Thursday's meeting first of three on bond initiative . . .

Westfield Washington Township holds public information meeting

The REPORTER

On Thursday, Westfield Washington Township held the first in a series of informational meetings to help educate the public about Project Ever Green, an initiative with the goal of securing and preserving public greenspace and passive nature areas to ensure a positive quality of life for future generations in the township.

Westfield Washington Township Trustee Danielle Carey Tolan scheduled the meetings in an effort to continue public education and transparency with the township's strategic plan and bond process. The meetings are set up in an open house style. One of the upcoming meetings will include a Facebook Live component allowing information to be shared with people who are unable to attend the meetings in person.

"I am very happy with the tremendous amount of interest that has been shown for Project Ever Green," Tolan said. "We are encouraged that people are showing up and engaging in conversation regardless of where they stand on the issue."

These meetings were scheduled as a result of a group who opposed the initial parks bond initiative and filed a remonstrance. A legal notice was published on Dec. 17 announcing that the township will move forward with the petition in favor of the bond issue to purchase land for parks. Beginning Jan. 16, the Township and the opposition will collect signatures in support of or against the proposed bond issue.

The Trustee's Office encourages township residents to participate in this process and the information fairs are being held to provide facts to help residents make an educated decision when signing a petition. Visit westfield-washingtontp.us for more information including informational meeting dates, times and locations once scheduled.

National speaker returning to Noblesville Monday for Diversity Learning Series

The REPORTER

Brooklyn-based educator Cornelius Minor is returning to Noblesville to continue the community learning series, "Going Beyond Diversity." The national speaker has been invited back by the Noblesville Diversity Coalition thanks to the sponsorship of Noblesville Schools as a follow-up to the event held on Nov. 29 that was attended by more than 200 people.

"Going Beyond Diversity" Part II will be held from 6:30 to 8 p.m. on Monday, Jan. 7 at Ivy Tech's Noblesville campus, located at 300 N. 17th St. Attendance at the previous event is not required to attend Part II.

In her December 15 column published in the Hamilton County Reporter, Jennifer Harris spoke with Minor after the first event. "It's an exciting time to be a part of what Noblesville is doing," said Minor. "I travel the country speaking and I don't know another community that is doing what you guys are."

The new forum will feature more of Minor's unique and entertaining approach that invites audience members into a judgement-free dialogue on equity and inclusion by breaking the audience into large and small groups for in-depth and thoughtful discussions.

"At all NDC events, including the community learning series, we strive to create an atmosphere that is welcoming for everyone," said Lisa Sobek, chairperson of the Noblesville Diversity Coalition's executive council. "People can come learn and share their experiences and ask questions without fear of being judged. We're all learning together."

As an educator, Minor brings the ability to connect with any audience. He often uses technology, music and social media to engage people of all backgrounds.

About the Noblesville Diversity Committee

Founded in 2018, NDC came together as concerned citizens, business owners, leaders of faith-based organizations and representatives from Noblesville Schools, the City of Noblesville and Noblesville Chamber to advocate for diversity, equity and inclusion in the community. Jim Ake will seek re-election to Westfield City Council

Jim Ake, 19-year Westfield resident and current Westfield City Councilman, will run At Large for another term.

During Ake's tenure on the Westfield City Council, he has played an integral role on several projects and initiatives that have made Westfield the destination city it is today. These include Grand Park, Grand Plaza Junction, Restaurant Row, infrastructure and projects improving State Road 32 and U.S. 31.

"I love Westfield. It's been a pleasure serving the residents," said Ake. "I want continue the progress we've made as a council. There are so many opportunities for residents and business owners across the city from arts to economic development. I look forward to speaking with residents in the coming months about their priorities."

The three areas of focus for Ake as he seeks re-election are:

- Schools: Adding additional safety layers including more resource officers, 'sub-stations' in each school and mental health initiatives.
- Public safety: Keeping Westfield families safe and providing public safety teams the resources they need.
- Responsible economic development: Providing ongoing transparency and future economic successes continue for Westfield.

Forgiveness is especially important in the sandwich generation

It was a cold Sunday evening last month. My family and I had just returned home from going out to dinner to celebrate my son Jonathon's 18th birthday. We were all in great spirits and about to enjoy his special donut cake from Rebellion Doughnuts, the heavenly new shop in Noblesville.

AMY SHANKLAND
Sandwiched

Then my phone rang. It was Mom. "Where are my keys?" she asked. I frowned. I had found them earlier in the day still dangling from her door and had placed them on the side table near her recliner. I had also teased her about not wanting to join us for dinner that evening, but Jonathon had picked a sushi place and my mother won't touch the stuff.

"They should be on the table right beside you, Mom." I replied.

"Well, they're not there anymore." I was perplexed, but figured they were close by.

After asking if she had looked around, I told her I'd call the staff at her assisted living facility to have someone come to her apartment to help her find them. I was certain they'd locate them quickly. Thankfully someone picked up right away and a nice woman reassured me they'd help Mom.

So I went back to lighting the candles for Jonathon and we all sang "Happy Birthday." I was amazed to realize that my son was truly becoming a man. As I finished up my Boston Cream donut and was devouring the last bits of chocolate, my phone rang again.

"So, I take it you found them?" I asked after seeing it was Mom.

"No ... they couldn't find the keys." I asked Mom a bunch of questions, perplexed at how the keys could have disappeared - and also, I'm ashamed to say, getting a bit angry. I tried to tell her they'd show up and not to worry but she became quite agitated.

"Okay, fine, we'll be there in 10 minutes," I finally said, not hiding my irritation at having our special celebration interrupted.

My husband John offered to go with me and was a Godsend. He reminded me on the drive that Mom was only five minutes away and this was not a big deal. But I still fumed.

We got to her apartment and literally tore up her living room. I went through her kitchenette and bathroom as well and felt like I was losing my mind. How could her keys have vanished?

Then I heard the sound of her television in her bedroom. I walked in and found her keys right in front of it. I brought them to her.

Mom's face fell.

"Oh, I'm so sorry to have bothered you," she said, the embarrassment and sadness evident in her voice and on her face.

And my heart broke.

All at once I melted and felt tears brimming. I took a deep breath, then knelt before Mom and took her hands.

"It's okay, Mom," I gently replied. "And I'm sorry that I got so irritated. This only took 20 minutes and it really wasn't a big deal. Besides, when we left, Jonathon and his best friend had moved on to play video games upstairs! So it didn't even matter that we were gone." I told her that I loved her. We both smiled and hugged and thankfully, all was soon right with the world.

This incident bothered me for the next couple of days, however. Like many folks, I'm not the best at forgiving myself. But, I'm human. Being in the sandwich generation is tough. And, like others in it, I may slip again.

All we can do is step back and try to see things from their side. And never be afraid to shower your family members with love and offer a sincere apology.

PREVAIL
Advocating for Victims of Crime and Abuse
www.prevailinc.com

I was born and raised right here in Noblesville. I grew up in a home without domestic violence or assault - it wasn't something I saw, or even heard about.

But when I was introduced to Prevail of Central Indiana, I was shocked by the number of individuals who are affected by domestic violence. In 2018 alone, Prevail helped more than 4,000 clients in Hamilton County. (Nearly 80 percent of clients are women and children.)

Prevail is strictly confidential, and since their core values include integrity and respect, they provide their services at no charge. Domestic violence and abuse are hard topics to discuss, so you don't often hear about them. But at Tom Wood Volkswagen in Noblesville, we're breaking the taboo and raising awareness for Prevail, an organization that helps families in Hamilton County.

- Mike Bragg, GM of Tom Wood Volkswagen in Noblesville

To help Hamilton County families affected by domestic violence and sexual abuse, you can donate the following items:

- Art supplies (for children to journal and express their emotions)
- Bottled water (8 oz. bottles, preferably)
- Individually packaged snacks
- Gas cards (many women have no access to funds after fleeing their abuser)

You can drop off items at Tom Wood Volkswagen in Noblesville, located at 14701 Tom Wood Way. You can also donate directly to Prevail of Central Indiana by visiting Prevailinc.org.

Noblesville mayoral candidate questions city's tax abatements

Dear Editor:
I'm spending a lot of time at City Council meetings these days trying to understand the reasons behind their decisions. A couple of weeks ago, just before Christmas, the council made three decisions on an issue that continues to confound me. Why do we repeatedly give tax breaks to area businesses when they decide to move, build or expand here? This letter is about tax abatements and I know tax policy can make peoples' eyes glaze over, but stick with me because I think this issue hits all of us in the pocketbook.

Corbett

Here's what happened: The City Council decided, unanimously, to give tax breaks to three businesses:

- Applied Intelligence Corporation, a small (10 employee) manufacturing firm, wants to move its headquarters here from Indianapolis and build a building on an empty lot on Pleasant Street near Union Chapel Road.

- Rockstone Investments, a small (10 employee) Noblesville builder currently renting space on Cumberland Road, wants to construct four buildings on an empty lot on Endeavor Drive, just off Cumberland Road, for its headquarters and for income property.

- Gaylor Electric, a large (hundreds of employees locally) electrical contractor with a 10-year-old Noblesville facility wants to build a new building just off Pleasant Street east of State Road 37.

All three asked the city to abate their property taxes on the new construction; that is, forgive a certain percentage of their property tax for a certain number of years. In all three cases, the discount starts at 80 percent and over time diminishes to zero. The range of time varies from three years for Applied Intelligence to 10 years for Gaylor Electric.

All three petitions quote a state law that authorizes the Council to grant these abatements if the new development is in an "economic revitalization area," which "must be a geographic area which ... has become undesirable for, or impossible of, normal development and occupancy because of lack of development, cessation of growth, deterioration of improvements or character of occupancy, age, obsolescence, substandard building or other factors which have impaired values or prevent a normal development of property or use of property."

You can see what the purpose of this law is: The legislature is giving local communities a tool to help revive property that has become "undesirable" over the years for any number of reasons. The problem here is that all three of these proposals involve virgin land in areas that are among our MOST desirable. None of the parcels is distressed in any way. So, how can our City Council justify giving away taxpayer dollars like this in direct conflict with this law?

The resolution goes on to say that "citizens of the City will benefit from the retention of permanent jobs, expansion of the property tax base, and protection of private investment ..." but we already have more jobs here than people to fill them, expansion of our property tax only helps us if we can actually collect the taxes, and I have no idea how this "protects private investment." A more accurate term would be "subsidizes private investment."

It's not like we don't need the tax revenue. We all pay a $10 trash fee every month on our sewer bills because our city leaders couldn't find the money to do routine maintenance on our streets a few years ago. We continue to pass referenda to finance our schools because our property taxes don't get the job done. Tax dollars are precious and ought to be spent where they benefit the most people. Seems to me these tax dollars are benefiting a very few people.

Our mayor and council have been handing out these abatements like candy for years. The council doesn't even question it; they just rubber stamp every request. I don't know what the cumulative effect of this is, but I have a request in to the city for a report that explains how much tax revenue has been abated and how much revenue we give up each year. I'm afraid its millions but I'll wait to see the figures and let you know what I find out.

It's tempting to think this is just a necessary cost of luring business to our city. Our economic development folks insist businesses will pack up and leave if we don't pay them to stay, or won't expand unless we give them an incentive to do it, or won't move here unless we help pay for their new building.

But I don't believe it. Businesses can and should expand or move on their own. They don't need this subsidy; we've simply trained them to come feed at the public trough by opening the public purse too readily.

I don't blame the businesses for asking. It's good business to seek every financial advantage available and when you see others doing it, it's simply too tempting to pass up, even for conservative business people who may be philosophically against this kind of corporate welfare.

But I do blame the current administration and council, because they are guilty of favoring a few businesses who are willing to ask for a handout over the Noblesville taxpayer, who is currently paying some of the highest taxes in the county and a trash fee on top of it.

Enlightened economists continue to insist that these incentives don't work for the common good, but enrich a few businesses, who in turn enrich the politicians who make it happen. It's a nasty cycle that needs to stop, but until you and I put an end to it, we can expect more of the same.

I'm trying to bring some accountability to City Hall, to change the dynamic so these decisions benefit more than just a few well-connected business owners. I want City Hall to start working for YOU, and I need your help to make it happen.

AG Hill: Latest court ruling is a buzzkill for 'First Church of Cannabis'

The REPORTER

The end of 2018 brought bad news for the "First Church of Cannabis," a group of marijuana enthusiasts who have spent much of the past three years arguing for the right to use pot as a matter of religious liberty. Once again, Indiana Attorney General Curtis Hill has prevailed in turning back this group's efforts to be exempted from Indiana's anti-marijuana statutes.

On Friday, Dec. 28, the Indiana Court of Appeals dismissed with prejudice the appeal of this "church," explaining that the appellants failed to pay a transcript fee as ordered by the court. Further, the court stated, "Appellants have failed to show cause why this appeal should not be dismissed."

Last year, these same marijuana enthusiasts failed to convince a Marion County court that they should be exempted from anti-marijuana statutes on the basis of religious freedom. They later failed to convince the court to reopen their case in light of the Right to Try Act, a recently-passed law that allows terminally ill patients to try investigational treatments.

Following this latest rejection by the Indiana Court of Appeals, the First Church of Cannabis could find itself

"Our courts have repeatedly upheld their validity. The devout worshippers of the First Church of Cannabis may find more fertile ground in another state to legally consume their favorite sacrament, but they won't be lighting up in Indiana."

with few remaining options. "Laws against the possession, sale and use of marijuana are designed to protect the health, safety and well-being of Hoosiers statewide," Hill said. Click here to see order from the Indiana Court of Appeals.

TODAY'S BIBLE READING

And he came by the Spirit into the temple: and when the parents brought in the child Jesus, to do for him after the custom of the law, Then took he him up in his arms, and blessed God, and said, Lord, now lettest thou thy servant depart in peace, according to thy word: For mine eyes have seen thy salvation, Which thou hast prepared before the face of all people: A light to lighten the Gentiles, and the glory of thy people Israel. And Joseph and his mother marvelled at those things which were spoken of him. And Simeon blessed them, and said unto Mary his mother, Behold, this child is set for the fall and rising again of many in Israel; and for a sign which shall be spoken against; (Yea, a sword shall pierce through thy own soul also,) that the thoughts of many hearts may be revealed.

The Hamilton Southeastern wrestling team won the Mudsock trophy over Fishers 41-30 on Thursday. The Royals used an early six-match win streak to take control of the meet, then held off a late charge by the Tigers.

Hot start sends Royals to Mudsock trophy

An early streak helped propel the Hamilton Southeastern wrestling team to the Mudsock Trophy.

The Royals beat Fishers 41-30 in the annual dual meet, which took place Thursday at the Tiger Den. Southeastern won six matches in a row at one point, and that allowed the Royals to weather a late charge by Fishers.

"We wrestled really well," said HSE coach Nick Brobst. "I think Fishers did, too. It was a good, hard matchup between the two teams."

The Tigers started the meet with a win, as Preston Putzback got a third-period pin at 195 pounds. But that was followed by the Royals' six-match streak, which put them ahead 29-6 halfway through the meet.

Andrew Irick won the 220-pound match by forfeit, then Crae Kunkleman (285) and Sam Crousore (106) each got major decision victories. Jake Simone won the 113-pound bout by fall, Jake Lemieux picked up a decision win at 120, then Gaige Lloyd was a winner by pin at 126.

Fishers' Josh Thompson stopped Southeastern's streak with a decision win at 132 pounds. This started a back-and-forth between the teams, as the Royals' Reece Luhmann won the 138-pound match with a first-period pin.

The Tigers answered with a victory by fall from Tyler Lindamood at 145, but Jackson Williams clinched the meet for the Royals by taking the 152-pound bout by pin. Fishers swept the final three matches: Zach Pairitz won at 160 by fall, Mason McCartney took the 170-pound match by decision, and JD Farrell was the 182-pound winner by pin.

"This season we've been hot and cold," said Brobst. "We've got real hot a couple times and won seven, eight, nine matches in a row, and then we'll go cold and lose a couple we shouldn't lose. So it just depends on the day." The coach said that happens with a young team sometimes, so the goal is for the Royals to be "more hot than cold by the end of the year."

The Royals will compete at the North Central Invitational on Saturday, while the Tigers return to action next Thursday with a dual meet at Lawrence Central.
