

FIELDHOUSE

In addition to athletics, the facility will include an indoor/outdoor concession area, a second-floor mezzanine balcony overlooking the playing surfaces and high-definition cameras to bring visitors in even closer to the action. St. Vincent Sports Performance will be the exclusive provider of athletic trainers and healthcare for activities and events in the facility.

The Noblesville Fieldhouse will encompass 10 acres within the 203 acres of Finch Creek Park. Noblesville’s sixth city park is expected to break ground in late spring 2017. The park will be built in phases beginning with the southeast portion just north of the Blue Ridge Creek neighborhood development on Boden Road.

“Just as important as what’s going on inside, the Fieldhouse will be surrounded by a beautiful park setting, and nearby residents will have a fantastic amenity all within walking distance,” said Noblesville Parks Director Brandon Bennett. “For families of athletes waiting in-between games, they can enjoy Finch Creek Park’s active and passive areas with lots of green space. And, of course, Hamilton Town Center is just minutes away for shopping and dining.”

To help fund the project, the City of Noblesville will contribute $600,000 per year of new revenue from the facility’s property taxes and rental fees of the city’s Fieldhouse time and offset by the sale of 10 acres of land for $1 million. In addition, Noblesville would contribute a maximum of $200,000 of new dollars annually – a figure that Mayor Ditslear says will be driven lower as the facility generates more of its own property taxes to fund itself. City officials pledge that funding would not come from the general fund.

The Noblesville Fieldhouse will jumpstart the construction of the city’s ambitious plans for Finch Creek Park and will benefit local businesses and community partners.

“Our residents east of State Road 37 deserve to have a community place with amenities closer to home,” said Mayor Ditslear. “Had the land remained only a city park, there would be zero property tax dollars generated, so this project nearly pays for itself. Meanwhile, there is a direct benefit to our community and for our residents that you can’t put a dollar figure on.”

The burden of building and operating the facility, and staffing its operations, falls on the private owner-operator. Card anticipates 350 part-time workers would be needed for staffing tournaments as well as retail and restaurant operations, and 40 full-time employees for management, coaching, sports performance and training, finance, marketing and information technology positions.

The city is contributing a portion of its own rental time of the facility during the week, which creates the public investment that guarantees the facility remains available for rent by sports teams and residents and programming for the community by the parks department.

“We were adamant from the beginning that our local sports clubs and Noblesville children have the opportunity to play at the Fieldhouse,” said Bennett. “That’s why we’ve ensured Noblesville teams have dedicated court and field time at a reduced rate. And we wanted our community partners to benefit as well, which is why we encouraged the Fieldhouse to work with the Boys & Girls Club. This project will benefit everyone and serve as a game changer for the lucrative youth sports market in our area.”

In a separate agreement that starts in January, the Fieldhouse also will begin working with the Boys & Girls Club of Noblesville, through an arrangement that allows them the ability to rent court space on the weekends.

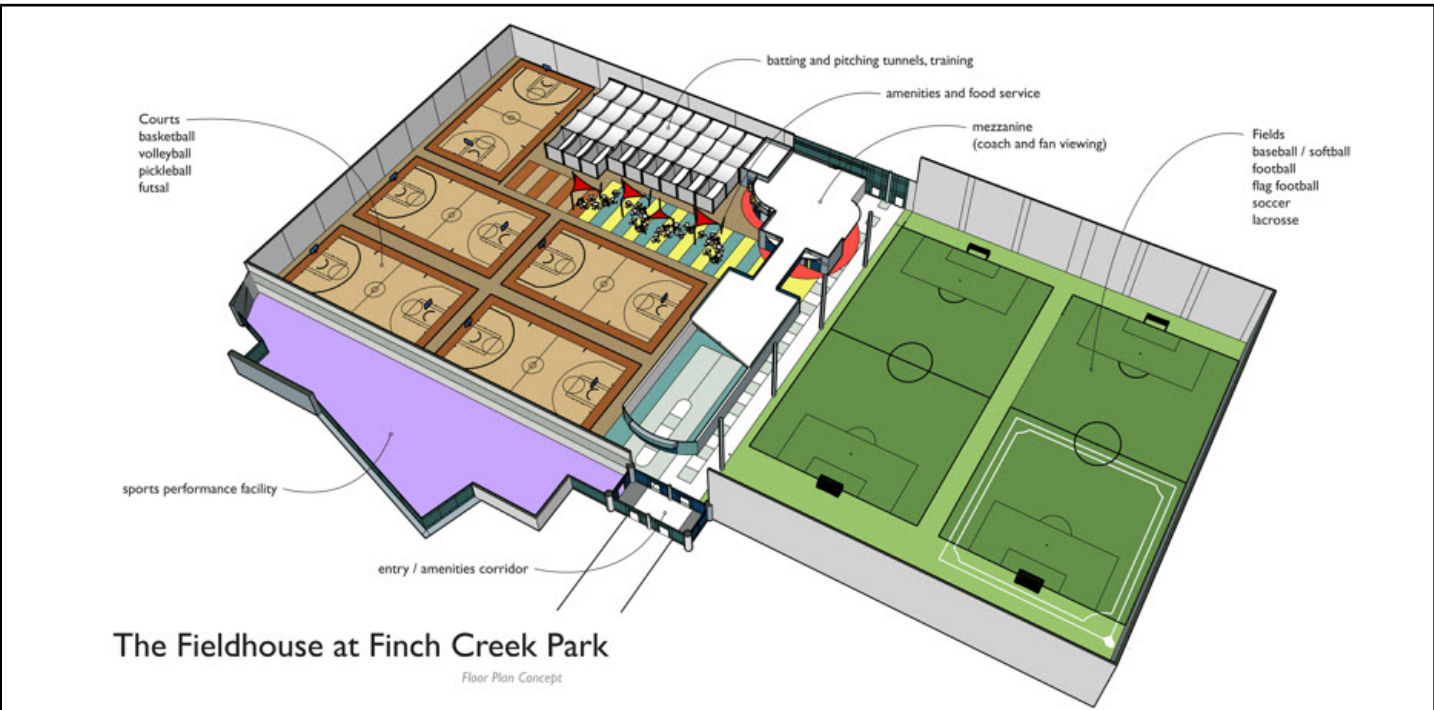

“Our mission is to inspire and enable the young people of Noblesville to reach their full potential – and athletics is one area our programming focuses on,” said Becky Terry, executive director of the Boys & Girls

COUNTY LINE

Here, I think is what has done it: There are expectations at home where most parents encourage or even demand that their kids excel whether it be in the classroom, in athletics or both. There is also a history of success where every student is aware that those who came before were by-and-large achievers. And, there’s a community organization named the Carmel Dad’s Club which enrolls an amazing 11,000 youngsters to encourage good personal relations, sports-manship and, of course, winning.

I graduated from Carmel many years ago, and as a result am still biased, but I think the basic reasoning is accurate. I’ve watched the situation develop over the years, and am impressed with the success, and what has led to it, as I think many less biased folks are as well.

Club of Noblesville. “By partnering with the Noblesville Fieldhouse at Finch Creek Park, we can better fulfill our mission, strengthen our financial base and we are excited about potential future opportunities to engage more with parents and kids on the east side.”

This rental strategy protects the essential youth and community programs provided by the Boys & Girls Club while ensuring enough courts are available for major regional tournaments on the weekends.

As part of the Fieldhouse’s deal with the city, Noblesville is extending its own partnership with Ivy Tech to include the community college’s two courts as part of the rental agreement for Fieldhouse tournaments.

City of Noblesville officials see their effort as further support for making Hamilton County a major powerhouse in youth sports to attract major youth sports tournaments.

“Together, we can attract tournaments that might otherwise go to Chicago, and instead, keep those tourism dollars here in Hamilton County,” said Ditslear.

The Noblesville Common Council will consider the city’s proposal at its December 6 meeting. The meeting will begin at 7 p.m.
