Noblesville helps teach kids urban planning with 'Box City'

The REPORTER

The Noblesville Planning Department hosted its annual Box City program on April 10 and 11 at Our Lady of Grace Catholic School to introduce students to local government processes, urban planning and development, and being civically engaged.

"We are pleased to partner with Our Lady of Grace Catholic School again and bring them Box City. It's a fun way for the city's planning department to teach kids about the various procedures required to successfully design, build and expand a city," said Noblesville Mayor John Ditslear. "The program also provides students a look at how government works and how various departments work together."

Hamilton County Historian David Heighway provided a history lesson about Noblesville and how and why settlement of cities happened along waterways. The city also shared about the White River, its cleanup efforts, river activation and the ongoing regional vision plan. Third and fourth grade students worked with the city's plan-

Spring cleaning?

As the pages of the calendar turned to April, my mother would begin her spring cleaning. Now her version of spring cleaning and mine are on two entirely different levels.

Mom would wash down the painted walls in every room. She and Dad would wrestle the venetian blinds into the bath tub. Every doily would be washed. Every doily would be re-starched. The sheets would be hung on the clothesline in the back yard to get that real scent of spring. Forget the laundry sheets. They were not invented back then. Mom actually still calls the sheets ... the bed clothes.

Me? I take off every item on my furniture and dust every nook and cranny on them. I seem to never put the items back just the way they were before I started. I call it creative rearranging. My goal is to somewhat (?) clean and give the room a new look.

My way of cleaning ... refresh and re-new.

On Friday, I began the spring ritual. I started in our bedroom. About an hour into cleaning I looked into a basket of cards and notes.

Let's just say I got a bit sidetracked. I keep every note and card that my husband gives me. Every special occasion he writes me a poem. Some are cute and funny. Some remind me of why I married him. They hug my heart.

As I sat on the floor taking a stroll down memory lane I just felt blessed and con-

CICOA names Sheridan florist 2019 Caregiver of the Year

The REPORTER

When Jim "Bob" Mitchell was diagnosed with cancer in spring 2018, it never occurred to Lori Christy that she wouldn't be there any way she could. She took him to doctor's appointments, helped him with his bills and around the house and more recently, helped him transition to a senior living community in Carmel. Lori is as much as Bob's advocate as his friend.

When she learned she was being named CICOA's Caregiver of the Year, Christy insisted she doesn't - and couldn't - do it alone. CICOA presented Christy with the award during its annual Signature Breakfast this morning.

Christy is the second non-relative to earn the annual honor for the nonprofit that provides services for low-income seniors and adults in Central Indiana. In Christy's eyes, Mitchell has always been family.

He was best friends with her parents, Alan and the late Vickey Lyon, and has been a part of the family since Mitchell moved back to Sheridan more than 30 years ago when he was first diagnosed with cancer. He recovered and had settled back into life in his hometown with his mom. After she died more than a decade ago, he struggled with depression. Christy was there to encourage him to get out. It wasn't unusual for Mitchell to join Christy, her husband Nick and their children, Cort and Maddi for lunch or dinner or just hang out.

Mayor Brainard appoints Carrie Holle to Carmel Plan Commission

The REPORTER

Mayor Jim Brainard announced Friday he has appointed Carrie Holle, a Carmel business owner and Realtor in Carmel, to the Carmel Plan Commission for a four-year term.

The Carmel Plan Commission helps manage the city's growth and development. It also helps the City Council develop and update city ordinances, the Comprehensive Plan, the Thoroughfare Plan and other long-range plans for housing, transportation, neighborhood development, parks, commercial development and public facilities. Nine voting members serve on the Carmel Plan Commission.

Holle graduated from Purdue University with a major in Broadcast Journalism. Since then she has worked as a residential Realtor in Carmel. In 2000, she opened a boutique real estate office, Highgarden Real Estate Carmel in the Arts and Design District. Along with owning and operating her real estate business, she also volunteers with Carmel Porchfest, serves as president of the parent association at Park Tudor and founded a nonprofit called Home with a Hug, which provides furnishings for underprivileged.

The Plan Commission meets at 6 p.m. on the third Tuesday of every month in the Chambers of City Hall. In addition, each member of the Plan Commission, except the president, is a part of either the Commercial or Residential Committee. These committees meet at 6 p.m. on the first Tuesday of every month in the Caucus rooms of City Hall.

Prevail recognizes 2019 Community Partners, Volunteer of the Year

Submitted

Prevail recently held its annual Community Appreciation Breakfast at the Cambria Suites in Westfield. This event is held each April to honor Sexual Assault Awareness Month, Child Abuse Prevention Month, National Crime Victim's Rights Week and National Volunteer Appreciation Week.

At the event, Prevail's Executive Director Susan Ferguson shared remarks to thank all of the agency's many volunteers. The theme of her remarks, based on "The Book of Joy," was that compassion and generosity are the keys to experiencing joy. The breakfast was incredibly joy-filled because all in attendance have shown unending compassion and generosity to those victims of crime and abuse who are seeking their joy at Prevail. Prevail's volunteer support is truly bringing joy to others, and we hope it instills the experience of joy in each of their lives, as well.

During this event, Prevail recognizes many people and entities that are critical to serving victims of crime and abuse. Primarily, this event serves as an opportunity to thank the many volunteers who devote their time and talent to Prevail all year long.

In addition, several elected officials and those running for elected office were present and recognized. All of Prevail's 2018 Heroes of the Month were acknowledged. One of Prevail's highest honors, the Outstanding Community Partner Award, is bestowed have a 60-year-old kid.

“He really enjoyed living life and being fun,” Christy said. “He didn’t want anything to ever be serious.”

When Christy opened her business, Elsie’s Flower Shoppe in Sheridan, Mitchell often went with her on deliveries or helped her set up for funerals. Christy didn’t want him sitting alone at home, especially in the winter, when the golf course where he worked wasn’t open. It’s what friends do. It’s what families do to help each other.

The role of friend turned to the role of caregiver in March 2018, when Mitchell became ill. When doctors couldn’t find a diagnosis, Christy insisted Mitchell be transferred to Methodist Hospital, where doctors diagnosed him with internal bleeding, a non-functioning kidney and cancer in the other kidney. Christy was there to help Mitchell make the difficult decision to have kidney surgery, something that was risky, because of his severe vascular disease. However, it was his only chance of staying off permanent dialysis. While hospitalized, Mitchell suffered from multiple strokes. While Mitchell is now cancer-free, the strokes have left him unable to care for himself.

Mitchell’s older brother John, who lives in North Carolina, calls Christy an angel for all that’s she done. Jean Ross, a nurse who now helps care for Mitchell, calls Christy an inspiration.

“I come across many caregivers that inspire me, but Lori Christy has taught me what it truly means to be a caregiver advocate,” Ross said. “The world can be a scary place when a health crisis sneaks up.”

Christy and sisters Jamie and Jessica Wallace – also longtime friends with Bob Mitchell – took turns staying with him around the clock when he was in the hospital and unable to understand what was happening or community with doctors.

“Lori Christy and some of her friends immediately stepped in to do everything needed to address Bob’s health concerns and to keep me informed of his condition and needs,” John Mitchell said. “Day in day out she inspires me and the rest of us around my brother to do and be our very best.”

Christy’s story highlights the issue of elder orphans, people like Mitchell who do not have relatives nearby to rely on. According to the AARP, 23 percent of Baby Boomers will be without family caregivers living nearby. For those individuals, people like Christy become their only advocates to ensure they get the care and help they need.

That can mean all kinds of duties. Lately, it’s meant stopping by to see him and bringing along the fast food he craves. It’s what gives Mitchell joy, and for right now, that’s all Christy and the Wallaces are focused on providing for their beloved friend.

tent. My heart did a spring happy dance. As my husband would say, there was “good stuff” in that basket.

I found old pictures tucked into my worn out, tattered and well-loved Bible. There was a picture of me with my ventriloquist dummy, Danny. I was probably about 14 as I was wearing the eighth grade Recognition dress that my mother had made me. Yes, I still have Danny tucked into an old suitcase ... somewhere.

About an hour later I realized at the rate I was going I would have my spring cleaning and refreshing done sometime in the fall.

Those old memories are quite the hindrance.

I often wish to be more of a minimalist when it come to my home but in my heart I know that will never happen. Every time I read a sentimental note from someone I put it back in the basket. It’s just hard for me to throw anything away that has a string fastened to my heart.

I found a journal in which I wrote my thoughts in 2001. I am sure I will be writing a column about what was written in that journal. I had no idea what my life would look like some 18 years later. All I can say is WOW!

Well, the bedroom did get a good dusting and my heart got a good hug on Friday. Let’s just see how far I get before I turn the calendar to September.

I was born and raised right here in Noblesville. I grew up in a home without domestic violence or assault – it wasn’t something I saw, or even heard about. But when I was introduced to Prevail of Central Indiana, I was shocked by the number of individuals who are affected by domestic violence. In 2018 alone, Prevail helped more than 4,000 clients in Hamilton County. (Nearly 80 percent of clients are women and children.) Prevail is strictly confidential, and since their core values include integrity and respect, they provide their services at no charge. Domestic violence and abuse are hard topics to discuss, so you don’t often hear about them. But at Tom Wood Volkswagen in Noblesville, we’re breaking the taboo and raising awareness for Prevail, an organization that helps families in Hamilton County. – Mike Bragg, GM of Tom Wood Volkswagen in Noblesville

To help Hamilton County families affected by domestic violence and sexual abuse, you can donate the following items:

- Art supplies (for children to journal and express their emotions)
- Bottled water (8 oz. bottles, preferably)
- Individually packaged snacks
- Gas cards (many women have no access to funds after fleeing their abuser)

You can drop off items at Tom Wood Volkswagen in Noblesville, located at 14701 Tom Wood Way. You can also donate directly to Prevail of Central Indiana by visiting Prevailinc.org.

“It’s an opportunity to teach students about how government works, building permits and processes, rules, regulations, zoning issues and architecture and design procedures – all the stuff we live daily, they get a chance to see it first-hand and for the first time,” Noblesville Planning Director Sarah Reed said. “Getting kids exposed to the regulatory process early on makes it a fun lesson learned as opposed to when they grow up and may feel like it is an unnecessary formality.”

Students were responsible for constructing their own buildings by using the same standards and methods required in the City of Noblesville. They also determined the master layout of the city by using scale to divide larger tracts of land into individual lots.

Then, Jeff Hill, Fishers’ Director of Engineering the past seven years, accepted a private sector offer and left his city job.

When it was time to replace Jeff Hill, Mayor Scott Fadness tapped Hill’s former second-in-command, Jason Taylor. Fadness announced Monday the appointment of Jason Taylor as the Fishers Director of Engineering.

“Jeff Hill has built a great engineering department that has reduced traffic congestion in Fishers, increased our state and federal funding, and improved our city’s infrastructure during his time here,” said Fadness in a city news release. “I have no doubt that under Jason’s leadership, these efforts will not be in vain. I look forward to having Jason back on the team as we continue to reinvest in our infrastructure to grow the quality of life here in Fishers.”

Taylor was once a part of the Engineering Department staff while serving as assistant director, and has the advantage of knowing those working under him very well.

“I’m humbled and excited to come back to the City of Fishers and be a part of the next chapter of our growing community,” said Taylor. “Under Jeff’s leadership, the team has made great strides in bringing Fishers’ infrastructure up meet the demand. With that foundation in place, I’m looking forward building proactive and innovative infrastructure that will serve this community for generations to come.”

Taylor will have plenty of work on his agenda, the biggest being the State Road 37 upgrade, which begins in earnest later this year.

He is a graduate from Purdue University with a bachelor’s degree in Civil Engineering and is a certified Professional Engineer in both Indiana and Ohio.

Jason, his wife Carrie, and children, Dean and Linley, reside in Fishers.

Westfield's production is on deck to be a big hit

By STU CLAMPITT
ReadTheReporter.com

Those lucky enough to attend opening night at Westfield Playhouse's production of Going Going Gone were treated to a question and answer session with the Emmy-winning playwright, Ken Levine.

Westfield Playhouse Board President John Sampson told The Reporter the audience was superb and the first night was a great success. If you did not get to see the play on opening weekend, you have only two more weekends to enjoy the show.

According to Levine's website, Going Going Gone is set in the press box of a major Los Angeles baseball stadium, a hilarious yet poignant comedy about four sports journalists whose lives are changed during the course of one game. The theme is our need to be remembered set in the world of baseball where the past is more cherished than the present.

Director Steven Marsh began his love of community theater in the Monticello Opera House in Florida in 2003. He said he's acted on and off ever since then, and this is his first time directing.

"Going Going Gone is kind of a workplace comedy," Marsh said. "I liken it a lot to Cheers in the sense that Cheers what not about bartending, but that was the setting for these characters to get to know each other."

Marsh said he is a huge fan of the playwright.

"Ken Levine is primarily known as an Emmy-winning script writer for television sitcoms including *M*A*S*H* and Cheers," Marsh said. "I love the idea of trying to bring that fast-paced funny atmosphere of my beloved sitcoms to the stage while still having something that still has a lot of heart and a great message."

Marsh edited a digital magazine for 18 years and has seen first-hand the changing landscape between print and digital, which is a huge theme in this play.

"One of the characters works for a website and mock's their counterparts who are still in traditional journalism," Marsh told The Reporter. "The play is very current and spoke to me in that way as well. It is a fairly authentic look at the lives of sportscasters. There is a fair bit of language and some adult situations that folks should be aware of."

While directing, Marsh gained a deeper appreciation for not only one of his favorite authors, but also for the depth and accuracy of the material itself.

"There are a bunch of baseball-related anecdotes that are related by the characters," Marsh explained. "Everything in there in 100 percent true. You can Google them, and they are pretty absurd, but it is not exaggerated or made up for stage. That was a delight for me to learn."

If you have not seen this play yet, you only have two more weeks to get to Westfield Playhouse, 1836 W. State Road 32. The play will stage Friday, Saturday and Sunday through April 28. Visit WestfieldPlayhouse.org or call (317) 402-3341 for tickets before it's gone.

Carmel City Council president addresses city's debt in video

The REPORTER

In the midst of running his current Carmel City Council campaign and as current Carmel City Councilperson, Jeff Worrell speaks to Carmel residents about debt.

"Debt is a topic that is often brought up whether in neighborhood chats, social media or residents proactively reaching out to the council with questions," Worrell said.

Worrell decided to address the debt concerns through a fact filled video. You can see it at bit.ly/CarmelDebt.

Worrell

Factually, Carmel has the fifth-lowest tax rate in the state of Indiana. Carmel has an annual revenue of $98 million and debt service is just 19 percent.

Not only do other cities look to Carmel as a leader in economic structure, Carmel also has a balanced budget every single year, an $8 million rainy day fund, $56 million left over in accounts at the year end, and Carmel's bonds are coveted in the open market, along with no deficit spending.

"You have to consider the revenue Carmel has," said Worrell. "Debt in relation to income is an important tool that drives Carmel's economic engine and keeps resident's property taxes low."

Worrell invites Carmel residents to join him in an open discussion, "coffee meetup" to specifically answer questions related to debt on Monday, April 22. The first coffee meetup will take place from 7 to 10 a.m. at Hubbard & Cravens in Carmel and the second will take place from 7 to 8 p.m. at Starbucks, 2810 E. 116th St., Carmel.

Celebrating Earth Day

Many stores, even Walmart, carry many different varieties of trees all at different, affordable prices. Although you'll be putting in some money for the tree, you'll be helping the environment and will get a new decoration in your yard to remember your good deed for years.

Walking or riding a bike is also beneficial. The less air pollution our cars and other polluting transportations give off, the better! Earth Day is a great day to give our planet just one day with a little less carbon dioxide. Do you plan on getting a drink sometime that day? Many drinks involve using a plastic straw, but plastic straws take about 200 years to decompose. Even then, they do not fully degrade, says the organization Get Green Now. If animals get ahold of these and mistake them for food, it can kill them. A great way to stop this is by using metal straws. They even come in different colors and can be personalized. Most stores nowadays carry metal straws in the utensils area. If reusing the same straw sounds like a pain, another alternative to plastic is paper straws. These are even sold in grocery stores for a price less than the plastic ones. The Science Learning Hub claims paper straws only take about five months to decompose.

Today, Earth Day is celebrated by more than 1 billion people worldwide, according to an article from history.com. This day is now the largest environmental movement in the world. Many organizations have started taking action on Earth Day as well. This includes an elephant sanctuary in Thailand planting 300 trees, cleanups in Japan, a festival in Italy, and events even here in Indiana.

At the Historic Military Park on Saturday, April 20, the Earth Day Indiana Festival will be held from 11 a.m. to 4 p.m. There will be music, local food vendors, exhibitors, activities for children and a 5K run/walk. This is the 30th anniversary of Earth Day Indiana Festival. You can find more information from Earth Day Indiana's website, earthdayindiana.org. It is a great way to locally bring awareness to environmental issues and contribute to our communities.

While all of these big activities are great to do, you may be wondering what you can individually do on Earth Day. Planting a tree is an activity that is fun to do around spring time.

A fun, easy way to celebrate and bring awareness of Earth Day is making crafts from things in you would normally throw away! You can decorate a can into a pencil holder, turn a Styrofoam cup into an animal decoration, or even use old newspaper strips to make a decorative bowl. There are also many more crafts you can find instructions for online.

As another Earth Day will go by, we can keep the earth clean for the future generations. Simple activities and bringing awareness not only teaches us the importance of our earth, but also passes on these lessons for the ones who will carry on these traditions to keep our planet clean.

Crew Carwash, once known as Mike's Carwash locally before re-branding the company name in 2014, is building a new headquarters building in the area of Interstate 69 and 116th Street in Fishers. The City of Fishers and Crew released a joint announcement Friday morning.

Crew's corporate headquarters is currently located in Fishers on Hague Road between 106th and 96th streets.

"We look forward to working with the City on this exciting opportunity to provide a more convenient way for Fishers residents to experience our clean, fast and friendly service," said Sally Grant, Crew's Executive Vice President and third generation leader of Crew's family business, in a city news release. "We have been happy to call Fishers home for the past 15 years and are equally excited about potentially building a brand new Corporate Office and Training Center for all our team members who serve our internal and external customers every day."

Crew Car Wash says it has plans to buy five acres from Sunbeam Development Corporation to build its corporate headquarters and a state-of-the-art car wash.

Crew Carwash intends to use this new location to establish new research and development facilities and training programs.

Both the new corporate headquarters and new car wash will be located along Exit 5 Parkway, just north of 116th Street behind the new Riverview Hospital and next to Topgolf. The project will be presented at April's City Council meeting Monday.

The City is offering $1.72 million in incentives pending Fishers City Council approval. The package includes a 10-year, 100 percent real property tax abatement and impact fee waiver for the headquarters building. If approved, the project will be presented at May's Plan Commission meeting for approval.

"Crew Carwash is a Fishers institution, calling Fishers its home since 2004," said Fishers Mayor Scott Fadness. "Working alongside them to not only identify a location that meets the vision of the City, but a permanent home for them in Fishers, demonstrates our commitment to supporting local businesses which value our smart, vibrant, and entrepreneurial business environment."

The new Fishers Crew Carwash is scheduled to open in 2020 with the headquarters building to be completed by 2022.

DNR says keep wildlife wild this spring

The REPORTER

With April showers and May flowers come baby animals. This spring, keep wildlife wild by leaving them where they belong.

If you encounter a baby animal alone, remember:

- Adult animals rarely abandon their young. The parent may be out of sight gathering food. Leaving young unattended is normal for many species. To minimize discovery by predators, adults return only a few times a day.

- Do not hover to see if a parent has come back to their young. An adult animal will not come near if a person is standing nearby. Give young animals space and only check back periodically. If you can't tell if a mother has checked on a nest, place straw or grass over the nest and return later to see if it has been disturbed.

- Baby animals should not be handled. Though human scent may not cause parents to abandon their young, it can alert predators to the young animal's presence. They can carry diseases or parasites that may transfer to people. Young animals can also inflict damage by biting or scratching people trying to help.

Rescuing young wildlife is legal; keeping them is not. You can rescue truly orphaned and/or injured wild animals without a permit, but the animal must be given to a permitted wildlife rehabilitator who is trained on how to properly raise and release the species within 24 hours. Click here for a list of wildlife rehabilitators.

You cannot obtain a wild animal possession permit for a young animal collected from the wild.

Noblesville native helps dogs near Chernobyl

The REPORTER

Trap, Neuter and Release commonly known as "TNR" – is one of many solutions to animal overpopulation and overall health for feral cats here in Indiana and the United States. But what about abroad and what about dogs?

One central Indiana veterinarian assistant is on a mission to find out. Brittney Sanford, an 18-year-old Vet Assistant at the Hamilton County Low Cost Spay and Neuter Clinic, will be traveling over 5,000 miles to the Ukraine with the Clean Future Funds Organization to help the dogs of Chernobyl and see how TNR is affectively being implemented in this area of the world.

Animal overpopulation is an issue in many regions of the world and for many different reasons, in this case it's due to one of the world's worst manmade disasters ever to occur – the meltdown of the Chernobyl Nuclear Power Plant in (Left) Veterinary Assistant Brittney Sanford poses with puppies at the Hamilton County Low Cost Spay and Neuter Clinic. (Right) Sanford's drive to help dogs will take her 5,000 miles to The Ukraine to help combat animal overpopulation near Chernobyl.

1986. Subsequently, residents' pets were abandoned in the following days mandatory evacuations of the nearby towns. The animals that survived the radiation and military culling attempts were forced to learn how to survive on their own. Over 30 years later, many of the dogs living there are the direct descendants of these pets left behind. These dogs inhabit the grounds of the power plant and the areas outside known as the exclusion zone. The Clean Future Fund Organization has traveled to Chernobyl for the last three years and has TNR'd over 800 of the more than 1,000 dogs who live in this common day wasteland surrounding the Chernobyl Plant.

Sanford graduated from the J. Everett Light Veterinarian Technician Program in 2018 and jumped right in to her career.

"I wanted to become a veterinarian assistant because I've always wanted to help animals, and make sure they're not in pain and well cared for," said Sanford.

On this trip Sanford, will be assigned to the catching team that's tasked with securing the stray animals that live in the exclusion zone and transporting them to the onsite clinic near the power plant. The dogs will be spayed or neutered, given vaccinations and medically evaluated. She and her team will then monitor the animals in recovery and make sure they get released back into the same area and original packs they were living in to avoid the animals being territorial and fighting.

With the efforts of one young Hoosier, joining a team assembled from professionals all over the world, the dogs of Chernobyl will get much needed medical treatment and live healthier lives; thus, creating a safer environment for everyone working and living in Chernobyl and the nearby towns.

"I am so excited to have the opportunity to go to Chernobyl," said Sanford. "I'm most excited to get hands on and learn new skills and better develop current skills. I look forward to meeting new people, making connections and helping the dogs and cats of Chernobyl."

Janice's 23-year-old son died in 2014 in an accident in Arizona. Her son donated both kidneys, a

Carmel reader calls attention to vacant stores

Dear Editor: Last week's report that retail store closings thus far in 2019 exceed those of all of 2018 comes as no surprise in Carmel. Coresight Research analysis also noted fewer openings thus far than in all of 2018, as well. An Indianapolis Business Journal article said the numbers indicate “that traditional retailers are struggling to respond to shoppers’ increasing shift online even as they’re working hard to reinvent their businesses” in the Information Age. Carmelonians have known for months of the 20-plus vacant storefronts in Merchant’s Square, alone. A slow (is there any other way?) drive down Range Line Road produces a handful more. City Hall’s helpful answer to a growing national retail meltdown? Build more high-rent retail space. We all can see what happens when over-supply meets under-demand. When it happens with $1.3 billion in borrowed money, it’s scary.

Noblesville reader says Jensen is part of establishment

Dear Editor, Political endorsements speak volumes and Luke Kenley’s endorsement of Chris Jensen for Noblesville mayor should come as no surprise to anyone; the two are peas in a pod. Former Senator Kenley represents the old establishment-style of government, where insiders take care of each other and protect the good ol’ boy network. Now is the time for Noblesville to be reminded to vote for leaders who understand that our government was created to be limited by the will of the people; that we are not its subjects, but it serves us. The last thing we need in Noblesville is a continuation of the status quo, evidenced by our high taxes and low achievement, and a city hall that is out of touch with residents and beholden to corporations and developers; all things which we the people do not want. It is obvious that we need new ideas and new leadership. My concern that Chris Jensen looks like more of the same old thing for Noblesville has been confirmed by one of the good ol’ boy’s endorsement of him. The Kenley endorsement of Chris Jensen confirms for me that Noblesville will continue down the same ol’ path it’s on. Noblesville needs to take note of this endorsement and consider its implications.

Kozicki defines her respect for Noblesville's history during final candidate forum

Submitted

Since launching her campaign for Noblesville Mayor in August, Julia Church Kozicki has vowed to "respect yesterday" while strengthening today and leading tomorrow.

However, as she was quick to point out at the recent Noblesville "Candidate Conversations" Forum, that does not mean wrapping the city in shrink wrap for the sake of preserving a pleasant memory. Kozicki made these remarks during the closing of the third and final forum hosted by the Noblesville Chamber of Commerce and League of Women Voters.

"Noblesville today stands on the shoulders of those who built the city with the future in mind," said Kozicki. "Our square is the visual embodiment of the hometown values that draw people to our community."

As mayor, Kozicki believes it is imperative to ensure the authenticity that draws people to the community is not lost as the city evolves around the historic square.

"I grew up two blocks from the square. Nothing says 'home' to me more than walking south on 9th Street to the square. I returned to Noblesville following law school in Chicago to raise my family and contribute to the city that I have always called home," she said.

That commitment to Noblesville is the main impetus behind her campaign, she explained.

"As we look to Noblesville's bicentennial, my respect for Noblesville's heritage will serve the city well while proactively and transparently leading it into the future."

In the last of her "Conversations with Julia" series, Kozicki invites voters to meet her (and grab a slice of free pizza) at a "Family Fun Night" from 6 to 7 p.m. on Thursday, April 25 at Greek's Pizzeria, 216 S. 10th St.

Carmel officer recounts nearly overdosing on fentanyl at a crime scene

By RANDALL NEWSOME
WISH-TV | wistv.com

Carmel police officer Tyler Brammer Wolf is used to being on alert. Feb. 20 was no different.

He got a call that night that he needed to assist another officer in the case of a stolen vehicle, but when he went to search the passenger's belongings he found a powdery substance.

That substance was fentanyl, the opioid believed to be 100 times stronger than morphine and 50 times stronger than heroin. Just when Wolf was about to bag it for evidence, the wind caught the powder and blew it into the air. He began to get light headed, his fingers went numb and a couple of minutes later he was on the ground.

"You never expect it until it's happening," Wolf said.

Officers gave him NARCAN (naloxone HCl) to counter the effects and then took him to the hospital and after an hour treatment he was back to normal.

Now he's warning other officers to be on the lookout.

"Just a little granule, like a couple granules of salt touching on your skin can be absorbed and that's enough to knock a person out and overdose on," he said.

Wolf isn't sure exactly how much of the drug got in his system because it was airborne.

"That's the scary part about it."

Now that he knows, he plans to double check and be more than prepared for these kinds of situations.

"I'm going to stop immediately, back away, make sure that I've got gloves on, make sure that everyone around me is aware," he said.

With the powerful and dangerous drug out there, Wolf hopes that officers and people all over are taking notice.

"It's everywhere and for every other officer out there I would just say take the extra steps and take the extra time."

That extra time could be the difference between you and the emergency room.

Fentanyl is a prescription drug most commonly used to treat pain. According to the National Institute on Drug Abuse, the illegally-used fentanyl most often associated with recent overdoses is made in labs. This synthetic fentanyl is sold illegally as a powder, dropped onto blotter paper, put in eye droppers and nasal sprays, or made into pills that look like other prescription opioids.

Goodrich's bill to create a senior-youth mentor pilot program heads to governor

The REPORTER

Legislation authored by State Rep. Chuck Goodrich (R-Noblesville) to create a pilot program for local senior citizens to mentor students is moving to the governor for consideration as a new law.

Under the bill, the Indiana Department of Education would select three school corporations to implement a pilot mentorship program to bring together students and volunteers aged 55 and older. Local school administrators would then determine the best methods to utilize program participants to meet the needs of their school.

"Senior citizens have a lot to offer troubled youth, and this program has the potential to change lives," Goodrich said. "Many students do not have strong, positive adult role models in their lives outside of the classroom. I hope that these volunteers will be able to help students through their problems or help them find resources to overcome their struggles."

Goodrich said the United Way of Central Indiana, Indiana Urban School Association and the Military Veterans Coalition of Indiana all support this proposed pilot program. Former military and law enforcement members also see potential in the program to help serve their communities.

Adult volunteers would need to be approved through a criminal background check and a child protection index check to participate in the program.

One rural, suburban and urban school corporation would be selected to participate in the pilot program. Schools chosen would receive a grant to assist with the upfront expenses of implementation.

House Enrolled Act 1224 is now eligible for further action by the governor. Visit iga.in.gov to learn more.

Senate committee advances Rep. Cook's bill enhancing school safety communication

The REPORTER

The Senate Homeland Security and Transportation Committee recently voted in support of State Rep. Tony Cook's (R-Cicero) bill that would open lines of communication between schools and law enforcement to better protect students.

Currently, law enforcement and school corporations cannot share a student's alarming behavior, school files or criminal records, even if it pertains to public safety threats. Cook's proposal would enable school corporations or law enforcement agencies to request certain, pertinent information from each other about a student for the purpose of enhancing safety.

"All schools today have some form of law enforcement protection in school resource officers, but there is more we can do to help address potential threats in the community," Cook said. "When a child shows warning signs that they are headed for trouble, whether that is reckless behavior in school or a criminal record, it is absolutely critical that schools and law enforcement are able to exchange information. This bill creates more opportunities for officials to reach out to that student before they act out in an extreme or criminal manner."

Only top school administrators would be permitted to release student information. To protect student privacy, school administrators and law enforcement officers would not be compelled to hand over records they did not feel are relevant. This discretion would help prevent this system from being abused. No referrals or student data would be kept in any permanent educational file.

House Bill 1398 now moves to the full Senate for consideration. Visit iga.in.gov to learn more.

State Rep. Tony Cook (R-Cicero) represents House District 32, which includes all of Tipton County and portions of Hamilton, Madison, Delaware, Howard and Grant counties.

Who was Ernie Pyle? Do you move over? Lives depend on it!

1992 – The Lanier Mansion in Madison was designated a National Historic Landmark. The beautiful Greek Revival home was built in 1844 by J. F. D. Lanier, a banker who helped Governor Oliver P. Morton finance the state during the Civil War.

The REPORTER

We've all heard about it before – the Move Over Law.

In 1999, Indiana was the first state in the nation to pass such a law requiring motorists to move to an adjacent traffic lane, or reduce speed by 10 mph below the posted speed limit if unable to change lanes safely when driving by a stationary police, fire or ambulance emergency vehicle stopped along the side of the road.

Over the years Indiana's law has expanded to include stationary recovery, utility service, solid waste haulers, road, street highway maintenance vehicles, as well as a stationary survey or construction vehicles when displaying alternately flashing amber lights.

Indiana's law was originally crafted and passed the result of the death of Indiana State Police Trooper Andrew Winzenread who was killed in April 1997 while assisting a stranded motorist on Interstate 74 in Dearborn County. Now, in 2019, every state, with the exception of Hawaii has some form of a move over law.

But we all know laws are only effective when followed. In Indiana there are still too many emergency vehicles being struck by inattentive or distracted motorists. And in neighboring Illinois, three state troopers have been struck and killed since the beginning of 2019.

As part of a joint 'Move Over Law' traffic enforcement project Indiana will be working with 'Six State Trooper' law enforcement partners in Kentucky, Michigan, Ohio, Pennsylvania and West Virginia during the week of April 14 to 20. During this time motorists can expect to see additional patrols looking for distracted driving violations which often lead to motorists failing to move over when they approach an emergency vehicle stopped roadside or at a crash scene. Some violations associated with Driving While Distracted include speeding, following too close, drifting from lane to lane and failing to signal turns or lane changes.

It is not the goal of the Indiana State Police to simply write tickets. We encourage and desire voluntary compliance with traffic laws to ensure the safety of the public as well as the safety of public safety professionals. Our historical enforcement of the move over law reveals about 50 percent of persons stopped for this violation receive a written warning, but citations are issued for particularly egregious violations of the law.

TODAY'S BIBLE READING

But he that knew not, and did commit things worthy of stripes, shall be beaten with few stripes. For unto whomsoever much is given, of him shall be much required: and to whom men have committed much, of him they will ask the more. I am come to send fire on the earth; and what will I, if it be already kindled? But I have a baptism to be baptized with; and how am I straitened till it be accomplished! Suppose ye that I am come to give peace on earth? I tell you, Nay; but rather division: For from henceforth there shall be five in one house divided, three against two, and two against three. The father shall be divided against the son, and the son against the father; the mother against the daughter, and the daughter against the mother; the mother in law against her daughter in law, and the daughter in law against her mother in law. And he said also to the people, When ye see a cloud rise out of the west, straightway ye say, There cometh a shower; and so it is. And when ye see the south wind blow, ye say, There will be heat; and it cometh to pass. Ye hypocrites, ye can discern the face of the sky and of the earth; but how is it that ye do not discern this time? Yea, and why even of yourselves judge ye not what is right? When thou goest with thine adversary to the magistrate, as thou art in the way, give diligence that thou mayest be delivered from him; lest he hale thee to the judge, and the judge deliver thee to the officer, and the officer cast thee into prison. I tell thee, thou shalt not depart thence, till thou hast paid the very last mite.

Tigers get early lead, beat Noblesville in series finale

Fishers won the third game of its series with Noblesville 10-1 on Saturday in a non-conference game at the Tigers' field.

Fishers jumped out to a 5-0 lead after the first inning. Nick Lukac led off with a double, then Dominic Oliverio batted him in with a center field hit. Oliverio scored when Kaid Muth drew a bases-loaded alk.

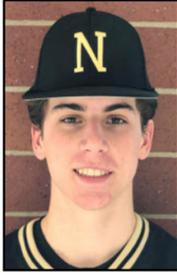

Daniel Owens came up next, and his center field double sent JJ Woolwine and Kiel Brenzewski home. Muth later scored on a fielder's choice by Charlie Walker.

The Millers scored their run in the third inning, when Cooper Miles hit a sacrifice fly to score Cole Barnes. The Tigers added four runs in the bottom of the third, starting with Walker's RBI single to send Grant Whetsel home.

Walker was soon home himself, as Lukac hit a home run in the next at-bat. Jackson Preston later scored on a passed ball. Fishers scored its final run of the game

Huskies swept by Norwell in doubleheader

Hamilton Heights lost both games of a doubleheader to Norwell Saturday at the Huskies' field.

Heights dropped the first game 7-1. Norwell led 6-0 after two innings. The Huskies got their lone run in the third inning, when Luke Stohler's center field hit sent Sam Allen home.

In the second game, Heights lost 3-2. Norwell scored in the first inning, but the Huskies scored two runs in the bottom of the third to take the lead. Lucas Letsinger scored the first run on Sam Fulton's RBI groundout, then Stohler got home on Erik Malott's sacrifice fly.

"Norwell hit the ball early in the first game and we could never get our bats going," said Heights coach JR Moffatt. The coach credited his pitchers, sophomore Brody Piel and junior Dylan Zachary, with providing the Huskies a "solid day on the mound." Piel threw four strikeouts and Zachary tossed three.

"They were able to bunch their hits together and in baseball that's what you look for," said Moffatt. "It's not always how many, but the timing of when those hits come. They were able to put us away early."

Game 2 turned out to be a pitcher's duel, and Moffatt said sophomore Lucas Letsinger and junior Luke Thesier "did a great job of giving us a chance. We just have to hit. That's the bottom line. In baseball you are not gonna win a lot when you struggle to score, simple as that."

The Huskies are 2-4 and will play Tipton on Tuesday to begin a Hoosier Conference series. Moffatt said those games "are always fun."

"If we keep getting rain maybe we will just challenge them in water polo," said Moffatt.
