Scheib simply got tired...

Who will be next coach?

By DON JELLISON

Reporter Editor

Lance Scheib says there is one huge reason why he has resigned as head football coach at Noblesville High School.

"I got tired," Scheib told the Hamilton County Reporter in an exclusive interview "I ran out of energy, and in doing that I was doing a disservice to the kids, to the community and to the football program."

Got tired? Why not?

When Scheib became a head coach, at Lebanon, in 1992 he was Indiana's youngest head football mentor. He remained at Lebanon for nine seasons and then spent the next seven seasons at Franklin Central. The last eight years at Noblesville.

Twenty-four seasons as a head coach. Lots of Friday night games. Lots of weekday football practices. Before all of that, Scheib was an assistant coach at Crawfordsville, Decatur Central and Kankakee Valley.

"I've always seen myself as a builder of programs," Scheib said. "We won at Lebanon and at Franklin Central, but not at Noblesville."

Scheib said for whatever reason he didn't have enough football studs at Noblesville.

"We've had good kids; hard working kids, but only four Division I players. In my first year at Noblesville we had only five players over 200 pounds."

Scheib said he never had second thoughts coming to Noblesville. No regrets.

School district referendums are on the horizon

OINING THE 1000 POINT CLUB

Bv FRED SWIFT

Voters in most Hamilton County school districts will be asked to approve a referendum in the next two years to supplement state funding of their respective school operations.

In the May 3, 2016 primary election Noblesville and Hamilton Southeastern will seek approval to essentially continue funding supplements which were approved by voters in 2010. Since these local taxing mechanisms have a seven year life, they must either end or go back to voters for extension.

In 2017 Westfield Washington and Carmel Clay Schools will seek approval for continuation of local funding previously granted by voters in their districts. Sheridan Schools are apparently considering a referendum, but have yet to make a decision.

In 2008 the state legislature agreed to take over funding of the operational portion of school budgets. And, at the same time the provision was made to allow public schools to go to their voters for additional funding through the local property tax if their voters approved. Tax increases enacted by referendum are not subject to statewide property tax controls.

The operations budget includes salaries, utilities and maintenance, but not debt service, transportation costs or capital construction costs. (Noblesville Schools are reported mulling the idea of a second referendum for capital programs.)

The amounts to be sought in next year's referendums have either not been established or at least not revealed. In the past amounts were in the $10-million to $15-million range. But, a new referendum could bring a request for a new and different amount.

In the coming months schools can be expected to mount a public relations campaign explaining the need for continued or additional revenue with a major focus on the cost of educating the everincreasing number of students. In addition to increasing enrollments most local schools are facing demands for increases in teacher and staff salaries.

Following the family tradition, Garrick Mallery's life followed Curtis Mallery, the early pioneer, as he contributed much in the same way as his forefathers. Garrick, now in his late 80's returned to Noblesville in weaving it into cloth and finally making it 1951 after Purdue. He help to start the Noblesville Elementary Football League, helped to build the new location on Monument Street of the First United Methodist Church, worked more than 25 years as a 4-H Leader and was a longtime board member and one time president to the Noblesville Chamber of Commerce. In the 1960's, Garrick organized the Hamilton County Health Department and the Hamilton County Soil and Water Conservation District. He gave land for White River Elementary schools that was a land grant signed in 1824 by President James Monroe and had belonged to his family just like William Conner gave land for the Court House Square. Believe, that what you see today in Hamilton county is a direct result of the pioneer settlers and those who came later to build something successful and sustainable. It is Garrick and Curtis and many more who worked so hard to build something great for themselves and families to come and all of us to enjoy. The Noblesville Christmas Parade is Sunday, November 29 starting at 2 pm. The theme is "Gifts from the Heart" and nothing could be more perfect than to honor Garrick Mallery for his "gifts from the heart" to his home town. On Sunday when you see Garrick riding in the Parade as the Grand Marshall, give him an extra wave in appreciation for his heritage and his heart that made Noblesville what it is today. Garrick's birthday is Dec. 21, an added gift!

Woodland Bowl to host...

Strikes for Special Olympics today

Lots of strikes will take place at the second annual Strikes for Special Olympics Indiana event, today, November 21 at Woodland Bowl (3421 E 96th St, Indianapolis, IN 46240) from 11:00 a.m. to 2:00 p.sm. The event will be hosted by Law Enforcement officers from around the state. The public is welcome and encouraged to register before the event at soindiana.org/strikes-for-special-olympics-indiana/ or on the day of the event at 10:00 a.m., until lanes are full.

"Each year we continue to grow this bowling event with even more participation from officers around the state. Our dedication to the community is the driving force behind our work each day," said Officer Josh Chapman of Zionsville Police Department and the chairperson of the event. "This same level of heightened support is reflective of our partnership with Special Olympics Indiana and the global Law Enforcement Torch Run movement," said Chapman.

This event is part of the Law Enforcement Torch Run® (LETR) program, Special Olympics' largest grass-roots initiative. Teams will compete alongside Special Olympics athletes in a two-game tournament to help raise funds to benefit more than 11,000 Special Olympics Indiana athletes.

The Law Enforcement Torch Run began in 1981, when Wichita, Kansas (USA) Police Chief Richard LaMunyon saw an urgent need to raise funds for and increase awareness of Special Olympics. The LETR program was quickly endorsed by Special Olympics, Inc. and the International Association of Chiefs of Police (IACP). Today, this program is recognized as the founding Law Enforcement Organization of the Law Enforcement Torch Run for Special Olympics.

Shannon hits 1,000...

Millers drill Brownsburg

By DON JELLISON Reporter Editor

When you're doing a number on a not-too-bad Hoosier Crossroads Conference foe and the home crowd is getting a little bored, it's always nice to stick in something special.

That's what senior star Alexis Shannon did in The Mill last evening as Noblesville defeated Brownsburg 83-67. With 39.6 seconds left in the third quarter and Noblesville leading 66-38, Shannon scored from the field to become the fifth player in Noblesville girls basketball history to reach the 1,000 career point mark.

"It's a nice accomplishment," said her coach, Donna Buckley, who also pointed out that if all remains healthy Shannon's senior teammate Katelyn O'Reilly also is likely to reach the 1,000 mark before this season is history.

In the win last evening, Shannon notched 24 netted points and O'Reilly added 20.

Also in double figures were starting guard Brooke Herron with 10 points and reserve guard Sam Salmon with 10 points.

O'Reilly also added seven rebounds and Emily Kiser pulled six.

There was never a doubt Noblesville would win its first conference game of the season, bringing its overall season record to 5-1. The Lady Millers were up 19-8 after one quarter, 44-22 at halftime and 70-38 after three periods.

One might ask how Noblesville, in a game like this, could be outscored 29-13 in the fourth quarter, bringing the final margin to 16 points. No, Brownsburg didn't improve that much, nor did Noblesville hit a cold spot.

Buckley, perhaps thinking about a long trip tonight to Warsaw, rested her starters.

"We played a good game tonight and we wanted our starters to get some rest," she of those victories was a double-overtime said. "Warsaw gave us a good game last decision over a good Ben Davis team. season."

Warsaw last evening fell to 0-3 on the year, losing 45-42 to Tippecanoe Valley.

In The Mill, Brownsburg fell to 2-3. One
