After three months...

Pre-trial Release program considered a success

By FRED SWIFT
After nearly three months into a program called Pre-trial Release, criminal justice officials in Hamilton County consider the program a success. The idea is to allow the release of persons arrested for offenses other than murder or treason pending trial if they pass a risk assessment. The releases are allowed for warrantless arrests, mostly traffic and alcohol related offenses, but can include cases of domestic battery, burglary and other offenses short of homicide.

County courts Administrator Ollie Schierholz says that of more than 200 pre-trial releases since June 1 only one person failed to show up in court for trial or hearing. While the program was not started as a method of reducing jail overcrowding, Schierholz says that has been a positive by-product.

The pre-trial release, still being conducted on a limited basis, came out of meetings of "a policy team" composed of judges, police chiefs, the sheriff, prosecutor, county commissioners, community corrections, the probation office, and Prevail, the administrator reports.

The only possible reluctance to buy into the program has come from some police officers and bail bondsmen.

If a person is arrested on the street for a driving infraction, for example, he or she is taken into custody and within eight hours given a risk assessment interview. If that shows no likely evidence of ongoing problems, he is released with a promise to appear in court when ordered to do so. Sometimes supervision is also ordered and specific notice to appear is given the accused.

Pre-trial release allows a relatively minor offender, often unable to post bond, to keep his or her job and saves the county the cost of housing the offender in jail sometimes for a lengthy period of time.

Officials are uncertain how many other counties have similar programs, but Hamilton appears to be a leader in this approach. There has been little if any publicity of other jurisdictions having such programs.

At the present time pre-trial release is anticipated to continue locally.

Mike Pence, Trump's vice presidential running mate, will be at the opening set for 4 p.m. The campaign office is located at U.S. 31 and Carmel Drive. Members of the public are invited to attend and hear Pence and his wife, Karen, speak.
The headquarters, where light refreshments will be served, will have yard signs and other material, and there will be sign-up for those who wish to volunteer in the campaign. The site is to be the state's major Trump headquarters.

INDOT announces road improvement grants

Lieutenant Governor Eric Holcomb joined INDOT officials Monday to announce that 102 Central Indiana cities, towns, and counties are receiving a combined $47 million to improve local roads and bridges through the State's Community Crossings matching grant fund. Lt. Governor Holcomb and INDOT officials made the announcement at separate check presentations to Avon Town Manager Tom Klein and Carmel Mayor Jim Brainard, Fishers Mayor Scott Fadness, Noblesville Mayor John Ditslear, and Westfield Mayor Andy Cook.
"Few states have invested more in infrastructure over the last decade than Indiana and these Community Crossings grants are another way we demonstrate why Indiana is the Crossroads of America," said Lt. Governor Eric Holcomb. "Communities in Central Indiana are showing a strong commitment to modernizing infrastructure by pursuing these grants and we are looking forward to seeing the projects that these funds will help complete."

The City of Noblesville was awarded approximately $500,000 from INDOT's matching grant fund. The money will be used to mill and repave four sections in Noblesville.
"We thank INDOT and the Governor's Office for providing these funds for infrastructure improvements across the state. In Noblesville, we appreciate receiving funding for all four of our grant requests," said Mayor John Ditslear. "This matching grant allows us to address two subdivisions and a heavily traveled commercial street that otherwise would have had to wait for funding."

INDOT's Community Crossings dollar-for-dollar matching grant (up to $1 million) provides nearly $150 million in funding to cities, towns, and counties across Indiana to make improvements to local roads and bridges. Applications were due to the state on July 31 and awarded Monday, August 22.
"We are presently trying to schedule projects as soon as possible with construc-

Jennifer Miller starts September 12...

HAND introduces its new Executive Director

Jennifer Miller has been named as the new Executive Director of Hamilton County Area Neighborhood Development (HAND) in Noblesville, effective September 12. Ms. Miller has recently served the City of Westfield as the Assistant Director of Economic and Community Development.

She takes the reins from the former HAND executive director, Nate Lichti, who went on to take a leading role in Indiana as Director of Real Estate Services with the Illinois Facilities Fund, a regional leader in nonprofit commercial development. He has continued to consult with HAND during this transitional period.

Tom Peck, HAND board president, commented, “While HAND has not missed a step during this interim period, we are very excited to bring an executive on staff who will continue the momentum of the past four years. It is very satisfying to know HAND will once again be led by a highly qualified professional who has extensive knowledge of Hamilton County and the desire to improve housing opportunities for its residents.”

Ms. Miller has an undergraduate degree in Natural Resources Management from Grand Valley State University, Allendale, Michigan, and a graduate degree in Urban Planning from Wayne State University, Detroit, Michigan. She earned her American Institute of Certified Planner (AICP) certificate in 2009.

For over 16 years, Ms. Miller has worked in local government as a Geographic Information System Specialist and Planner. Through the Hamilton County Leadership Academy’s outreach projects, Ms. Miller was introduced to HAND and its mission to provide a greater variety of housing choices for Hamilton County residents and this experience sparked her interest in affordable housing opportunities.

In her free time, Ms. Miller is a runner and triathlete. She and her husband are avid motorcyclists and the proud “parents” of two rescue dogs, Helmet and Radar.

“I am very excited to join the team at HAND and to contribute to the continuation of the creative and impactful developments and programs that serve the Hamilton County community,” she stated. “HAND has a stellar reputation for building quality, affordable housing and adding spark and character to neighborhoods. I am honored to guide such a valuable organization into its next phase and look forward to an exciting future with HAND.”

tion to begin by next spring,” City Engineer John Beery said.

Noblesville submitted four grants of a total estimated cost of $995,100. Each project includes: minor base patching and inlet repair; cold milling; wedge and level; new asphalt surface and pavement markings.

- Mercantile Boulevard between Cumberland Road and Pleasant Street. Estimated cost is $214,000 for 0.7 miles including a roundabout at Town & Country Boulevard.
- Fairfield Farms is two grants (north and south) that cover the entire subdivision. Estimated total cost is $417,200 for 2.3 miles.
- The back portion of the Pine Knoll Subdivision (west from the intersection of Pine Knoll and Pine Hill). Estimated cost is $363,900 for 1.9 miles.

The city of Westfield was awarded $1 million today from the Community Crossings Fund.

The funding will be designated for resurfacing projects, and to rebuild Tomlinson Road.

“We are thrilled to receive this funding from our partners at INDOT and plan to put it to very good use for our residents,” Mayor Andy Cook said.

“Our community will be better served by these enhancements to our local infrastructure.”

The funding comes to Westfield via INDOT’s Community Crossings matching grant, which provides nearly $150 million in funding to cities, towns, and counties across Indiana to make improvements to local roads and bridges.

The City of Carmel is receiving $1 million in matching funds to support the construction of a roundabout and additional road improvements at 4th Street and Range-line Road. The City of Fishers is receiving $1 million to modernize 116th Street between Eller Road and Interstate 69. Noblesville is being awarded nearly $498,000 dollars for multiple road projects. Arcadia received $193,986.50 to repave Main Street a several other streets in the town.

Cicero received a $365,397 grant, while Sheridan received a $399,699.02 grant.

Meanwhile, INDOT conducted a public hearing in Cicero regarding the construction of a roundabout at State Road 37 and Strawtown.

The project proposes a single lane roundabout with a central island featuring a mountable curb. A paved truck apron will allow larger vehicles, such as WB-65 tractor-trailers or more commonly referred to as an interstate semi-truck to maneuver through the roundabout. Curb and gutter will also be constructed throughout the roundabout limits. Construction of the project will require approximately 0.06 acre of new permanent right-of-way. A building is proposed to be removed in the southwest quadrant as part of the project which is currently occupied as a two story residence and the project will include the relocation of residents.

The proposed maintenance of traffic plan for this project will allow SR 37 to remain open via the use of a temporary signal and by constructing one half of the roundabout at a time. Through movements along Strawtown Avenue will be restricted during construction. It is anticipated that each half of the project will take 45 days to construct, therefore impacting traffic for approximately 90 days. Driveway access would be maintained to all local properties. School corporations and emergency services will be notified prior to any construction that would limit access.

In other construction news, Carmel announced that construction would soon begin on three more roundabouts in the city, including two on Carey Road.

Roundabouts are planned for the intersections of Carey and 136th Street (aka Smokey Row Road), and Carey and Hawthorne road, which is located between 136th and 146th streets. Construction on both roundabouts is planned to begin on Sept. 1 and last for around 75 days. Detours will be Keystone Parkway and Gray Road for north and southbound traffic, and 146th and Main streets for west and eastbound traffic.

The third roundabout will be located at Pennsylvania Street and City Center Drive. Like the other two roundabouts, construction is scheduled to start on Sept. 1 and last for about 75 days. The detour for north and southbound traffic will be Guilford Road, with Carmel Drive the detour for west and eastbound traffic.

Construction has already begun on the roundabout at Carmel Drive and Range Line Road, and work is scheduled to start on a roundabout at 116th Street and Gray Road next week. The Carmel Link website also said that construction is planned for a roundabout at Gray Road and Main Street this fall, but start dates for that project have not yet been announced.

provide updates on the progress of various initiatives – and if I’m ever at a loss for topics, fall back on bragging about how Noblesville is the best city in the State of Indiana.

First, I’d like to introduce myself.

It’s true – I’m a bit of an outsider. Spend 20 minutes with me, and you’re likely to learn that I come from Flint, Michigan. It’s a city that has struggled mightily after decades of economic decline. I mention my hometown, which remains close to my heart, because it serves as a powerful reminder of the duty we public officials are sworn to uphold. The recent crisis with Flint’s water system is a deplorable failure at every level of government that, rest assured, will never happen here.

The old days for Flint were not much better. Past leaders never looked beyond the auto industry to diversify its economy. Instead, the “company town” left the fates of tens of thousands of workers to one industry’s constant ups and downs – until many of those workers fled the state entirely in search of steady employment because there were no other industries to weather the downturn.

Fortunately, the people of Flint don’t know how to give up, and the story of their urban revitalization is still being written.

Since moving to Indiana in 1998, I’ve been impressed with the variety of industries and companies that created good, stable jobs for workers in Hoosier communities. Alongside Mayor Ditslear, I will work to ensure Noblesville continues to diversify its economy and seek out more economic development to bring more job opportunities here – so that the next generation doesn’t have to leave home to find successful employment.

Of all the decisions I’ve made since leaving Michigan, moving to Noblesville in 2001 with my wife Marne was by far the best. We came here as young professionals, without children, and were simply attracted to the downtown. We liked the friendly suburban community, the small-town feel that was connected to a larger urban metropolis where all the action seemed to be.

And over the 15 years we’ve lived here, as we’ve grown to love our adopted hometown, Noblesville itself has grown beyond its roots while still embracing its historic and authentic sense of place. Now, with two young daughters who are Hoosiers through and through, we know how fantastic the school system is, how many outlets for fun are right here to enjoy, and how truly fortunate we are to call Noblesville home.

It is my hope to bring this perspective to Reporter readers, and if necessary, serve as a reminder of just how lucky we all are for choosing Noblesville. Whether you’ve been a lifelong resident or a recent transplant, there is much to celebrate.

Until next time, see you on the square.

Food Rescue
saves meals,
helps hungry

Students all across the nation are coming to the "Food Rescue" to help people that are going hungry.

Food Rescue began in October 2007, when John Williamson, its Founder and Executive Director, began to take notice of the food that was being thrown away. Williamson said on the Food Rescue website (www.foodrescue.net) that his family "started picking up food at local restaurants" to donate to local pantries, and that small act has taken off from there.

"Since that time, Food Rescue has connected over 200 caring agencies with over 200 restaurants, and 350 schools resulting in over a million meals being rescued annually," said Williamson on the website.

Williamson did a recent interview with the Inside Indiana Business website, where he said that the Food Rescue program helps students to become "social entrepreneurs." The Food Rescue program uses a mobile platform to help compile how much food is being saved. In addition to being a waste of a resource that could help feed hungry people, food in landfills produce methane gas that is harmful to the environment.

All six Hamilton County school district are involved with the Food Rescue program.

For more information on the Food Rescue program, visit its Web site at www.foodrescue.net.

Atlanta Library celebrates centennial this weekend

On August 27th and 28th, a northern Hamilton County icon celebrates a big event: its 100th anniversary. The Atlanta Library, a branch of Hamilton North Public Library and an original Carnegie Library, will recognize this historic occasion and monument with a weekend of activities that include a library open house, live music, street dance, kids’ booth, special speakers, food, and birthday treats.

Events and children’s activities begin at 2:45 pm Saturday, with a pie and ice cream social at 6 pm, followed by a town-wide street dance at 7 pm. On Sunday, activities begin at 1 pm, with an open house, a presentation by Hamilton County Historian David Heighway, more live music, and a chicken and noodle dinner at the Atlanta Christian Church. Historical photographs and artifacts representing the library’s people and history will be on display both days. The Atlanta Library is located at 100 S. Walnut Street, near downtown Atlanta.

Lovers of libraries, books, history, education, historical buildings, small-town festivities, and local lore are invited to this weekend event and to tour the Atlanta library, still operating in its original structure. It is the last remaining Carnegie Library in Hamilton County still in operation. Though the Atlanta library celebrated its grand opening in October 1917, its cornerstone was laid on November 22, 1916 by the Atlanta Lodge of Freemasons. This ceremony was considered celebratory enough for school to be dismissed early so that students could participate in a children’s chorus.

Having the Atlanta library centennial anniversary during Indiana’s bicentennial is especially fitting for this Midwest state, because Indiana built more Carnegie libraries than any other state (164 by most accounts), with more than 2500 Carnegie libraries built around the world. On Sunday, Aug. 28, County Historian David Heighway will share more information on the library’s beginnings and steel magnate Andrew Carnegie’s intent and plans for these early “education centers.” As an immigrant who taught himself through books made available to him by his employer, Carnegie valued the opportunity and sought to help others desiring to work hard and educate themselves.

“Think of all the organizations, businesses, clubs, and schools that have come and gone in the last 100 years. Most entities don’t exist long enough to reach their centennial year. But Atlanta Library has. Atlanta Library is here serving the public as it was 100 years ago, and for this we are proud and thankful,” said Ann Hoehn, Director of Hamilton North Public Library.

Since 1982 when it was called Community Night, the Westfield Chamber of Commerce has hosted a community awards dinner and presentation to honor Westfield’s exceptional residents and businesses. In 2007, the event became known as The Lantern Awards and is held each September. Westfield thinking defense....

Visiting Cards are explosive

By DON JELLISON
Reporter Editor

Westfield’s defense, following a 38-17 victory by the Shamrocks in their season-opener with Harrison, will need to be ready for Game 2 in a home opener this Friday with Southport. The Cardinals, despite a 25-21 loss to Roncalli last week, put big numbers on the board.

“Southport is good, as usual,” said Westfield coach Jake Gilbert.”They are explosive on offense and have a Mr. Football candidate at wide-receiver.

“Our games with them have been extremely close and have come down to the last minute. It should be a great one,” Gilbert added.

Southport was explosive against Roncalli. Sophomore quarterback Eddie Schott hit on 13-of-22 passes for 196 yards and two touchdowns. Justice Demes caught three passes for 72 yards and Sergiey Slaughter two for 75 yards.

Sweet

Expected to be the big threat on the ground again this season, senior Andrew Mappes carried 20 times for 133 yards. He ran for nearly 900 yards in 165 carries last season.

That Southport team finished 8-3, beating Franklin Central 43-14 in the sectional and losing to Warren Central 54-14.

This Southport team has a new coach, Brandon Winter, a 2002 Cardinal grad.

Westfield, just as Southport did against Roncalli, came out smoking in its win over Harrison.

“We played pretty well overall,” said Gilbert. “Far from perfect, but we stuck together when things got tough and played physical throughout. We made some Game 1 mistakes that killed drives and we gave up a fluke play, but overall I thought we did a nice job.”

On the ground, Nate Froelich carried 11 times for 90 yards and Johnny Swidan 12 times for 71 yards.

As a team, the Shamrocks gained 197 yards rushing.

“Our offensive line played well, especially Chad Reeh at left guard,” Gilbert talked about that running game. “Johnny Swidan and Nate Froelich had very strong games on the ground.”

Westfield’s defense held Harrison to 112 yards rushing, although the Raiders did out-pass Westfield, 201 yards to 88.

“Defensively,” Gilbert continued, “Justin Frey intercepted a pass and recovered a fumble and Byron Hubbard earned two sacks.

“I thought we played hard, even though we had not seen what they were doing on offense,” said the coach.

“Our best player of the night,” added Gilbert, “might have been Will Harrison. He averaged 42 yards punting the ball; kicked a 47-yard field goal, and kicked a touch back.”

Westfield has split a pair of shootouts with Southport the last two years, winning 40-36 last year and losing 37-26 two years ago.
