Primary Day is Tuesday...

Big contests taking place in Hamilton County

By FRED SWIFT
Besides all the election excitement statewide and nationally, we've got a very important and highly contested primary coming up Tuesday right here in Hamilton County. Local voters may be drawn to the polls by the contest for Indiana delegates to the Republican and Democratic national conventions, but they will also be faced with ballot choices at the local level. The choices for local representation may sometimes be considered less important than those for so-called higher office. Fact is that candidates chosen to represent us in the state legislature and county board of commissioners can have a greater impact on daily life than officials at the federal level.

Looking at the choices in Hamilton County on the Republican ballot, we have a contest for State Senate in District 20 which includes the central portion of the county. Incumbent Sen. Luke Kenley, Noblesville, is being challenged by first time candidate Scott Willis, Westfield. For state representative in the Noblesville area, Rep. Kathy Richardson is unopposed, but in the Carmel area Rep. Jerry Torr is challenged with Tom Linkmeyer, and Rep. Donna Schaibley is facing Greg Fetting. In northern Hamilton County, Rep. Tony Cook is unopposed. A contest for judge of Hamilton Superior Court 2 features David Najjar, currently court magistrate, against Noblesville attorney Jon Brown. The winner will replace retiring Judge Dan Pfleging.

In the race for County Commissioner, Dist. 3, incumbent Mark Heirbrandt, Westfield, is challenged by restaurant owner Bill Smythe, Fishers. And, in a five-way race for three at-large seats on the County Council, incumbents Rick McKinney, Westfield, and Brad Beaver, Noblesville, face challenges from George Kehl, Fishers police chief, Jeff Hern, Fall Creek Township trustee and Bill Dennis, Westfield area retiree. The council contest is seen as a fight for control of the council with Beaver and McKinney essentially being opposed by Kehl and Hern with Dennis looking for the third seat.

Grandma's rules of tweeting, posting and texting

By JANET HART LEONARD

Social media...you gotta love it, or maybe not. It's faster than a Breaking News Bulletin on CNN. It's the way many of us get the news on a daily basis. I only do Facebook. I don't understand nor do I have time for Twitter, Instagram, Snapchat or any of the other stuff that my older grandmunchkins try to explain to me. This week a lawsuit against Snapchat was filed because an Uber driver was seriously injured in an accident when a young lady was using a new Snapchat app while she drove 107 miles per hour. She wrecked into his car, seriously injuring herself and the Uber driver. She took a selfie in the ambulance and wrote "Lucky to be alive". The video she posted will be used in court. We live in a crazy world. I mean, SERIOUSLY? What totally astounds me is all these people who should have enough sense NOT to do something like post pictures or videos that they "think(?)" or hope no one else will ever see, but they do it anyway. Where has common sense gone? If you don't want something to be seen then don't post it, text it or Tweet it. It's not rocket science. Thou shalt not take pictures of anything that could come back to bite you, hurt you or embarrass you. An athlete was up for the NFL draft this week and just moments before he was to be selected as a top pick, a video came out on his Twitter account and he suddenly twittered away millions of

Noblesville Police promotes two officers

On April 20, Noblesville Police Chief Kevin Jowitt petitioned the Police Merit Commission to consider two promotions within the Noblesville Police Department. Master Patrolman Corey Everhart was recommended for promotion to the rank of sergeant and Sergeant Andrew Reiss was recommended for promotion to the rank of lieutenant. The Commission subsequently voted to approve the recommendations during their regularly scheduled monthly meeting. Both promotions became effective on April 25. Prior to being hired by the Noblesville Police Department, Sgt. Everhart served in the United States Army and Marine Corps. He was hired by the NPD in January of 1996. Since being hired, he has been assigned to patrol duties in the Patrol Division. In addition to patrol duties, Sgt. Everhart is also a team leader on the Emergency Services Unit. Prior to being hired by the Noblesville Police Department, Lt. Reiss served 13 years with the Frankfort Police Department. He was hired by the NPD in January of 2007. Since being hired, he has been assigned to patrol duties in the Patrol Division. In addition to patrol duties, Lt. Reiss is also a firearms instructor, accident reconstructionist and drug recognition expert. As a result of the promotions, Sgt. Everhart and Lt. Reiss will remain in the Patrol Division and will be responsible for the supervisory and management functions of their assigned shift(s). They will also continue their involvement in the aforementioned specialized areas and units. Advancement to the rank of sergeant and lieutenant are merit promotions within the Noblesville Police Department. Patrol officers and detectives interested in being considered for promotion to the rank of sergeant must submit to a formal promotion process. The process is comprised of a number of components to include a written examination, oral interview, assessment exercises, and a review of past performance. The process is extremely competitive and is administered every two years in order to establish an eligibility list. A one-year probationary period is required of all officers who are promoted. After all the necessary requirements have been satisfied, officers holding the rank of sergeant are then eligible to participate in the promotion process to become a lieutenant.

Noblesville will be ...

An extension of Indy

Editor's Note: This is the second in a series of Sunday articles meant to inform our readers of the history of Hamilton County. This article was published in the 1988 Noblesville Daily Ledger, as the newspaper celebrated its 100th anniversary. It includes predictions of the future from a prominent panel of Hamilton County leaders which was assembled by Editor James T. Neal. Along with Neal, the panel included local politician and school teacher Richard Dellinger, Ledger photographer Ray Streib, local artist Floyd Hopper, state representative Bud Hillis, Mayor Robert Wical, long-time doctor James Dillon, and Methodist Church minister Summer Walters.

The Noblesville outlook is much more optimistic than the national one. The biggest change will be in size. There is varied opinions, however, on how that change will occur. Dillon suggests that "Noblesville will be an extension of Indianapolis." This supports the metropolis concept. Streib views it differently. He believes that Noblesville will become a major city in its own right. He says, "Suburbs to the north and south of Noblesville will grow to the point that the greater Noblesville area will encompass all of the Cicero growth as well as the Sunblest area to the south. By-pass highways will be constructed to facilitate traffic flow."

Interstate highways may be a necessity if Neal's prediction comes true. He states, "The city will spread out rather than grow up. Housing areas will dot the entire township with the growth of mini-shopping centers." Because of this he feels "the downtown area will struggle to survive." Wical also envisions change. "Higher-rise buildings must come into existence, if only because of real estate values," he says. "The Courthouse Square as we now see it will change completely – all government offices will have gone to the outskirts of the city." As the population increases, how will the people of Noblesville change?

dollars. A gas mask, a bong and a hacked Twitter account made his first round top choice chances literally go up in smoke.

I was always taught that your sins will find you out. Well, in this day and age, there is a good chance that everyone will find them out.

What about these young girls who send pictures of their lady parts to their boyfriends who have promised to love them forever? Well good luck on them not sharing them with a few of their closest buddies. Sadly, they may just find themselves on the high school early morning gossip news.

If you don't want the world to know your business, then don't share it with ANYONE. If you don't want the world to see your lady parts then don't take pictures of them. If your gut questions anything you are thinking about sharing, then DON'T.

In the future a potential employer may see your wonderful resume but I bet a potential boss will check your social media accounts.

A good rule is that if you would not want your grandma to see what you tweet, post or text...then DON'T. And remember that someday you will be a grandparent. Would you want your grandchildren to see those tweets, posts and texts?

CONTESTS

Unopposed GOP candidates are county commissioner Dist. 2, Steve Dillinger; for county auditor, former Auditor Robin Mills, for treasurer is incumbent Jennifer Templeton and for surveyor, incumbent Kenton Ward.

The interest in local contests will be only in the Republican primary. There are no Democrats running for local office. As a result, the county offices will essentially be filled in the primary.

On both primary ballots, however, will be found school tax referendums for voters in Noblesville and Hamilton Southeastern school districts.

In Noblesville voters will be asked if they wish to extend the present local tax supplement at a slightly reduced rate of just under 19 cents per $100 of assessed value. School officials say the revenue source will allow continued academic programming, maintain class size and provide staff salaries.

In Southeastern, voters will decide if they wish to increase the amount of school support through referendum, going from the present 10 cents per hundred to 22 cents per hundred of assessed value. The added revenue will go to reduce class size and compensate teachers.

A big primary vote in this county could make Hamilton County a factor on the national scene. A big plurality here could swing the state for one of the presidential candidates which in turn could allow Indiana to be the state to make or break such candidates as Ted Cruz or Bernie Sanders.

EXTENSION

Not very much, according to Streib. “The same country-style atmosphere surely will be here in 2000,” he claims. “People may change, but there will always be those who are still close to the earth and convey the feeling of closeness to one another as it is now in our rural-urban style community of Noblesville.”

Dillon thinks the people of Noblesville will be “more effluent.”

Neal sees a change in the attitude of the people. He explains, “The people will feel dominated by government, they will be seeking isolation from the chores of business and civic responsibility.”

Wical thinks the people of Noblesville will have “bigger city ideas but a greater feeling of humility for fellow people.” They will be “more responsive to their fellow man,” he continues.

Most Noblesville residents will still want to be living in Noblesville in the year 2000, probably because it seems the best of two worlds.

“It epitomizes the type of life I like to live, the lack of pressures of living in an urban environment,” states Dellinger.

Dillon agrees. He notes, “The cultural advantages of a large city and the comfort and security of a small city.”

Admittedly, Noblesville may not be a small city for the year 2000.

The professional fields, generally and locally, will experience the same upheavals as the political and economic scene.

Governmental officials cite likely changes. Hillis believes the biggest change will be that members of Congress will be much younger in age and will serve less time in Congress. “Issues, of course, will have changed,” he adds.

Wical foresees “distribution of power and decisions delegated to committees by the mayor” as the biggest change in the mayoralty. The changes in Noblesville will force the mayor to be more responsive to the needs of the people. He also envisions greater “coordination between county and city government.”

Dellinger thinks the biggest change will be in the execution of the job. He explains. “The taxpayer will demand accountability through performance.”

Performance will be the key in education, too. Dellinger, a high school teacher, expects a “return to emphasizing basics. Reading ability will be one measure severely emphasized. This will require a deemphasis in the home on auditory stimulants such as television in order for the schools to be successful.”

The “religion industry” also will undergo change.

Rev. Walters predicts more Noblesville churches and pastors, necessary with the increase in population. He foresees “more diversity among pastors and churches, representing the various elements of society.”

Needless to say, the direction that religion will take in the coming decades is uncertain. Marvin E. Marty, noted church historian, thinks that by the year 2000 churches “will get more out of fewer.” He credits this to a rise in individualism and “do it yourself religion.”

Computerization is the prediction for most other occupations, involving mechanics, science and machinery.

In the field of medicine, Dillon sees computerization, encompassing both diagnosis and treatment, as the biggest change. He says that it would be a privilege to see that change.

Neal envisions a printing process that “will be highly computerized enabling editors to edit and design pages via TV terminals.” According to Neal, such a newspaper will be “more readable.” At the same time, he fears that “costs of publication and distribution will price the product out of the mass market.”

Streib believes that computerization of jobs will detract from their execution. He says, “Automated equipment will be the rule rather than the exception.” He says that laser photography and holography will be as common as four-color photography is today. This disturbs him. “When photography is lowered to simple mechanical or electronic procedure, there is nothing left for the creative photographer and those involved in photography at that time will not feel fulfilled.”

Another field closely related to photography is art. Hopper also predicts change. “Art will be even more a part of the economy than now, with many more people involved,” he says. Ha adds that there will be a greater market for art products. “The changes that occur in Noblesville will make art much more important.”

Values, too, must change with the passing of time. Certainly, they are the least predictable of all because they are the least defined in the present.

Rev. Walters expects “a quest for basic values – honesty, simple virtues and a desire for a sense of significant purpose.”

Others agree.

Hillis states, “We are just now beginning to see society begin to answering in a direction towards and more old-fashioned ideals. Young people are taking a greater interest in religion. Society as a group is becoming more conservative.”

Streib sees no other direction for society to take. “Morals certainly cannot deteriorate more than they now have,” he says.

Wical also looks for a positive revival. “Today, our society has been leaning to a way of double standards. However, I believe this will change to where all things will be for the people,” he says. “Religion will have made the strongest comeback of all.”

Exactly what does a Township Trustee do?

By RAY ADLER
The Reporter asked local attorney Raymond Adler, senior partner in the law firm of Adler Tesnar & Whalin and former Hamilton County attorney to discuss some of the Township Trustee duties. He currently represents neighboring White River Township and has had experience representing several governmental entities. Please consult with an attorney concerning any specific fact situation as the following is only general statement of law. Any opinions expressed are those of the author.

The Trustee has to run for office and be elected. Before entering his or her duties, the Trustee must take an oath, before some person qualified, for the faithful performance of their duties. The Trustee must reside within the Township. If the oath is not taken within 30 days after the beginning of the term, the office is vacant. The Trustee must file an official surety bond to guarantee performance. The amount of bond is set by statute. It cannot be less than $30,000. The official bond must be approved by the County Auditor. The bond is then filed in the office of the County Recorder. The Trustee may not take office until the bond is approved by the County auditor. The bond money would be used in the event that the trustee fails to perform according to law. Within 30 days after taking office the Trustee must designate a Deputy Trustee to fulfill the Trustee’s duties in case of absence or incapacity. Notice of the appointment must be given to the chairman of the Township Board and the County Sheriff. The Township Board sets salaries for the Trustee and the Board.

The Trustee must keep a written record of official proceedings; manage Township property; keep Township records open for public inspection; attend all meetings of the Township Board; receive and pay out Township funds; administer welfare assistance; perform the duties of fence viewer; provide and maintain cemeteries; provide fire protection; provide and maintain Township parks and community centers; destroy noxious weeds and rank vegetation; and appoint an attorney. The Trustee serves for a set term, typically four years. Essentially, the Trustee is responsible for managing the affairs of the Township and is assisted by the Township Board. Each year, the Trustee reports to the Board all the receipts, expenses, investments, and debts of the township. That report, once approved, is published in a local paper for the public to review. If you have an issue involving your township, contacting your Township Trustee is a good place to start.

Keep Noblesville Schools Strong

Noblesville Schools is a top-performing A-rated district and the only district in Hamilton County last year with all A schools. Since 2009, the district has lost almost $38 million in state funding and property tax revenue while growing by over 1,200 students.

The 2010 operating referendum, which funds staff and academic programming, is set to expire soon.

Noblesville Schools is asking the community to vote YES on May 3rd to continue the current referendum funding at a lower tax rate.

Voting YES will:

- ☒ Continue strong academic excellence
- ☒ Support teacher compensation
- ☒ Maintain class sizes
- ☒ Maintain high property values
- ☒ Attract and retain local businesses
- ☒ Lower the current referendum rate by 10.5%

For more information, visit www.milleryes.org

On May 3rd, vote YES for strong schools and a strong community!

Fishers wins first ever tournament

The Fishers boys golf team won its first-ever tournament in program history at the Brownsburg Invitational Saturday at West Chase Golf Club.

The Tigers finished first out of 20 teams with a score of 21-over par at the event, which was shortened to nine holes due to the weather. New Castle was second with 25-over par. Due to the shortened event and the shotgun start, the golfers were scored to par instead of shots.

Nick Fisher and Shivom Patel finished tied for third individually, with both finishing at three-over par. Trevor Richardson finished seven over, while Drake Anderson and Noah Chamberlin were both eight over for the day.

Westfield won its second tournament in as many weeks by triumphing at the Ulen Invitational, which took place at Ulen Country Club in Lebanon.

The top-ranked Shamrocks scored 309 as a team. Individual results were not available.

Noblesville, now rated sixth in the state, placed second with a 318. Freshman Clay Merchant and junior Parker Deakyne both led the Millers with 77s, followed by freshman Jacob Deakyne 80, junior Mitchell Compton 84 and senior Collin Kinkad 86.

"The weather conditions were not very good," said NHS coach Gary Sewell. "Despite that the kids hung in there all day and found a way to get themselves into contention on the back nine. Just like last week this field was extremely strong. The field included 5 of the top 8 teams in this week's poll. Westfield is number 1 for a reason and to finish second to them is not the worst thing that can happen to us. We have to keep working and trying to get better each week. We look forward to that challenge and I know the kids are excited as well."

Fifth-ranked Hamilton Southeastern tied for third place with fourth-ranked Bloomington South with a 320. Senior Nick Kuster led the way for the Royals with a five-over-par 75, which gave him fifth place individually. Senior Cedric McAree was second low on the team with 79, juniors Drew Alexander and Jake Hutmacher each scored 83, and junior Alex Bullington carded 86. The Royals also competed with two individuals, juniors Will Kirchmer and Luke Jolly, who both shot 81 on the day.

Southeastern has a re-scheduled match with Lawrence North and Mount Vernon on Thursday at Ironwood.

Freshman throws 1-hitter...

Sharp hurls 5-0 victory

The “pitching mill” continues to grind out talent, present and future, at Noblesville High.

Freshman Reese Sharp got into the picture by hurling a one-hitter in Noblesville’s 5-0 victory at McCutcheon.

Sharp fanned five batters and walked only two while hurling the shutout.

Noblesville got all the runs Sharp would need by scoring once in the first and two times in the second. The Millers added a pair of insurance runs in the sixth.

Noblesville collected seven hits, including two each by Michael Carmosino and Bruce Masterson. Carmosino drilled a triple and Masterson banged out a double.
