Proposed barn causes zoning controversy

By KATIE WISELY
 WISH-TV | wistv.com

Hamilton County resident Terry Henderson says the barn he wants to build will be part of his agricultural technology company, but some neighbors are divided over whether it belongs on the proposed land. Henderson says the barn is for his company, but those opposing it say the land is not zoned for commercial development.

The barn, with proposed named The Eagle's Aerie, could be built right off East 276th Street. The project has been in the works for years, and Henderson said there's enough land and trees to separate the business from neighbors.

But some neighbors have lined the rural road with signs opposing the development.

"It sets a bad precedent for other commercial developments to come to this area," neighbor Ben Cox said.

"We try to be really good neighbors," Henderson said.

Henderson owns both the land and Achieva, an agricultural technical company and communications business that specializes in virtual training. He explained the project to the Hamilton County Planning Commission in February. Henderson said the barn will be used for agricultural training sessions and community events.

"I think it comes down to truly not understanding that this is going to be an agricultural technology barn," Henderson said.

Neighbors say the land is zoned for non-commercial development. Planning Commissioner Mark Heirbrandt said the property is zoned with one of the county's agricultural designations.

"This final phrase says commercial agriculture purpose and I view this – as well as five other members that voted for a favorable recommendation on the planning commission – that their business is an agricultural business and fits into those requirements," Heirbrandt said.

"This business is actually a sales and marketing business," Cox said. "It has agricultural clients and that's a big difference."

Henderson said private functions like weddings could potentially take place at the barn.

News 8 obtained minutes from the last planning commissioners meeting, where Henderson was asked if he had previously held functions on his land, which spans more than 100 acres.

"We've never had a complaint about anything," Henderson said.

"No complaints from one party," Cox said. "Maybe people just lived with it."

People who oppose the project say they're concerned about the noise and traffic.

"This is a general disturbance and a different use from what the surrounding areas are and even if the building is disguised as a different type of structure, it's not going to fit into this area and what this agricultural area means to us," Cox said.

As development in Hamilton County continues to move north, Henderson says it's just part of the future.

But Cox doesn't want it near his land.

"It's going to be directly in sight of several neighbors that I think it reduces their residential property value," he said.

The Board of Zoning Appeals will vote next Wednesday. If the project passes, the barn is expected to be finished by October.

Programs at Janus help to create opportunities for making choices

The REPORTEER

As his high school career began to come to an end, Ben and his family searched for a program which would allow him to make choices on what he wanted his life to look like. The family's search led them to Janus and the Work Experience program which provides opportunities for individuals to explore and develop skills in a work setting which matches their interests.

Local businesses partner with Janus to provide contract manufacturing jobs such as sorting, labeling, packaging and product assembly work which enable Ben and his co-workers to be paid for the work that they complete. Products made by Janus clients through the Work Experience program are sold in retail outlets throughout the country.

It is amazing to see the sense of pride and accomplishment that Ben takes in his work.

When Ben is not busy working, he finds great joy in listening to music, playing basketball, completing puzzles, and going on golf outings with his friends. Everyone can count on Ben's engaging smile to brighten their day.

For more information on the programs and services provided by Janus, please contact Tim White at (317) 773-8781 or tjwhite@janus-inc.org.

NPD provides update on blood-stained car seat

The REPORTEER

On Tuesday, the Noblesville Police Department located a blood-stained car seat believed to be from a Jeep Wrangler and several broken adult teeth in the Lowe's parking lot at 16800 Mercantile Blvd.

NPD investigators now say they were able to locate the vehicle and its owner. According to police, it was determined that the vehicle was involved in a suicide investigation in Pennsylvania in January of this year. The vehicle was later purchased online through a third party without any prior knowledge of the incident.

However, police did not provide information as to how the seat and teeth ended up in the Noblesville parking lot.

'Making Moves' to inform public with Noblesville NOW communication plan

The REPORTEER

As construction begins on more Noblesville NOW projects, the City of Noblesville has created "Making Moves," a robust communications plan to share progress reports and updates. The initiative is an ongoing effort that will better inform the public about these transformative projects.

"Since launching Noblesville Now in 2018, we've laid the groundwork for several high-priority improvements that are important to our community's future," said Noblesville Mayor John Ditslear. "We're excited to kick off 'Making Moves' as a collaborative effort to help residents, businesses and visitors stay up-to-date on our progress with these improvements."

To ensure its success, "Making Moves" will share timely information so the public knows what is happening, when, where and why through the following outlets:

- New website – NoblesvilleNOW.com will have continual updates about each project. Guests may sign up for email alerts or view the newly created downtown parking map. Additional information about each project will be added to the site in the months ahead.
- Social media – Specific platform accounts with the username NoblesvilleNOW will provide timely, relevant updates via Facebook, Twitter and Instagram.

Fishers Council Connect discusses future of Gray Eagle Golf Course

By LARRY LANNAN
LarryInFishers.com

Fishers City Councilors Rich Block and Eric Moeller hosted their second monthly Council Connect session Wednesday morning, and most of the discussion centered on the future of the Gray Eagle golf course.

Ron Diamond, David Brackenhoff and Chuck Knox, all from the Gray Eagle neighborhood, made their case on what the impact would be to homeowners if the course closes later this year, as announced by RN Thompson in late August of 2018.

Brackenhoff and Diamond said homeowners paid a large premium to have their homes built along that golf course, and if the course closes, those homes could see a loss of 18 percent value, which would be tens of thousands of dollars each.

Block responded that the city is looking into anything it can do to be helpful to the homeowners at Gary Eagle, and local government officials are "sensitive" to what the residents want.

The homeowners at Gray Eagle want the current golf course to remain as a golf facility. One point of contention is the value of the golf course. RN Thompson has maintained the property has a much higher value than Gray Eagle homeowners believe.

The homeowners association and another group of residents have banded together in an effort to find a solution. One idea was to have a group of homeowners buy the golf course, but there was not enough interest for that idea to work.

Block told the Gray Eagle representatives that there have been talks involving Mayor Scott Fadness, RN Thompson and a potential buyer, but there is nothing to report on any progress from that front. Block says he is "encouraged" by what's happening on talks centered on the future of the golf course property.

The remainder of the session centered on talk of an indoor sports facility. A private sector group was pursuing such a facility in the Saxony area on Ohio Road, but that project will apparently not happen. Block said the city could pursue such a project in the future. Mayor Scott Fadness recently said an indoor sports facility is a major need for the city of Fishers.

The next Council Connect session is scheduled for 5:30 p.m. on Wednesday, April 25, at a location to be named later.

• Partner engagement – By partnering with Noblesville Chamber of Commerce, Noblesville Main Street, Nickel Plate Arts and Hamilton County, the city is collaborating on communications and outreach with other stakeholders.

Levinson construction to begin in May

One of the top objectives of Noblesville NOW was to strengthen the downtown by attracting more residents and more parking. Work on the $24.3 million mixed-use Levinson project in a public-private partnership with Rebar Development will start in May. The project will be built on the site of City Parking Lot No. 3, which is bordered by Eighth and Ninth streets, Maple Avenue and the alley south of Conner Street.

“By using these new communication resources, people can stay informed about the upcoming construction of our first downtown apartments in more than a century and our first parking garage,” said Ditslear. “We’re excited about the benefits this project will provide to strengthen downtown, but we’re also aware of the concerns people have.”

City officials and Rebar representatives have been working with downtown stakeholders and business owners ahead of “Making Moves,” to gather feedback and work on solutions that address these concerns. That engagement will continue.

“With any project of this size in an urban environment, there are bound to be some disruptions,” said Deputy Mayor Steve Cooke. “Our goal is to minimize any inconvenience to ensure our downtown district continues to thrive throughout the Levinson’s construction and beyond.”

Meanwhile, updates about the Levinson and other downtown projects will be included in the new Downtown Stakeholder e-newsletter recently launched by the Noblesville Chamber. To sign up, visit noblesvillechamber.com.

Downtown parking map and signs

One of the biggest concerns about the Levinson construction is the impact it will have on downtown parking. City Parking Lot No. 3 is expected to remain open until early May. Permit holders have been notified of where their temporary parking spaces will be located for the duration of construction.

To better promote available parking for the public, the city has created a new parking map, which is available on the Noblesville NOW website. Printed versions also will be available to downtown businesses. The map will be updated as additional public parking is added to current capacity. In addition, the city is creating new downtown parking signs that will identify each lot by color for greater visibility.

“All of these new resources through the ‘Making Moves’ campaign will highlight the parking we have available, but that perhaps the public wasn’t aware of before,” Cooke said. “Once the Levinson opens in 2020, I think the public will agree this effort was well worth it.”

I was born and raised right here in Noblesville. I grew up in a home without domestic violence or assault – it wasn't something I saw, or even heard about. But when I was introduced to Prevail of Central Indiana, I was shocked by the number of individuals who are affected by domestic violence. In 2018 alone, Prevail helped more than 4,000 clients in Hamilton County. (Nearly 80 percent of clients are women and children.) Prevail is strictly confidential, and since their core values include integrity and respect, they provide their services at no charge. Domestic violence and abuse are hard topics to discuss, so you don't often hear about them. But at Tom Wood Volkswagen in Noblesville, we're breaking the taboo and raising awareness for Prevail, an organization that helps families in Hamilton County. – Mike Bragg, GM of Tom Wood Volkswagen in Noblesville

To help Hamilton County families affected by domestic violence and sexual abuse, you can donate the following items:

- Art supplies (for children to journal and express their emotions)
- Bottled water (8 oz. bottles, preferably)
- Individually packaged snacks
- Gas cards (many women have no access to funds after fleeing their abuser)

Veracity IIR adds staff, continues to grow in Carmel

The REPORTER

Veracity IIR continues to grow at a rapid pace in Carmel, where this group of former federal agents are working hard for a private sector that continues to be under assault from a variety of threats.

“Our growth has been tremendous, which is good for our business, but is troubling on many levels for our clients who are trying to conduct an honest business in an increasingly dangerous environment,” said Doug Kouns, owner and founder of Veracity, who spent 22 years with the FBI before opening his new business.

Veracity recently added Senior Intelligence Analyst Tawnee M. Hinton to his staff of investigators. Hinton is an Intelligence Analyst with the United States Department of the Navy-Reserve, currently working for the Office of Naval Intelligence.

Another new face is Office Manager Alynda J. Neubeck, who joins Veracity with 35 years of administrative professional experience. She will use her project planning, problem solving and organizing experience to build procedures and processes as well as provide administrative support for our growing organization.

In addition to the growth in staff, Veracity is also expanding its footprint inside its headquarters on Pro-Med Lane. Since its opening in September 2018, Veracity has nearly tripled its business by adding new clients seeking intelligence, investigations and research on a variety of matters.

Kouns founded Veracity IIR with a vision of bringing the most experienced and accomplished law enforcement professionals, intelligence analysts and business people together to provide real solutions to real problems faced every day in a world where yesterday’s harmless internet prank has evolved into today’s info-tech hostage situation where companies are being blackmailed into paying millions of dollars in order to reverse the impact of a professional and vicious hack.

Kouns is a former Special Agent and Supervisory Special Agent of the FBI. For more than 22 years he served the Bureau in the field and at FBI Headquarters while conducting or overseeing criminal, counter-terrorism and counter-intelligence investigations.

The new staff members bring a variety of experience to a team that is already the most prolific of its kind in the business.

Hinton, who was most recently deployed abroad, was the lead senior analyst on several high-profile missions. Specializing in political and military intelligence in Asia and Africa, Hinton provided daily intelligence updates and briefs to senior military officials directly impacting the U.S. African Command mission.

Additional past employment included working as an Intelligence Analyst for several government contractors and working for the National Air and Space Intelligence Center in Dayton, Ohio, the Federal Bureau of Investigation in Indianapolis, and at Wright State Applied Research Center in Dayton, Ohio. Hinton is a 2003 graduate of Oakland City University, where she received her Master of Science in Business Management, and a 1992 graduate of Butler University, where she received her Bachelor of Arts in Psychology and English.

Neubeck recently retired from Eli Lilly and Company as a Senior Executive Assistant after 27 years of service where she specialized in building new organizations; respect for people through confidentiality and privacy; training, coaching and mentoring new administrative employees; and serving internal and external customers with kindness and grace.

The expenses of living with a disability can be costly and put an extra strain on finances. To help offset those costs, Hoosiers whose disability is present before the age of 26 may qualify for an Indiana ABLE account. ABLE savings accounts are untaxed and can be used to offset the costs of disability care without risking the beneficiary’s eligibility for other assistance programs, like SNAP or Medicaid. Carmel City Council President responds to letter from Mike Shaver

Dear Editor,

On March 18, Mr. Shaver addressed the Carmel City Council claiming Carmel taxpayers were unprotected regarding buildings not yet constructed in Carmel City Center. Unfortunately, before given an opportunity to respond, Mr. Shaver made the same claims in a letter to the editor the very next day.

Therefore, I thought it important to share the response I sent to him via email with your readers:

Dear Mr. Shaver,

I have reviewed your concerns presented to the City Council on March 18, 2019 and offer the following information to address your questions. I grant you that the project is not yet fully constructed, but through many years of experience with projects of this magnitude, the Carmel Redevelopment Commission anticipated your very concern and took appropriate steps to protect the Carmel taxpayer.

In the case the Developer did not complete the buildings on time or fail to build them at all, the CRC required Developer Guarantees (as referenced in your statements). Attached is a graphical representation of the multiple layers of protection for this project.

As detailed below, the Developer is paying the bonds as required by the contract (the first level of protection) in the following amounts. The next PIATT payments are due July of 2019.

7/31/18	$14,026.57
7/31/18	$17,952.44
1/23/19	$14,026.56
1/23/19	$17,952.44
Total	$63,958.01

In addition, the Holland and Playfair Buildings are going to permit this month. The East Garage Retail is under construction now. The Wren, West Garage Retail and Windsor are not yet under construction but anticipated soon. The Hotel/Motor Court is where the hotel is now under construction.

I trust this will alleviate your fears and please let me know if I can be of further service.

Carmel reader calls for investigation into allegations of potential bribery

Dear Editor:

Allegations that Fred Glynn, Carmel mayoral candidate and a Hamilton County councilor, was offered a bribe not to run against incumbent Mayor James Brainard must be investigated thoroughly and immediately.

Before rushing to judgment, citizens need to be informed and appropriate legal steps taken.

Rumors about, but facts are hard to come by at Carmel City Hall. If anyone was offering Glynn $140,000 not to run against the mayor in the May 7 municipal primary election, that person needs to be punished.

When an otherwise unremarkable bedroom suburb of a smallish Midwestern American city cannot conduct a squeaky-clean mayoral election, we are in pretty bad shape going forward.

I’ve jokingly referred to myself as an official non-mayor. And, I am. Along with 93,000 other Carmel residents.

Non-mayor or not, I suspect fire when smelling smoke.

Mike Corbett's fourth principle: Building a values-based community

Submitted

Mike Corbett has five key principles driving his campaign for Noblesville mayor, and each week he takes a deep dive into each of the five principles.

Over the past three weeks he explained what improved transparency looks like, how historic preservation can be an economic development strategy and how City Hall is letting down the Noblesville taxpayer.

The fourth principle is to maintain our small-town values, emphasizing responsible development with a preference for locally owned businesses and a dense and thriving urban core.

Let's take these one at a time.

Small town values are easy to define. Do you know your neighbors? Do you know the people you do business with? Are you connected to your city? Do you know its history, what makes it distinct from other communities? Do you have a social safety net? Can you age in place? Do you want your kids to raise their families here? Are you getting good value for your tax dollar and, if not, do you know how to change that? These are just some of the values common to small towns that become more difficult to maintain as a community grows. Government can play a role in fostering these values and I am committed to keeping them in mind as mayor.

Responsible development has those values as a driving force. Do our neighborhoods connect us to each other and to the services we need to thrive? Do they give us opportunity at all life stages: starting out, raising a family, retiring and living out our lives without being displaced? Do they offer opportunity for people of all social strata and income levels? Do we have a reliable and diverse base of business that provides good jobs? Is our development friendly to the environment? Does our development add value, both to our quality of life and to our tax base?

Why locally-owned businesses? Because they keep money and talent in the community. I have worked for both local and national businesses and I've seen the effect each has on a community. I appreciate the resources and opportunities that a large, out of town business can provide, but ultimately they are here to make money and that will drive their decisions. There's nothing wrong with that, but it's a different agenda than a business with owners that live here, work here, shop here, worship here and send their kids to our schools. I believe those businesses deserve more attention.

Finally, a dense and thriving urban core sets the tone for the rest of the city. Density done right is a very efficient use of resources and adds a vibrancy that is appealing to both businesses and residents. You attract new business by providing a capable and talented workforce and you attract the workforce by building a thriving and vibrant city. I will give our downtown the attention it deserves.

Endeavoring to tackle 'weighty' issue

SHARON McMAHON
Be Well

do feel that it is important to address.

Currently over 8 million people - primarily women - in the USA suffer from eating disorders, including anorexia, bulimia and binge eating. Fifteen percent of women ages 17 to 24 suffer from eating disorders, 40 percent of female college students suffer from eating disorders, and 91 percent of female college students attempt to control their weight through strict dieting measures.¹

Whether you are male or female, concerned about your own weight or not, I venture to guess that you all have a family member, friend, co-worker, neighbor or someone within your sphere of influence who has (or believe that they have) an issue with weight. Obesity is a critical health issue, affecting our hearts, blood pressure, susceptibility to diabetes and overall longevity; there is no doubt about that. However, most of us are aware that there is a preponderance of attention to the subject of a woman's weight and her acceptance in society.

While obesity is certainly a health issue which should be addressed by the individual and her physician, no woman should feel intimidated by not being a size 2 or ready to walk the runway.

In working with women of different ages, weights and concerns relating to both appearance and health, I find that those primarily concerned about the health aspects usually are more successful at losing weight and maintaining it. Keep in mind that a healthy weight is not necessarily the same as a body size considered "appropriate" by many in industries related to physical appearance, i.e., beauty pageants, modeling, acting, etc. Frankly, expectation relating to a woman's size is apparent in almost every industry and profession.

A person who does make a practice of eating nutritional foods, getting aerobic exercise via walking, dancing, etc.; who stretches for flexibility and strength trains to tone muscles and follows these practices regularly will maintain a healthy and normal weight in almost every case. There are some exceptions to this that would be identified through a licensed health practitioner and will not be addressed in this particular article. Additionally, anyone suffering from eating disorders will wish to receive treatment designated by their health professional.²

I would like to take this opportunity to remind all of the women and girls reading this that you have so much control over your appearance by your posture, your choices in apparel, your quest to be healthy and most of all your confidence! I will suggest that anyone can be stylish and attractive no matter your weight or size. It is up to you to show the "world" that you will be the best YOU regardless of your clothing size. Take care of yourself, get healthy, and enjoy life on your terms!

I sure wish that I could insert "Sharon McMahon" in the "Unknown" line of this quote but alas, I cannot do so, although I firmly believe this quote to be true. And this week I will endeavor to tackle a "weighty" issue without going down any political avenues - difficult to do given the interest posed by our current candidates and the press. I will admit that the candidates' recently "weighing in" has brought this topic to mind and I

TODAY'S BIBLE READING

Now it came to pass, as they went, that he entered into a certain village: and a certain woman named Martha received him into her house. And she had a sister called Mary, which also sat at Jesus' feet, and heard his word. But Martha was cumbered about much serving, and came to him, and said, Lord, dost thou not care that my sister hath left me to serve alone? bid her therefore that she help me. And Jesus answered and said unto her, Martha, Martha, thou art careful and troubled about many things: But one thing is needful: and Mary hath chosen that good part, which shall not be taken away from her.

Greyhounds, Huskies drop Friday games

The Carmel softball team lost to Cathedral Friday, 15-3 in five innings at the Cherry Tree Softball Complex.

The Greyhounds scored all three of their runs in the third inning, cutting into a 5-0 Irish lead. Sarah Goddard reached on error, then advanced to third after Megan Nichols hit a single.

Caroline Roop then hit a 1-0 pitch; Cathedral tried to get Goddard out at home, but she made it in for the score. Meanwhile, Nichols advanced to third. Brooke Bair then stepped up and doubled home Nichols and Roop.

With that, Carmel was within 5-3. But the Irish answered back with three runs in the top of the fourth, then added seven runs in the fifth inning, including a grand slam.

"It's early in the season," said Greyhounds coach Ginger Britton. "Every situation, obviously we're trying to learn from something. I think some of the mistakes that are being made in the last two games, we clean them up and I don't think those will get made as we continue on through the year. So it's a good opportunity to see what we need to work on and take it from there."

Nichols finished the game 2-for-3, while Roop hit a second-inning double.

The Greyhounds are 0-2 for the season and play at Westfield on Monday.

Hamilton Heights lost a wild game to Lapel 17-12 Friday at Grand Park.

The Bulldogs scored two runs in the top of the first inning, but the Huskies answered back with a two-run single from Meredith Diller in the bottom of the first. Lapel jumped ahead 8-2 by the middle of the third, but Heights poured it on in the third and fourth innings.

The Huskies loaded the bases in the third inning after Hayley Greene doubled and Adyson Baber and Faith Hittle were hit by pitches. Greene scored on a wild pitch, then Diller singled in Baber. Hittle scored on Alayna Baber's RBI ground out, bringing Heights within 8-5.

After holding Lapel scoreless in the top of the fourth, the Huskies took a 10-8 lead in the bottom of the fifth. Isabella Neiling reached on error, then Greene doubled her home. Adyson Baber got on with a base hit, and she and Greene were sent home by Diller's third hit of the day, a double. Alayna Baber batted in Diller with a single, then Kelsie Albright's base hit sent Alayna Baber home.

Lapel held a 17-11 lead going into the bottom of the seventh. Heights got one run back, when Alayna Baber's line drive scored Greene, but a fly out ended the game.
