Award-winning author visits Janus for special literacy program

The REPORTER

Remember your favorite book from when you were learning to read? Do you remember how it made you feel to enter a new, different and exciting imaginary world? You loved it, told everyone about it and read that book over and over again. Many people at Janus are now discovering the great joy found in books as they participate in the Doorways Literacy program.

Janus was recently honored as one of 20 recipients of an Indiana Humanities Novel Conversations Speakers grant award. As a result of that award, Doorways welcomed Indiana Author Award recipient Sarah Gerkensmeyer to Janus. Over 100 people, including several guests from the ARC of Greater Boone County, attended Gerkensmeyer's program and participated in a variety of literacy activities that included readings, special learning exercises as well as opportunities to speak with the Indiana author.

While the Indiana Humanities Council has Fairyville attendees will have the chance to vote for their favorite fairy house during the Fairy Home Tour.

Hundreds of families expected to flock to Fairyville in Downtown Noblesville

The REPORTER

From April 17 to 20, don't be surprised if you hear a stampede of little feet in the Downtown Noblesville area. That's because Nickel Plate Arts' Welcome to Fairyville event is back for the seventh year. Residents are expected to build dozens of fairy houses on the Fairy Trail along the White River riverwalk. Many downtown merchants will feature fairy doors outside their buildings in an effort to bring some magic inside. And fairy tea party events (complete with glittery crafts) will take place across the entire Downtown Square.

Nickel Plate Arts' Executive Director Ailithir

McGill can't hide her enthusiasm for the event: "I am most excited about our new event host locations: Hamilton County Artists' Association and Lil Bloomers will be hosting unique tea parties, Caravan Classes will be hosting some amazing fairy-themed crafts, and Shine Yoga will be hosting fairy-themed yoga." McGill added, "We'll even have events geared for grown-up fairy lovers this year – Noble Coffee and Tea will be hosting an adult tea tasting party on Thursday evening with storytelling provided by Logan Street Sanctuary."

Welcome to Fairyville has clearly enchanted its fans, with momentum building each year. Dozens of artists and merchants come together to bring the event to life. According to McGill, "Fairyville is special because so much of our community comes together to celebrate childhood, whimsy and nature. We let fairies take over our town and we celebrate all of the creative and mischievously friendly things they do."

The Fairy Home Tour will show off the community-built houses at Nickel Plate Arts, 107 S. 8th St., from Wednesday to Friday afternoon, where people can vote on their favorite house. Beginning Friday evening, the fairy houses will be placed on the Fairy Trail. Guests can hike the Fairy Trail from 6 to 9 p.m.

on Friday and from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. on Saturday.

"This event is for anyone who can embrace the whimsy of it all," said McGill. "I am always amazed by the diversity of people who love this program. Moms and their young daughters of course adore this event, but we also have an impressive number of grandfathers and teenage brothers who find themselves skipping along the trail."

Whether you choose to skip, walk, or even dare to frolic along the Fairy Trail, Nickel Plate Arts is looking forward to welcoming any and all guests.

Once upon a time ...

Beware, this may get schmaltzy.

It was Thursday morning when I was drinking coffee and enjoying a leisurely breakfast at Ginger's with my friends, Patrice Lytle and Shannon Plumer. Shannon asked how Chuck and I met. I told her and she asked if we ever argued.

I smiled and told her, "No, but we do disagree."

Perhaps it's our age. We realize that life is short. Life is meant to be lived and loved well. What a shame to waste it.

We both love being married. A love story was written for Chuck and his wife, Nancy, which lasted over

JANET HART LEONARD

From the Heart

50 years. A second love story began a little over five years ago for Chuck and me.

I had been single 14 years. Those years had many chapters that had lots of struggles and lots of lonely nights.

And then came Chuck.

I always say that it began ... once upon a time ...

Every love song that my ears had heard all those years was never heard by my heart ... until Chuck. I listen to them now and when my heart hears them, my eyes leak. Why? Because I still can't help falling in love with him ... over and over again.

Hamilton County seeking its Senior Volunteer of the Year

The REPORTER

The Hamilton County Council on Aging is accepting nominations for its annual Senior Volunteer of the Year Award, which recognizes seniors 65 and older who have positively impacted others through their volunteer efforts. Online nominations are due by April 19 at cicoa.org/senior-volunteer-of-the-year.

Nominees will be recognized at a luncheon May 17, and the winner will be one of eight finalists for CICOA Aging & In-Home Solutions' Senior Volunteer of the Year Award. The finalists, each representing a county in CICOA's service area, will be honored at a regional event June 28.

To be eligible for the award, nominees must have been 65 years of age or older by Jan. 1, 2019. They also must have spent at least three years volunteering after reaching age 60; prior volunteer experience also may be considered as a reflection of their long-term commitment to volunteerism.

Hamilton County's 2018 Senior Volunteer of the Year was Winnie Nestle, a Carmel resident who has been volunteering with PrimeLife Enrichment Inc. for more than 17 years. Nestle has helped plan and design the center's fundraising events since 2001. She also has volunteered with St. Mary's Child Center, Actors Theatre of Indiana, Riverview Health Foundation and other organizations.

The Hamilton County Council on Aging is one of eight local, independent councils on aging located in the counties CICOA serves.

Its volunteer members meet monthly to help define the problems and needs of older Hoosiers in Hamilton County and identify solutions.

DNR investigates dead fish covered in sores, fungus in Geist Reservoir

WISH-TV | wishtv.com

The Indiana Department of Natural Resources is looking into what some fishermen are calling an abnormal-looking fishkill on Geist Reservoir.

It is still early in the season for recreational fishers to be out on the water but it is not unusual to have fish turn up dead when the weather starts to warm up.

For people like William Briere, who have been out on the water training since March, they are noticing something different in the fish.

"The fish that you are seeing now have big red splotches on them and a lot of times those red splotches start getting that fungus you know, growing around them," Briere said. "And it is just odd."

Briere has been fishing on Geist Reservoir for more than 20 years. He says it is not so much the number of fish that turned up dead in this year's kill that is concerning, but rather the types of fish.

"Big mature ones that are several years old, for them just to die like that and have the fungus growing on them like what is growing on them, there is something going on," says Briere. "I am not a biologist but it sure looks chemical related."

The Geist Reservoir Coalition treats the area for algae a few times a year, but the chemicals used are cleared by the Indiana Department of Environmental Management.

However, there are other ways chemicals could be getting into the water and that is what DNR and IDEM are trying to figure out.

Contamination could have major effects on both the reservoir and those who fish in it.

"When you see the fish kills like that," said Briere, "that affects your tournament fishing. Nobody wants to go fish a lake where you can't catch fish."

The Geist Reservoir Coalition says it is not overly concerned with the fishkill but that there are many different sources that could have led to the contamination of the water.

As of now, IDEM says that there are no concerns with the water affecting people.

Neither one of us eats much so we often share a meal. I find myself ordering the vegetable that he likes and he orders steak the way I like it. Just because.

My favorite time of day is when we sit across from each other at the kitchen table and he drinks his tea and I drink my coffee and we read the newspaper.

I tell younger wives and husbands to pick your battles.

Ask yourself, "Will my opinion or action help or hinder or even hurt the relationship I have with my spouse?"

There you will find your answers to a happy marriage.

Ask yourself, "Do my actions tell my husband or wife that I truly care or do they say it's all about me?"

It's about actions as well as words.

My favorite word in the marriage ceremony is CHERISH. I love the definition that says "to remember or hold in a deeply felt way."

MIBOR endorses Aasen for Carmel City Council

The REPORTER

MIBOR Realtor Association's political action committee has endorsed Adam Aasen in his campaign for Carmel City Council's southeast district.

Each candidate was invited for interviews with their board and after a vote they unanimously decided to endorse Aasen, a first-time candidate for elected office.

Aasen, co-owner of Donatello's Italian Restaurant, talked about his experience as a small business owner and how he would keep Carmel's economy strong, which helps keep residential property taxes low.

"It's important to send someone to the City Council who has run a business and understands our business community," Aasen said. "We need that experience when it comes to attracting new corporate headquarters to Carmel. With a booming economy, the city is currently able to keep Carmel's residential property taxes among the lowest in the state."

Aasen talked about policy decisions that ensure Carmel remains a desirable place to live. He supports amenities such as multi-use paths and public parks. He said he'll prioritize public safety and road maintenance in every annual budget.

"Carmel is consistently ranked as one of the best places to live in the United States," Aasen said. "My goal is to keep Carmel great for generations to come."

I was born and raised right here in Noblesville. I grew up in a home without domestic violence or assault - it wasn't something I saw, or even heard about. But when I was introduced to Prevail of Central Indiana, I was shocked by the number of individuals who are affected by domestic violence. In 2018 alone, Prevail helped more than 4,000 clients in Hamilton County. (Nearly 80 percent of clients are women and children.) Prevail is strictly confidential, and since their core values include integrity and respect, they provide their services at no charge. Domestic violence and abuse are hard topics to discuss, so you don't often hear about them. # White River Fire catches the spirit of community service

Reporter photos by Stu Clampitt

On Saturday, the White River Township Volunteer Fire Department held the annual Dan's Fish Fry. White River Township Trustee Jamie Rulon told The Reporter that over 500 meals were served at each of the last two annual events, and only 30 minutes in, this year looked just as popular. Rulon said this event started in the 1970s. "It's great community service for our people," Rulon said. "Community service is everything to us." Funds raised at the fish fry help pay for fire department expenses not covered by the township. If you missed this one and want to mark your calendars now, the next fish fry at White River Township Fire Department will be held Saturday, April 4, 2020.

Teaching old dogs new health, nutrition tricks

"Once you have had a wonderful dog, a life without one is a life diminished."

—Dean Koontz

Some of you many recognize the author of the quote above; Dean Koontz is also the author of many science fiction-related books, but he is also a dog owner and writes his dogs into many of his stories. In fact, I sent him a copy of my book, "Sweetie's Scars: A Journey of Hurt, Hope, and Healing" and he sent back to me a wonderful letter and autographed copy of his delightful book "Ask Anna – Advice for the Furry and Forlorn" written by his dog, Anna, in her senior years!

My column this week will focus on health and nutrition for senior dogs. Some of you may recall that my dog Sweetie actually wrote a couple of columns for me addressing this topic before she passed at age 16 years. And please note that this column does not in any way supersede your veterinarian's advice regarding your dog. I will share with you my experience with senior dogs and other important information as well as the references for that information.

Older dogs are already more at risk for developing kidney and heart disease, diabetes, arthritis and various forms of cancer. The immune system also weakens with age, leaving older dogs at a higher risk of infection and slowed healing. For some, there is a genetic breed link that predisposes them to disease. To combat, or to at least mitigate the effects of these conditions, there are diets that have been specially formulated for special needs pets. If you aren't already doing so, you should ensure that your pet has a nutritious diet. Try to feed him a high-quality, grain-free, balanced dog food – an important part of helping your pet to maintain a healthy weight. Regular exercise can also keep your senior pet moving as long as your veterinarian approves.

Keeping your dog at an ideal weight can help to reduce the risk of many diseases such as diabetes, heart disease and even skin problems. Keep in mind, though, that while many older dogs are at a higher risk of obesity, some senior dogs may actually need more calories in their diet. They'll also need high-quality protein, as well as foods that are easy to digest. Look for a senior dog food that has at least 25 percent protein and moderate fat. You may also want to consider fortifying your dog's diet with

Be Well

DHA and EPA fatty acids; these could help a dog who has mobility issues caused by arthritis or a joint disease.<sup>1</sup>

For example, older dogs with kidney disease are fed highly digestible proteins; those with heart disease are fed diets that are lower in sodium content. Animals that have developed problems with brain function may benefit from the addition of certain antioxidants to their daily diets; and cancer patients often benefit from the addition of omega-3 fatty acids, along with additional antioxidants in their diets. Please, no table scraps!

Brushing your dog's teeth might sound silly, but keeping their teeth in good shape is an excellent preventative measure that will help to keep them healthy. Tartar build-up can lead to gingivitis, which can cause bacteria to get into the bloodstream – wreaking havoc on your dog's organs. Consider having your dog's teeth professionally cleaned; and be sure to stock up on teeth cleaning toys and treats!

And remember, just as our own dietary needs and activity levels change as we age, our beloved furry friends' needs also change and require your attention.

Our pets "live in the moment" – something we can all aspire to do from time to time. And, sadly, sometimes it is time for them to say goodbye, and our duty to work with our veterinarian to make sure that time is as peaceful as possible for them, and for us.

If you have recently experienced that or you just wish to learn more about my own experience with my dog Sweetie, you may order "Sweetie's Scars: A Journey of Hurt, Hope, and Healing" available through Amazon. All royalties I receive are donated to the Sweetie Rainbow Fund at the Humane Society for Hamilton County – a fund specifically set up for any dogs or cats who come to the Humane Society with extraordinary medical needs. And, please, choose shelter adoption or rescue if you are considering a new family member.

Motley Crue: A movement for American culture

On Sunday, March 24, I watched The Dirt. This modern movie based on the lives of Motley Crue made me want to dig deeper into their legacy, so here we are.

According to David Jeffries, author of the allmusic biography on Motley Crue, the dawn of a new nation began when Frank Carlton Serafino Feranna, Jr. changed his name to Nikki Sixx. Nikki Sixx and Tommy Lee formed Motley Crue in 1981 in Los Angeles and the band consisted of Nikki Sixx, bassist, Tommy Lee, drummer, Vince Neil, lead singer, and Mick Mars, lead guitarist.

Nikki Sixx was born in San Jose, Calif., under the name Frank Carlton Serafino Feranna, Jr. He lost his dad to divorce at a young age and he changed his name so he wouldn't have to be named after his father. Tommy Lee was born in Athens, Greece and later raised in California. Vince Neil was born in Hollywood, Calif., and in his teenage years, moved to Glendora, Calif., where he met Tommy Lee in school. Mick Mars was born in Terre Haute as Bob Alan Deal and he lived his life with ankylosing spondylitis, a degenerative arthritis influenced spine disease.

During their first months, the band struggled to find people to listen to their music, but after a while, they were icons. Motley Crue's first show was Friday, April 24, 1981. According to lead singer Vince Neil, there was a huge fight due to the crowd's actions toward the band members and that kicked off Motley Crue's long-lasting legacy.

One of the most intense tours Motley Crue went on was the Dr. Feelgood Tour of 1989-1990. Their world tour lasted from Oct. 14, 1989 to Aug. 6, 1990. The band members lived their best lives while they were in the band in the beginning. They lived a party lifestyle filled with drugs, drinking and women, all the while performing shows and trying to write new music.

JOSIE O'BRIEN
Sheridan High School Student

Their music changed the American and world culture. They were a huge feature on MTV and there are movies being made about the band even today, such as the recreation of The Dirt. Motley Crue consistently did crazy things that people gawked at but admired. The young, fun and unhinged nature of the band members influenced people to be original and wild. They influenced the United States with their "I don't care" attitude, big hair and bizarre fashion sense that framed the culture of the eighties. The intricate guitar solos within their songs and the high pitched voice of Vince Neil gave their music a different, dark vibe that showcased their alternative nature. Over time, they gained much success and they became an iconic heavy metal/rock band, but there were still issues.

Prior to the '89-'90 tour, Nikki Sixx overdosed on heroin. This happened on Dec. 23, 1987, and he was declared dead for two minutes. He was quite literally brought back to life inside an ambulance due to the actions of an EMT who injected two syringes full of adrenaline into his chest to revive him. After his overdose, Nikki Sixx proceeded to not use heroin anymore. He entered rehab in January 1988.

The rest of the band members also became sober after their manager canceled a European tour in regard to their physical and mental health. After all of the members of Motley Crue were sober, they released Dr. Feelgood, their most famous and successful album. In total, Motley Crue released about 15 full albums.

Their final show was on

New Year's Eve 2015 at the Staples Center in Los Angeles, the place where it all started. Now, Tommy Lee's net worth equals $70 million, Vince Neil's net worth equals $55 million, Nikki Sixx's net worth is $45 million and Mick Mars' net worth is $40 million dollars. Some of their most famous songs include "Home Sweet Home", "Kickstart My Heart", "Girls, Girls, Girls", and "Dr. Feelgood."

Motley Crue was one of the most fiercely intense bands to ever exist and their music shaped the lives of thousands, if not millions, of people around the globe, including myself. Ever since that Sunday, I have been listening to Motley Crue every second I'm driving in the car, doing an assignment for school, or just hanging out. The influence of Motley Crue's music is almost hypnotizing and they will forever be one of the greatest bands to exist.

Congresswoman Susan W. Brooks (R-Ind.-05) provided the following statement after voting to support H.R.1585, the Violence Against Women Reauthorization Act of 2019, otherwise known as VAWA:

"According to the National Coalition Against Domestic Violence, on average, nearly 20 people per minute are physically abused by an intimate partner in the United States. One in every four women and one in every nine men experience severe physical violence, sexual violence, and/or stalking by an intimate partner. Victims of these extremely painful and life-changing experiences live in every congressional district."

"Congress must work to break the cycle of domestic violence, sexual assault, dating violence and stalking in communities across the na-children, and provide police officers, victim advocates and counselors, and sexual assault nurses with the tools they need to combat violence in our communities.

close to the stem (and each other). This means spray herbicide application has limited success. As is the case with many invasive species, successive mechanical and/or herbicide treatments are most successful in effectively controlling and eradicating this species.

Contributing to the challenge of eradicating the species is the fact that the trees are actively available for retail and wholesale purchase by developers and consumers. Eliminating existing landscape and invading specimens is important, but consumers should also avoid purchasing and planting ornamental pear trees. For a list of retailers who sell native plants and do not sell invasive species, visit GrowIndianaNatives.org.

This message is brought to you by the Hamilton County Soil and Water Conservation District (SWCD). The SWCD is currently forming a collaborative effort to address invasive species in Hamilton County. ### The REPORTER

Callery pear, also known as flowering pear or Bradford pear, is among the most popular ornamental trees in the United States. The white flowers produced by the tree is one of the first signs of spring in the Midwest. Callery pear is a common feature of plantings, urban trees and housing additions.

Unfortunately, the species is an aggressive invader of native forest, savanna and prairie habitats across the eastern United States. Expansion of Callery pear is a serious problem as the species outcompetes and suppresses native species that are much more desirable for wildlife habitat and forest health. In the coming weeks, you'll see the white blooms of pear trees in front of homes, businesses and churches but also along roadsides and spread through other natural areas.

Callery pear can be easily identified by its characteristic white flowers that appear in March/April as one of the first plants to bloom. It also has distinct waxy, egg-shaped leaves and some varieties, especially where escaped, have large thorns. The fruits of the tree are small, typically the size of a dime or smaller with rough, brown skin. When first produced in spring, the fruits are quite hard but they soften over the course of the spring and summer, typically being consumed by a variety of birds and small mammals in late summer and fall.

Callery pear trees grow very quickly and produce pollen and fruit as early as three years. The abundant fruits are quickly dispersed by birds, including European Starlings and American Robins.

This results in new Callery pear trees growing in a variety of habitats where birds travel and roost including forest, fields and under powerlines.

Their continued use as an ornamental tree further contributes to the problem of expansion. In addition to their negative impacts on forests and wildlife, Callery pears are not a good choice for landscaping. Their tight branch angles and overall poor structure means they readily break under windy and icy conditions. This presents a danger to people and nearby structures where they are planted.

Controlling this invasive species can be a challenge.

Callery pear has a deep,

strong taproot that limits

pulling even small stems.

Additionally, it actively stump sprouts meaning

when cut or girdled, follow up herbicide treatment is necessary to kill an individual plant. Finally, the general form of most stems is rather spindly with leaves that are close to the stem (and each other). This means spray herbicide application has limited success. As is the case with many invasive species, successive mechanical and/or herbicide treatments are most successful in effectively controlling and eradicating this species.

Contributing to the challenge of eradicating the species is the fact that the trees are actively available for retail and wholesale purchase by developers and consumers. ### The REPORTER

Hoosier Representatives Susan W. Brooks (R-Ind.-05) and Jim Banks (R-Ind.-03) joined Reps. Tony Cárdenas (D-Calif.) and Filemon Vela (D-Texas) to introduce a bipartisan bill, the E-FRONTIER Act.

This bill would prevent the federal government from managing the construction of a nationwide 5G network and would instead rely on the expertise of the private sector to lead mobile broadband expansion within the United States.

5G technology holds the tremendous potential of unleashing a new technological revolution by providing incredible internet speeds and use applications. Indianapolis is a 5G test site and this new technology has the potential to boost the economy, create millions of new jobs, and maintain the country's global leadership.

"As the co-founder and co-chair of the 5G Caucus, I understand how important it is for our laws to support this kind of innovation, but the federal government should not infringe upon the deployment of 5G communications networks in the process," said Brooks. "The United States led the way in 3G and 4G, and it is critical that we win the race to 5G as it will create jobs for Americans across the country, boost our economy and provide a new generation of connectivity that will support our increasingly connected world. Government's role in the race to 5G is to cut regulatory barriers and help establish a spectrum pipeline, but beyond that, the government should stay out of the way. The government must continue to let the expertise and knowledge of industry leaders take the lead in shaping the internet's capabilities, development and deployment so we can continue to allow the internet to transform the way we live."

"Cyber threats are a leading cause for national security concerns," said Banks. "China, Iran, North Korea and Russia have invested billions of dollars to influence and infiltrate our broadband technology. Each day, U.S. wireless carriers experience billions of cybersecurity incidents and have developed innovative methods to prevent many more. This institutional knowledge can only come from experience and has equipped the American telecommunications industry with the prerequisite expertise to build a robust and secure 5G wireless system.

America won the race to 4G by relying on the economic value of free enterprise, not the central planning and economic control of nations like China. 5G technology holds the tremendous potential of unleashing a new technological revolution by providing incredible speeds and use applications. Nationalizing a project of this magnitude would be a massive overreach by the federal government into a marketplace in which it does not have any business. It also would greatly increase the probability of corruption and mismanagement; two problems we cannot afford to have when dealing with major cybersecurity threats.

For the sake of the free market and sound national security operations, the federal government should stay out of constructing the 5G broadband network."

U.S. Senators Ted Cruz (R-TX) and Catherine Cortez Masto (D-NV) introduced the Senate companion bill last week.

Huskies fall to Kokomo, HSE goes 2-1 at Terre Haute South

Hamilton Heights lost to a tough Kokomo team on Saturday morning by the score of 9-0.

The Wildkats were in control from the beginning, scoring four runs in the top of the first inning. The Huskies could only manage four hits, one each from Isabella Neiling, Adyson Baber, Alayna Baber and Faith Hittle.

"Our bats have gone a little silent here the last couple games," said Heights coach Ken Olovich. This was after the Huskies scored 30 runs in their first three games, but Olovich was confident that his team's offense would get back on track.

"We'll get it going," said Olovich. "Our defense has gotten a lot better, our pitching's gotten a lot better. So we'll get it all together here real soon."

Heights is 1-4 and will play at Western on Tuesday.
