL
Everybody was "screaming" for ice cream Saturday - in a different way. The screaming was more like cheering for those brave enough to try the ice-cream eating contest, which took place Saturday at the Hamilton County 4-H Fair. After that was the ice-cream making contest, and contestants there got creative with what they put into their ice cream makers.
Wendy Tidd, the chairwoman of the ice cream contests, said there were indeed some "very creative flavors" that were sampled by the judges, which included Hamilton County Commissioner Steve Dillinger.
"We've had the Elvis, which is Elvis' favorite sandwich, which is a banana, peanut butter, bacon fried ice cream," said Tidd. "We've had cream corn and blackberry, cotton candy."
There were 13 different flavors in the electric mixer division, and another six in the hand-cranked division. There were also two in the youth division.
"Each year it grows a little more," said Tidd.
The eating contest went well. There were three divisions, with a first, second and third in each one. Tidd said that contest was "a lot of fun" with a "great" turnout.

Not The Perfect Mom...

Defining Motherhood

By TAMAR KNOCHEL

At one point in my life I remember cooking dinner, the house was spotless and I had the thought, “Now THIS is what a good mom looks like”, as I mentally patted myself on the back. That lasted for maybe an hour. This week, as I was performing the flight of the bumble bee before all the birthday party guests arrived with their mothers I had the thought: “Why don’t we want other moms to see our dirty dishes?”

I mean, it’s not like they don’t have them too. Do we feel like those messes will make them think we’re a substandard mom? DO those messes make us a substandard mom? Do these questions sound familiar to you too?

As I stood scrubbing the mold from the Rubbermaid lid pondering the mortally shameful consequences of getting caught with dirty dishes in my sink, a revelation of monumental proportions came to me. If I’m defining my quality of mothering by the cleanliness of my house, or the number of loads of laundry I get done in a day, or the cuisine that I’m serving my children, then what kind of a mother will I be when I am no longer able to do those things? Take a moment to read that sentence again and again until you can feel the Truth of that statement lifting something unnecessary from your shoulders.

Sometimes I get so focused on the temporal I forget the importance of the eternal. Dirt is temporal, memories are eternal. When my children leave this nest if I’ve defined my mothering by the temporal tasks alone, then I’ll suddenly find myself a mother no longer! And yet nothing could be further from the Truth! There is so much more to mothering than cleaning and laundry and cooking!

Mothering is loving! And that never ends!

It never goes away and it never stops. Sometime after that mental pat on the back I attended a funeral where every single person that stood up to talk spoke of how important cleanliness was to their mom. They said a few other things, but mostly, they told stories of how they got in trouble for making messes. That’s just not what I want my kids to remember about me when I’m gone. There will come a day when I will leave this earth and my children will gather in my memory and reminisce about me. And when they do, what do I want them to say? “Boy, Mom sure could keep a good house!” “Mom was so good at keeping our clothes clean and organized.” Or “Gosh Mom was such a great cook!” No. Not me.

I want them to remember the way that I held them when they were sad. I want them to remember how I sang while I cooked

1	Acts 19:1-21:36
2	Acts 21:37-25:12
3	Acts 25:13-28:31

5	Amos 5:1-9:15
6	1 Chronicles 1:1-4:23
7	No Reading

dinner, and perhaps burned it on more than one occasion to the point of setting the smoke alarms off. I want them to remember how I watched their favorite shows with them and how I played cards with them until bed time while the dinner dishes sat in the sink waiting until we were done. I want them to remember dancing with me in the kitchen to our favorite songs. I want them to remember how I hugged them so tightly at night that we joked that their heads were going to pop off. And then I said, “I love you” with all the emotion and sincerity that those simple words could possibly muster. I want them to remember how I showed up to every recital and play and program, even if I *might* have forgotten about it right up to the very last second; but I was still there. I want them to remember how I sat there on the sidelines at the tennis court season after season cheering them on, just for hitting the ball back across the net; even if it didn’t go into the right box on the court.

No. I’m not the perfect mom. I don’t have a perfect house, or a perfect yard. Our laundry is NEVER done and neither are my dishes. But you know what, that’s OK. Because while those things may not be getting done all the way all the time, my kids KNOW beyond a shadow of a doubt that I love them and that I will always be there for them if it is in my power to do so. I think that’s a mothering definition that will far outlast me.

Hanging on for dear life

By AIMEE GEBHART

As summer break winds down and all of the “Back to School” nonsense begins, I feel my melancholy creeping in. I also find myself clinging tightly to my little girl. Little. I say that word, but she is anything but little. At age 11, Faith is almost as tall as I am and is eager to remind me of that any chance she gets. But to me, she is still little.

Yesterday, Ed and I took Faith and her friend Millie to Kings Island for the day. It was the perfect day with sunshine, cool temps, and happy girls. Truly, it was the kind of day you dream of when you think about taking kids to an amusement park. Best of all, I had a chance to see my too-eager-to-grow-up daughter act like the little girl that I am so afraid of losing.

It was worth every penny we spent to hear the girls laugh and squeal on the rides and to see them skipping around with nothing but sheer excitement to ride the next one. They were oblivious to the fact that their ponytails were a hot mess or that they had sticky streaks of ice cream on their faces. They rode all of the water rides knowing full well that they would get soaked. They didn’t care.

The highlight for me was watching them run up to the observation deck of a raft ride and get blasted over and over with waves of water. They doubled over with laughter and ran back for more. It didn’t matter to them that they were drenched to their skin or that they looked like little drowned rats. They were having too much fun to care. I couldn’t help but wonder how long that kind of innocent, wild abandon will last.

I wondered it again as we stood in a long line for a roller coaster. Faith was tired and leaned into me for a hug. She looked up at one point with her lips puckered for a kiss. I gave her a big smooch, but my heart was aching because I realized that she probably won’t do that in public much longer.

At the risk of sounding cheesy, it occurred to me yesterday that this whole parenting thing is a lot like riding a rollercoaster. As exciting and thrilling as it is, it can also fill you with panic and have you hanging on for dear life. That’s what I feel like I’m doing with my girl – hanging on for dear life.

I think a big part of this is because Faith is the only child I was ever able to have. For many years that was a bitter pill for me to swallow. I knew that every big milestone I faced with her would be a first and a last all rolled in one. Luckily I have learned to let that go and to be grateful for the beautiful, healthy girl that I do have. But I won’t lie; it still kind of hurts sometimes.

So for now, I will ignore the fact that in a few short weeks I will have to send my girl to middle school for the first time. I will ignore the fact that she will become less little and will probably lose some of those sweet, childish ways in order to be a cool tween. For now I will just be grateful for her crooked ponytails, skinned knees, dirty feet, big belly laughs, and kisses on the lips – and I will hang on to them for dear life.

Cicero Friends of the Park conduct Kids Go Fishing Day at Red Bridge

By JEFF JELLISON

Cicero Friends of the Park conducted their annual Kids Go Fishing Day on Saturday along the banks of Morse Reservoir at Red Bridge Park.

Mike Murphy, a member of the organization, said this year was the seventh year of hosting the event.

Fishing poles, bait and lunch were provided to the nearly 50 participants.

Several area businesses and organizations provided door prizes that were awarded at the conclusion of the event.

In addition to Cicero Friends of the Park, the event was also sponsored by Cicero Parks Department and Post 341 Sons of American Legion.

With Cook gone...

Heights looks for firepower

By DON JELLISON
Reporter Editor

Watching Haley Cook bomb 3-pointers at a steady pace last season, one would never think that the No. 1 concern for Coach Scott Fernung this summer would be finding scorers.

Cook led Hamilton County in scoring with a 23.3 average and she hit 55 shots from 3-point range.

That was last season. Cook has graduated. So has Kiley Walters, who averaged 8.8 points a game.

Hello, Caitlyn Hays. Hello, Taylor Boyd.

Hays and Boyd are coming off good seasons and now could be the big guns in the Lady Huskies' attack. As a junior, Hays averaged 9.4 points a game. As a freshman, Boyd, a 6-2 center, scored at a 9.0 clip and was second to Cook (7.3) in rebounds (6.8).

"We're looking for scorers," Fernung said last evening while entertaining his players at a summer-ending cookout on the Fernung farm.

"We've kind of had an old fashion summer," said the coach. "Lots of time in the weight room; lots of time in open gym. We've really hit the weights hard. We need to get stronger."

This summer, Hays has been a surprise.

"I told her that last night," Fernung agreed. "She shot the ball well for us last season, but now she has become, as a senior, the team leader on what will be a very young team."

Last season, Hays hit 60 3-pointers, a school record.

"She is an athlete," Fernung said, "a good volleyball player."

The volleyball/basketball combination in Indiana has become somewhat of a concern since the IHSAA has extended the volleyball season an extra week. Teams eliminated in the sectional will send their volleyball players to basketball sooner than teams which advance in the tourney.

"We only have three volleyball players on the basketball team," Fernung said. "We'll work through it."

Boyd, with another year of experience, maturity and strength, will enter a sophomore season in which she will be counted on more in the scoring column.

"We haven't seen Boyd much this summer," Fernung said. "She has played lots of AAU basketball. But, that's good. AAU will help her be a better player."

Heights, actually, was a young team last season with only two seniors. More will be expected from players such as junior Amy Griffey, junior Brianna Henson, sophomore Ashton Runner and junior Logan Wiley. Griffey averaged 2.8 points; Henson 1.9; and Runner 3.1. Griffey was a starter last season.

"Griffey has spent time in the weight room this summer, and has gotten stronger and is a better player," said Fernung.

Heights also has a good incoming freshman class.

"We have three freshmen who could help us at the varsity level," Fernung projects. "But, it's a big step up from eighth grade to varsity basketball."

The Lady Huskies will play in a new conference this season.

"It will be stronger competition for us," Fernung said. "Tipton, Benton Central and Lafayette Central all are very good. We'll be driving more, too. Driving time will be greater, but the overall competition will be good for us."

Verizon IndyCar Series to run same-day doubleheader

The July 19 opening round of the Honda Indy Toronto was postponed to July 20 because of a rain-slicked 1.755-mile, 11-turn temporary street circuit, creating a unique same-day doubleheader.

Two 65-lap races -- a two-wide rolling start for Race 1 at 10:30 a.m. (ET) and a standing start for the 4:15 p.m. Race 2 -- will be contested.

Sebastien Bourdais, driving the No. 11 Hydroxycut KVSH Racing Chevrolet, earned the Verizon P1 Award for Race 1. It was his first pole since Sept. 2, 2007, at Assen, Netherlands. The Race 2 starting lineup will be determined by entrant points heading into the event weekend, which gives the Verizon P1 Award to Helio Castroneves. The driver of the No. 3 PPG Team Penske car takes a nine-point lead (he does not receive the bonus point for the pole) over teammate Will Power into Round 13 of the 18-race season.

"Obviously, we all wanted to get the race in today, but this was the correct call," said Castroneves, who qualified third for Race 1. "We really tried to start the race but it was clear that we were going to wreck a lot of cars. The PPG Chevy is very fast so whenever we start the race we will be fine."

The postponement creates the first same-day doubleheader since June 28, 1981, at the 1.522-mile Atlanta Motor Speedway when Rick Mears swept the Kraco Twin 125s. A Verizon IndyCar Series twinbill of shortened race distances was contested at Texas Motor Speedway on June 11, 2011. Dario Franchitti and Power were the winners of the 114-lap Firestone Twin 275.

After a 2-hour, 30-minute delay from the scheduled start, INDYCAR officials and the promoter group made the decision to wait for a more favorable weather forecast July 20.

Indians homer 5 times in big win

The Indianapolis Indians (55-47) homered six times, one shy of the all-time Victory Field era (1996) record, and pounded out 18 hits to dispatch the Columbus Clippers (54-48) 15-5 on Saturday night at Huntington Park.

Robert Andino (4-for-6) and Andrew Lambo (4-for-4) both launched two home runs as part of their four-hit nights, while Dean Anna (4-for-5) chipped in a solo shot during his own four-knock effort. Chris McGuiness also lifted a two-run bomb with his lone knock of the game to cap the longball barrage.

The Indians also fell just one homer shy of the Victory Field record for most home runs in an inning with three dingers in tonight's opening frame.
