Faith greater than fear

JANET HART LEONARD
From the Heart

What if the worst that could happen ... happens?

Been there. Survived it.

Anxiety. Worry. Fear. Anticipation. So many unknowns.

Phil Heller, one of the pastors at White River Christian Church, gave a sermon last Sunday that explained fear of the unknown so well.

He wrapped so many feelings in a nutshell … well, actually, in a backpack.

He said that it is on our journey through difficult times in our life that we begin collecting rocks (worries) and place them in a backpack. Eventually, the weight becomes a burden that wears us down. We are affected physically, emotionally, spiritually and mentally.

Sometimes I am able to release a few rocks from my backpack. Other times I pick them up again. And then there are those times that I find new rocks.

Pastor Phil quoted Matthew 6:25-34. One verse stood out to me: "Can all your worries add one single moment to your life?" verse 27 NLT. Another one was verse 34: "So don't worry about tomorrow, for tomorrow will bring its own worries..."

And yet I tend to worry about the future.

Pastor Phil gave the definition of anxiety as the unpleasant, present emotion, current feeling of fear and inner turmoil produced by the uncertainty of the future.

Facing the unknown is scary. Questions fill my mind, especially in the middle of the night. Anxiety follows me around throughout the day. It is like a shadow that I can't out run and sometimes cannot pray away.

It's easy to say that you have faith when life is going along, smoothly, and you are just skipping along. Then you get a diagnosis that you were not prepared for. Worse yet, one that you were not prepared for when it is concerning your child.

I have two forever girlfriends who have a child fighting cancer. It does not matter that they are grown up. They are still their children. Fear greets them every morning.

I have a mother who is losing her independence and strength. It tears me up inside to see her struggle. And I know what happens as her final chapters are quickly being written. I don't like the last few pages of them.

Life. Is. Hard.

I grew up hearing about faith, not only in HAND looks at housing needs in Fishers

By LARRY LANNAN
LarryInFishers.com

When you assess the housing situation in Fishers, there are two issues that come up quick: Can the city's own employees afford to live in the city in which they work, and how can employers attract and keep workers when those prospective employees cannot afford to live in the area where they work?

Those were some of the issues explored in a housing discussion held Friday morning at Fishers City Hall, sponsored by the local non-profit housing group HAND. There were representatives of city government, the private sector, the One Zone Chamber of Commerce and other non-profits such as Habitat for Humanity.

One item revealed during the meeting is that the local Fishers firm RealAmerica Development is in the final stages of receiving approval to construct a low-income apartment development on Lantern Road in Fishers. Although RealAmerica has its headquarters in Fishers, and has several developments around the state, this will be their first project here in Fishers.

The Peach Truck: Produce phenomenon in Hamilton County

WISH-TV | wishtv.com

Fruit fanatics celebrated the arrival of a produce phenomenon this week when The Peach Truck arrived in central Indiana.

Semis carrying peaches from Georgia scheduled tour stops at garden centers, hardware stores and other retailers across the area.

A line of customers started forming at Salsbery Brothers Landscaping in Carmel three hours before the peaches could be purchased.

The owner of the garden center, Jeff Salsbery, said his team had prepared for hosting a huge crowd for the third year by spray painting temporary parking spots and calling upon Carmel Police to help direct traffic.

"It's controlled chaos," Salsbery said. "I don't care what kind of event we have; customer appreciation day, whatever, this will be our busiest day in the parking lot."

Rick Haley, the tour director for The Peach Truck said each stop in Indiana had attracted a thousand people or more.

"We take fresh peaches straight from the farm right to the public, right to you guys, within 48 hours and you can taste the difference. That's why we serve thousands and thousands of customers," Haley told News 8's Drew Blair during Daybreak.

Community makes cards to welcome incoming Noblesville West students

By ELIZABETH CHOI
WISH-TV | wishtv.com

A Noblesville community center invited members of the community to encourage students who will enter sixth grade soon at Noblesville West Middle School, where a May 25 school shooting sent a teacher and a student to the hospital.

Wood

Angel

Peabody

Beth Wood of Kaleidoscope Krossing on Wednesday began hosting a three-day card-making event at its 8th Street location.

"This one says, 'I wish you all the best going into 6th grade. Have an awesome year,'" said Alison Angel, an eighth-grader at Noblesville West Middle School.

"It's always a big change going to a new school because the atmospheres of all the schools are different," said Angel.

Incoming students will face the anxiety and fear that follow a school shooting.

"It would make the transition going into middle school more difficult," said Angel.

"It was still one of the worst days of my life, and I'm sure so many others as well. It was very personal to me, and I wanted to do what we could to make a difference," said Wood, whose daughter is a Noblesville West student.

She hopes to make a difference with the kind notes.

"Noblesville West is actually a really comforting place, and everyone is so kind and everything. So I just want them to know that," said Kali Peabody, a Noblesville West eighth-grader.

Faith

church, but sitting with my mother while she read her Bible. Even more so, I saw the faith that she had.

Life, for her, had been filled with … well, I'll just say that it was not easy for her.

Bad things happen, no matter who you are. Knowing you have a God who never leaves you, nor forsakes you is not just words in the Bible. It is a way of life. It is what faith is all about. Until you face adversity you cannot really understand the definition of faith.

Good ol' Mr. Webster says that faith is the belief in something for which there is no proof. I understand that YET I have seen what faith has meant to my mother. I have heard the diagnosis of cancer for my dad and then his healing. I believe in the power of prayer.

And yet, sometimes my prayers have not been answered the way I wanted them to be.

While I have had those times when the worst has happened, I've never felt alone. I have had some pretty intense conversations with God. I've told Him, on occasion, ENOUGH! I was at the end of my rope and there was nothing left in which to tie a knot. My strength was depleted.

My faith had endured a tsunami YET in the midst I was given hope. A word of encouragement by someone who had "been there." A scripture where I was reminded that even David, a man after God's own heart, struggled and cried out to God in despair. A phone call, out of the blue, from someone who said they just felt like I needed to hear that they were praying for me.

My faith is not something I take lightly. It is such a huge part of who I am. A woman after God's own heart, just like my sweet mama.

Though the waves cover me. Though the chapters of my life are not written the way I want them to be. Though I pick up more rocks of worry along the way. Though ...

I know what the scripture says. I just have to read it to be reminded. As Hebrews 10:31 says, "Remember those days after you had received the light, when you ENDURED a great conflict full of suffering," and then in verse 35 it says, "so do not throw away your confidence; it will be greatly rewarded."

Faith makes the rocks have less power and weight. While they may not disappear, my faith lightens the load.

And so I look forward with confidence because I have seen God work in strange and mysterious ways. My faith is greater than my fear. That is how I live my life.

working together and building characters than you will see sometimes in adult productions. It's a different level of energy."

This play is drawing on young actors from across Hamilton and surrounding counties.

"I've got at least four kids from Madison County," Davis said. "We have kids from Carmel, Sheridan, Lawrence, a bunch from Westfield, Fishers, Indianapolis and Noblesville."

Davis calls this a family-friendly feel-good show and she stressed that the parents of the young actors are an essential part of bringing this production to the stage.

"The parents are so important," Davis told The Reporter. "They have to get their kids to and from rehearsals, they help find costume pieces, and they have to juggle their own schedules at home and still get their kids here every night."

She has also asked some parents to help behind the scenes during the show.

"Our dressing room is in the basement of the theater," Davis explained. "In order to access the stage, you have to go out the front door and around to the back of the building. I have parents who will be in the basement and outside making sure the kids can move safely from one location to the other while under observation the entire time."

That will not be the case when Westfield Playhouse moves to its new location, possibly as soon as 2019. Keep reading The Reporter for details on the new Westfield Playhouse.

Barrington of Carmel receives high honor from American Health Care Association

The REPORTER

The Barrington of Carmel, an SQLC community, has been recognized as a 2018 recipient of the Bronze Commitment to Quality Award for its dedication to improving the lives of residents through quality care.

The distinction is one of three progressive award levels through the National Quality Award Program, presented by the American Health Care Association and National Center for Assisted Living (AHCA/NCAL). The program honors organizations across the country that have demonstrated their dedication to improving quality of care for seniors.

"We're humbled and extremely honored to be recognized by AHCA," said Scott Collier, chairman of the board, SQLC. "It speaks to our commitment to our residents, and our mission to provide the highest quality of senior living. Our philosophy focuses on the entire spectrum of our residents' well-being, from their physical and emotional health to their need for friendship and intellectual stimulation."

The National Quality Award Program, established by AHCA/NCAL in 1996, is based on the core values and criteria of the Baldrige Performance Excellence Program, which also serves as the foundation for the metrics-based AHCA/NCAL Quality Initiative. The Baldrige framework helps organizations across different business sectors improve organizational effectiveness and achieve strategy-driven performance.

"Our communities are always looking to the future and striving to offer the very best in quality care," said Teresa Bates, vice president of health services for Seniority, Inc., the managing partner for SQLC. "We truly appreciate the award, because it symbolizes the progressive actions we've taken to continue to be the best at what we do."

West Nile virus recorded in Hamilton County

WISH-TV | wishtv.com

Hamilton County has joined nine other Indiana counties this year recording mosquitoes with the West Nile virus.

Indiana has reported no human cases of West Nile virus this year, according to the Indiana Department of Health. The state reports mosquitoes with West Nile virus also have been found this year in these Indiana counties: Allen, Bartholomew, Carroll, Elkhart, Marion, Monroe, Putnam and Tippecanoe.

Most people who become infected with the virus do not develop any symptoms, according to the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention. People with certain medical conditions including cancer, diabetes and kidney disease are at greater risk for experiencing symptoms which include headache, body aches, joint pains or rash. Less than 1 percent of people who are infected with West Nile virus will develop a serious neurological illness such as encephalitis or meningitis.

Tips from health officials to avoid mosquitoes:

• Stay indoors from dusk until dawn.

• Wear long sleeves and long pants when outside during these times.

• Use insect repellent containing DEET.

• Remove all standing water outside the home.

Tips for paying for college while saving for retirement

StatePoint

Saving for retirement and college simultaneously is a balancing act that many families face. However, experts say these goals don't have to be in competition with each other. To manage both priorities, consider the following tips.

• Get started now: "Your greatest asset is time," says Mark Kantrowitz, bestselling author and financial expert, who points out that every dollar you save is approximately a dollar less you'll have to borrow, and every dollar you borrow will cost about two dollars by the time you repay the debt. "By saving money, you literally save money."

Make saving for both college and retirement a given with automatic monthly transfers from your bank account to your different savings plans.

• Don't mix apples and oranges: Don't use your retirement plan as a college savings fund. Distributions from retirement plans, even a tax-free return of contributions from a Roth IRA, count as income on financial aid application forms.

Save for college using a 529 college savings plan, which according to savingforcollege.com, offers tax and financial aid advantages not available for other savings methods. Like a Roth IRA, with a 529 you invest after-tax dollars, earnings accumulate on a tax-deferred basis, and qualified distributions to pay for college costs are entirely tax free. But 529 plans can be treated more favorably by financial aid formulas.

• Follow formulas: Maximize the employer match on contributions to your retirement plan. That's free money, so take advantage of it. As a general rule, Kantrowitz recommends saving one-fifth of your income for the last fifth of your life.

As far as college is concerned, he says to use the one-third rule to split future college costs: one third from savings, one third from current income and one third from loans.

• Look at all funding sources: If scholarships, grants and federal loans in the student's name fall short, consider private student loans or a private parent loan. For simple, personalized loan options, check out specialists in the industry, such as College Ave Student Loans. Using technology and expertise, they offer competitive rates, a wide range of repayment options and a customer-friendly experience from application through repayment.

Financial industry veteran Joe DePaulo, CEO and co-founder of College Ave Student Loans says that keeping your child involved in college cost discussions is critical to avoid becoming the bank of Mom and Dad, and that parents can be very influential in setting up a student for long-term financial success. "As a general rule of thumb, students shouldn't borrow more than what he or she expects to earn their first year out of school," he says.

DNR honored for special achievement in GIS

The REPORTER

A software firm has recognized the Indiana Department of Natural Resources as among the best in the world in using geographic information systems (GIS).

This past Wednesday, Esri presented the DNR with a Special Achievement in GIS (SAG) Award at the annual Esri User Conference in San Diego.

DNR was one of 180 SAG Award recipients selected from more than 300,000 eligible candidates from around the world.

The SAG Award recognizes organizations that are using GIS to solve some of the world's toughest challenges. Rooted in the science of geography, GIS gathers, manages and analyzes data, organizing it into visualizations using maps and 3D scenes.

Each of DNR's land-management and regulatory divisions contributes to its GIS program. Using data and analyses stewarded by agency staff throughout the state, dozens of map layers and online map applications are available for internal and public use. Public applications include interactive maps of DNR properties, outdoor recreation activities, flood risk, invasive species, historic structures and state-owned lands and parcels.

The SAG award reflects DNR efforts to create, analyze and share the best information on Indiana's natural, cultural, and recreational resources, according to the agency's GIS coordinator Mike Martin.

"Better data means better decisions, and GIS enables our staff to collect, analyze and share better data," Martin said.

TODAY'S BIBLE READING

And when he had gone a little farther thence, he saw James the son of Zebedee, and John his brother, who also were in the ship mending their nets. And straightway he called them: and they left their father Zebedee in the ship with the hired servants, and went after him. And they went into Capernaum; and straightway on the sabbath day he entered into the synagogue, and taught. And they were astonished at his doctrine: for he taught them as one that had authority, and not as the scribes.

New STEAM books to inspire learning, creativity

StatePoint

Keep the excitement of the new school year going by finding fun ways to encourage learning at home.

Consider introducing interactive and engaging books into your household that make STEAM subjects (Science, Technology, Engineering, Art and Math) more accessible.

Whether your children are reluctant readers or learning enthusiasts, these books will entertain budding scientists and inspire kids to make things and be creative.

Backyard Laboratory

Go on a journey of discovery in your backyard with "Maker Lab: Outdoors," which offers 25 science projects and experiments that can be done outside, helping kids develop science skills through hands-on learning.

Projects focus on Earth and the environment, plants, animals, weather, water and physics. Young scientists can build a wormery and learn about compost, crack rocks with water and learn about freezing and thawing, build and launch a water rocket to see Newton's laws in action, and more. Photography and succinct step-by-step instructions make this a must-have for every young maker curious about his or her surroundings.

Science Fiction Meets Fact

Ever wanted to move things without touching them, like a Jedi? Or grow a kyber crystal? Now that's possible with "Star Wars Maker Lab," a book which teaches aspiring Padawans how to become science masters through 20 projects – from making Jabba's gooey slime to making a glowing Gungan Globe of Peace. Fact-filled panels explain real-world scientific principles as well as the "Star Wars" science fiction from the movies.

Robot History

From automata created by Leonardo Da Vinci to modern-day androids and animal robots, "Robot" covers artificial intelligence (AI) throughout history. Discover cutting edge robotics, where science, technology and mechanical engineering meet. Through bright graphics and stunning photography, learn how robots work, how they're made, and how they help and sometimes hinder society. A thematic approach covers a range of subjects, including the most iconic robots in popular culture and robots in the workforce, as well as the future of robotics.

For Younger Makers

Young readers will love getting in on the fun with "Junior Maker," a cool supplement to classroom learning that encourages hands-on interactivity and play. With clear step-by-step instructions and photos, young children learn about nature, history, wildlife and space through activities, crafts and experiments. Projects include watching a homemade volcano erupt, building a storm in a jar and taking a trip back in time to see how the Roman legionaries conquered their enemies.

Real-World Inspiration

"How to Be an Engineer," offers clearly explained engineering concepts, and fun, simple projects, to give kids ages 7-9 the chance to put their STEAM knowledge to the test. Build a robot arm out of rulers; learn about jet propulsion with balloons; crush toilet-paper rolls to explore materials; and more. Read about how engineers use STEAM subjects and their imaginations to think critically and solve problems. Get inspired by engineering heroes such as Nikola Tesla, Mae Jemison, and Elon Musk.

To make STEAM learning fun and fascinating, stock up on books that spark kids' creativity.

Thanks for reading!

AlleyCats finish regular season with victory

By RICHIE HALL

The defense dominated, and the offense eventually caught up.

That was the tale of the game for the Indianapolis AlleyCats on Saturday. The AlleyCats had a subpar offensive effort in the first half of their regular-season finale, but turned it up in the second half to beat the Minnesota Chill 27-16 at Grand Park Events Center.

With the win, the AlleyCats finished the regular season 11-3. They also got some momentum in the second half of the game, which is actually a preview for Indy's first-round contest in the American Ultimate Disc League playoffs, which begin next week. The AlleyCats will again host Minnesota at 7 p.m. next Saturday at Westfield High School.

The Chill scored the first point of the game, but Indy went up 2-1 in quick fashion as Kyle Cox threw to Rick Gross for the AlleyCats' first point, then Keenan Plew assisted Kip Curtis to get Indy ahead.

Indy led 4-2 after the first quarter. Minnesota tied things up at 7-7 late in the second period before two goals pushed the AlleyCats ahead 9-7.

Indy led 10-8 at halftime. AlleyCats coach Eric Leonard said his team "played pretty undisciplined" in that first half.

"Frankly really terrible in the first half," said Leonard. "Second half we tightened up offensively and ran a little harder, made smart choices. That's the difference."

Indy led 15-12 late in the third quarter before scoring four consecutive goals. The AlleyCats outscored the Chill 10-4 in the fourth period, including three goals from Levi Jacobs, who would wind up the leading scorer with five goals. Gross added four goals and Connor Henderson had three.

Gross, Cameron Brock, Curtis and Cox all had three assists for the game. The defensive played well, with 16 total "D's," or defensive plays. Aaron Schwartz and Keegan North both had three D's.

The AlleyCats will now turn their attention towards the playoffs, where they will have to beat the same team for the second week in a row. Leonard is hoping that his offense continues its second-half momentum.

"They had a great second half, so we're hoping we can keep that rolling into next week," said Leonard. "We do have some defensive strategies that we reserved today, to show next week."

Connor Henderson scored three goals for the Indianapolis AlleyCats in their 27-16 victory over the Minnesota Chill on Saturday at Grand Park Events Center. The AlleyCats will play the Chill again next Saturday at Westfield High School in the opening round of the AUDL playoffs.
