Tragedy, cover-up and heroism hit the stage

'Failure to Zig Zag' starts Friday at the Cat in Carmel

On July 30, 1945, the USS Indianapolis was returning from a secret mission when it was torpedoed by the Imperial Japanese Navy submarine I-58 and sank in 12 minutes. Only 317 of the 1,195 men onboard survived.

Neither the captain of the USS Indianapolis, Charles McVay III, nor his crew were told the cargo they had just delivered to the island Tinian contained the essential components for the atomic bomb to be dropped in Hiroshima. The crew languished in shark-infested waters while Naval authorities logged the ship safe in port. The navy's cover-up and attempt to make Capt. McVay a scapegoat led to a national scandal.

Never before in military history had a captain been put on trial because his ship was sunk by the enemy.

Starting Friday, July 19, as the survivors and their families gather in downtown Indianapolis for their annual reunion, the Carmel Community Players (CCP) will stage "Failure to Zig Zag: The Story of the USS Indianapolis" at the Cat, 254 Veterans Way, Carmel. According to director Susan Rardin, "Failure to Zig Zag" received its professional premiere at the Indiana Repertory Theatre in 1981 and has not been staged in Indiana since.

Knowing a survivor of the USS Indianapolis

Kevin Caraher plays defense attorney James Harcourt in the Carmel Community Players production of "Failure to Zig Zag." He was interested in the role and in the history of the ship because of a personal connection with a man who served aboard her.

"My family was good friends with the family of USS Indianapolis survivor James O'Donnell," Caraher told The Reporter. "We lived just up the street from them in the Irvington area on the east side. We grew up with his four children in grade school and used to play together a lot. We knew the family really well. That is one of the reasons I wanted to do this show. I have always had an interest in the Indianapolis."

Caraher

While Caraher knew O'Donnell, they never spoke about O'Donnell's experience on the Indianapolis.

"I always figured that was a topic that was off limits," Caraher said. "He was a very quiet man. He was very well respected. When they had the visitation at his funeral several years ago at Holy Spirit out on the eastside, they had to use the gymnasium because of the hundreds of people that came."

Caraher said he learned more about O'Donnell's life and experiences after he passed away.

The Rotary International worldwide year begins on July 1, and on that date all existing Rotary officers relinquish their positions and are replaced by newly-elected individuals for the incoming Rotary year. Sheridan Rotary is no different. Pictured is the new Sheridan Rotary Club President Fred Sturdevant. (In case you haven't guessed, he's the one in the front row with the big grin on his face!) What will it take to prepare today's students for their future in a world that may look very different from today? VISION brings the district state of the art facilities and amenities designed to advance student achievement while maximizing operational efficiencies. Project Vision provides the unique opportunity for the Corporation to create and commit long term to world class learning facilities that allow its students to become capable of adapting, persevering and contributing meaningfully in their local and global community.

Through Project Vision, all aspects of the corporation's operations were examined recognizing the interconnectedness of components of learning, amenities, space, teaching, technology, lighting, aesthetics and furniture, among others. Recommendations were made, a plan outlined and adjustments made to those various components to produce a predictable and sustainable improvements plan, which has become an integral component of Hamilton Heights' roadmap to creating a 21st century learning environment.

Project Vision began in 2012 and has involved dozens of experts within and outside the community, working groups, data, studies, and strong leadership, all designed to create optimal learning and teaching environments for Hamilton Heights students and staff now and well into the future. It has proven to be a shining example of the community's tax dollars at work and, all being accomplished without raising the district total tax rate.

The high school's Media Center, Café, Science Lab, Agriculture, Business, Engineering and Mathematics areas have all been renovated. In addition, the high school has a new soccer facility and added a state of the art greenhouse.

The Middle School has had a complete mechanical and electrical upgrade, including new HVAC equipment and LED lighting, to most of the 54,800 square feet of the building that will remain after the partial demolition of the structure in the next phase of construction. The girls and boys West gym locker rooms, concession, and athletic storage and laundry areas were renovated as part of the first phase of construction. In addition, aesthetic upgrades for a new look and feel in the East and West gyms consisted of new paint, sound systems, athletic wrestling mats and wrestling spot light, scorer's bench and glass safety petitions, among others.

By the 2020-21 school year, the Primary School will feature a new Little Husky Learning Center addition, new gym, new playgrounds and new special education classrooms. There will be a new elementary school (Pre-K through grade 4) and new middle school (grades 5 through 8) with many new amenities. The current middle school will be transformed into the Hamilton Heights Student Activity Center. The high school will have a new North Vestibule (Hamilton Heights Athletic Center) addition, and upgrades to its track, field, football and tennis facilities.

"We understand that the learning space is essential to developing higher order thinking, communication, collaboration and creativity to solve problems and create new ideas," said Project Vision Director Dori Hochstedler at the helm of the transformation. "This new construction and upgrades support our educators in facilitating student-centered and more personalized learning for our students. We are already seeing the impact on the students who say they are more engaged and motivated to learn."

city is ready. (Bridges are a county responsibility.)

To get the actual work underway, the city could bond the project. This is something that not everyone finds preferable, but it is a way to get improvements underway more quickly, and pay for them in the future.

This project is only one of several outlined by Noblesville officials in recent months. A new police headquarters, the Nickel Plate Trail, more downtown parking, and the rebuilding of Noblesville's section of the State Road 37 upgrade are the major and most costly of these.

Already underway is the public-private development named the Levinson, the new pedestrian bridge along Logan Street and the Midland Trail. But, to undertake the most expensive projects such as Pleasant Street, a funding source must be found.

When considering bonding, those in favor of such a funding source point out that not only does bonding raise funds quickly, but the people who will enjoy the benefits in future years will pay their share of retiring the debt and paying the interest costs rather than current residents paying the full amount.

There are, in some cases, a couple of other options for financing public projects. A federal transportation grant involving local matching requirements and a lengthy processing period is one way to fund road projects. Tax Increment Financing (TIF) in some cases can be used to assist in redeveloping blighted areas of a city.

On Jan. 1, a new city administration takes office. Chris Jensen, certain to become mayor, has generally supported the plans offered by the current administration of Mayor John Ditslear. But, neither has yet publicly endorsed a specific funding mechanism for the various needs both say exist.

The city community relations office says studies are ongoing.

I was born and raised right here in Noblesville. I grew up in a home without domestic violence or assault - it wasn't something I saw, or even heard about. But when I was introduced to Prevail of Central Indiana, I was shocked by the number of individuals who are affected by domestic violence. In 2018 alone, Prevail helped more than 4,000 clients in Hamilton County. (Nearly 80 percent of clients are women and children.) Prevail is strictly confidential, and since their core values include integrity and respect, they provide their services at no charge. Domestic violence and abuse are hard topics to discuss, so you don't often hear about them. But at Tom Wood Volkswagen in Noblesville, we're breaking the taboo and raising awareness for Prevail, an organization that helps families in Hamilton County. - Mike Bragg, GM of Tom Wood Volkswagen in Noblesville

To help Hamilton County families affected by domestic violence and sexual abuse, you can donate the following items:

- Art supplies (for children to journal and express their emotions)
- Bottled water (8 oz. bottles, preferably)
- Individually packaged snacks
- Gas cards (many women have no access to funds after fleeing their abuser)

You can drop off items at Tom Wood Volkswagen in Noblesville, located at 14701 Tom Wood Way. You can also donate directly to Prevail of Central Indiana by visiting Prevailinc.org.

"A lot of younger men don't even know about the Indy and secret mission and the importance of the ship," Rardin told The Reporter.

On the Indianapolis's return voyage when they were supposed to go to Leyte, they were sunk by the Japanese.

"The Indy actually got off three S.O.S. calls," Rardin said. "They were all received. The Navy chose to not respond for various reasons. If they would have responded to any one of them, it would have changed the course of history. These men who delivered the parts of the bomb that would help end the war were not treated with the respect I think they deserved for that mission. They were marked as not important. The three S.O.S. calls were not responded to. Only by sheer luck did someone fly over and see the men in the water, then proceed to call it in and rescue these gentlemen."

Many know of the USS Indianapolis from the monologue by Robert Shaw's character, Quint, in the 1975 movie "Jaws." That limited view of the Indianapolis is one reason Rardin wanted to stage this play.

"That's one of the things that is concerning to me - I don't want people to think of the Indianapolis only as the men in the water with the sharks because it is so much more than that," Rardin said. "These are heroes who changed the course of history. [The shark attacks] are addressed in this show and it is a very respectful. What we are doing with those scenes, because we are in a much smaller venue, I think is a much stronger scene."

Captain McVay

Retired Hamilton Southeastern teacher Tim Latimer plays the role of Capt. McVay. This is his third play with CCP.

"When I saw this on CCP's website in March I ordered the script," Latimer told The Reporter. "I was convinced I wanted to play the prosecutor's role. I thought, 'That's a worthy admiral.' Both of those guys are kind of jerks and I have had a couple plays where I got to play the bad guy and I kind of like that. When I came to auditions I fully expected to be the prosecutor, but they asked me to read a lot of McVay."

Latimer says he hopes he can portray Capt. McVay in a way that both McVay himself and the men who knew him would be proud of.

"I want to play the part in such a way that if Capt. McVay were alive, he'd approve," Latimer said. "Capt. McVay's crew loved him and many people felt a great empathy for him. I want people to see how he interacted with the men on his ship."

The challenge of playing a historical character from relatively recent history is not lost on Latimer.

"There is a great deal of pressure to do it right," Latimer said. "My biggest fear is for somebody to come up after the play and say, 'Well Capt. McVay wasn't like that at all.' I don't want that to happen and I don't think it will. I hope that people will say I had a great portrayal of Capt. McVay. That's what you want in community theater - for people to feel you did a good job."

Commander Hashimoto

In his first appearance on stage, Ron Gotanco plays the role of Japanese submarine commander Mochit-sura Hashimoto.

Gotanco

Gotanco told The Reporter he has been interested in acting for a long time but has never stepped into the spotlight before.

"I did a lot of coursework in high school and college," Gotanco said. "I did not have the free time to do anything and I wasn't going to make a career out of it, so 25 years later here I am."

For his first role, Gotanco has jumped right into the deep end.

"It is a very intense character," Gotanco said. "This is five months after the sinking of the Indianapolis and the end of World War II. I am playing the enemy. My character was involved in the Pearl Harbor attack. I play the one who sunk the Indianapolis. The men who survived look at me as the cause of a lot of their misery and suffering. I am in a courtroom full of hostility and foreigners. You will see a transformation. It is an unlikely comrade that I find in Capt. McVay."

Gotanco draws on his own life as well as a great deal of research in his work to portray Hashimoto.

"It is easy to start with the obvious: The physical differences," Gotanco said. "Even though I was born here in the United States, I physically look different than everyone else in the play. You can start there. The next step I took was to do as much research as I could about him."

According to Gotanco, his character was the eighth child in his family. His father was a Shinto priest who wanted him to go to the naval academy to try to better his status and position.

"From what I can read he was quite a patriotic person," Gotanco said. "Later he became more of a passivist. He eventually became a Shinto priest like his father. It is well known that he was a one of the people who lobbied Congress and the Navy to exonerate McVay."

Capt. McVay was finally exonerated Oct. 30, 2000, five days after Hashimoto passed away.

"The difficulty is going through that transformation of being in a hostile environment, finding someone you relate to, who turns out to be the person who should have the most hostility against you, develop this respect for him, and in the end develop what sounds like a lifelong tie - something that connects the two of them," Gotanco said.

The USS Indianapolis sank on July 30, 1945. Wreckage of the ship was finally located on Aug. 19, 2017, in the Philippine Sea at a depth of 18,044 feet.

CCP was invited by Marie Beason from the Indiana War Memorials organization to perform scenes at the USS Indianapolis Survivors Luncheon on Friday, July 19. Hours later they will take the stage for opening night at the Cat.

then I made my decision. My gut would often tell me "I told you so."

All along my gut was telling me what I should do. It was just a feeling. Deep down I knew what the answer should be or the decision I needed to make.

Sometimes I ignored my gut feeling because it was not giving me the answer I wanted. My heart, my mind and my gut wrestled and I endured a war of tugging.

I became exhausted. I would put my decision on the "to be decided later" shelf. Oh yes, the lovely, or rather not so lovely, place of procrastination.

Procrastination is where decisions fell into an abyss until I was forced to make them. Oh, the UGH of it all.

I knew what I needed to do, but it's not until I had to do it that I gathered all my knowledge and sorted through my feelings to make the decision I should have made long before.

So much wasted time, effort and feelings.

I even wrestled with the time worn thoughts of "What will people think about my decision?"

When I made my decision it was sometimes like tearing a Band-Aid off my heart. Sometimes, it was instant relief - not just that it was the right decision but that I finally made the decision. There were a few times that other people made the decision for me. That led to a lot of frustration and hurt.

I struggled with being hurt when people would question my decision. I would find myself explaining my decision to some who would never understand why I made the decision that I made. Actually, they were not owed an explanation.

The percentage of my right decisions far outweigh those that were bad decisions.

You know what? The bad decisions were usually that I should have made the right decision sooner rather than later.

There were those bad decisions that were just lessons learned. Some came with painful regrets. Some came with "Well, I won't let that happen again."

I have been educated at the School of Hard Knocks which helped to make me the woman I am today. A bit battered yet strong. A bit wise because of wrong decisions. A woman who trusts her gut. A woman who stands by her decisions no matter the opinion of others.

I think my gut is proud of the woman I have become. I might just decide to buy me a pair of red ruby shoes. I think Dorothy and my gut would approve of that decision.

SURVIVOR

onboard the Indianapolis would come from his chapter in the book 'Only 317 Survived,' which is a compilation of survivors' stories," Caraher said. "He always had a booth at Irish Fest with some of his buddies pushing that book. Proceeds went to the Indianapolis Monument. I have a copy with a few of the other survivors' signatures in there as well."

There is a statue of O'Donnell that the city dedicated outside of the City Market in downtown Indianapolis.

Caraher said playing this role has taught him a great deal about the Indianapolis and about naval history.

"What I was surprised at was naval procedures back then," Caraher said. "I was surprised that during the war they had procedures in place that didn't seem to make sense at all. Number one, which we touch on in the script, is that is a ship was overdue in port there was no procedure for reporting its non-arrival. They just erased it off the board. That is astounding to me."

The radio officer in the Indianapolis was able to send multiple distress calls and they were received, but nothing was done about them.

"The Army pilot who flew over saw distress flares and reported it, but nothing was done about it," Caraher said. "Those things are just mind-boggling. The Army reported it to their own superior officers. During that time the Army and the Navy didn't communicate very well with one another, which is amazing. Needless to say, those procedures did change after the war."

Carmel philanthropist provides new workout room for Tipton H.S.

The REPORTER

Tipton Community School Corporation (TCSC) recently announced that it is getting a new workout facility from the Carmel-based philanthropist and Founder/CEO of Four Quadrants Advisory, Jason Smith. Smith states his inspiration for this project came from a former Tipton High School alum, Steve Powell.

Powell graduated from Tipton High School in 1991 and went on to play football for Purdue University. After college, Powell returned to Tipton to give back in his own way to the high school he loved. For many years Powell coached track and field and football at the high school. Sadly, Powell lost his battle with brain cancer in October 2018.

"I think it's a great and touching gesture to have the new weight room dedicated in Steve's memory," said Tipton High School Principal Rik Stillson. "He had a huge passion for not only teaching students how to be fit and physically stronger but many valuable life lessons along the way. It's a fitting tribute to Steve."

During a conversation with Aaron Tolle, Head Football Coach for the Tipton Blue Devils in 2018, Smith said that Tolle mentioned the weight room was the same as it was 25 years ago when he used to use it. "When I saw the condition of the weight room I wondered how in the world can these kids compete with other schools when their weight room hasn't been updated in a quarter of a century?" recalled Smith, who thought maybe there is something he could do to help.

Smith would go on to form a committee with Tolle, Stillson, and Tipton Athletic Director Kory Fernung to figure out how to make this happen. With a shrinking City tax base and reduced school funding at all levels, significant private donations like this do not happen often. Smith, a seasoned businessman, felt he could partner with the Tipton School Corporation for a win-win.

"Together, we were able to find some money in bonds that had not been used and coupled with our multi-year donation, we are making it happen," said Smith, who credits TCSC Superintendent Kevin Emsweller for being a major player in this project.

"A couple of years ago, a very successful student athlete wrote me a letter as part of a class project," said Emsweller. "She explained why she went to a gym in Kokomo for training instead of our weight room. She also shared reasons for updating the weight room. While we looked at various options for upgrading the facilities including building a fieldhouse, costs were prohibitive. Mr. Smith's generous donation provided an impetus to take on this much needed upgrade to the weight room, not just for student athletes, but for all students as we place an emphasis on wellness."

"From the first time I sat down with Kevin, he was very supportive and proactive in helping with the construction part,"

Photo provided

Levi Deiner, Project Manager with Gibson Construction, and TCSC Superintendent Kevin Emsweller review plans for the renovation of Tipton High School's weight room.

said Smith, who also complimented Aaron's hard work and contributions in bringing this project to reality. "Aaron's role was vital working closely with equipment vendors, and visiting other schools so he could develop an informed equipment plan which led to getting the right equipment at a fair price."

"This new renovation is going to do wonders for Tipton High School and its student athletes," Tolle pointed out.

Stillson agrees. "Physical fitness is an important part of education," he noted. "It's a piece that oftentimes gets overlooked. I'm very excited that we are upgrading the weight room to provide a safe and appealing classroom to give students that opportunity."

"Students today see how these alumni support them now and that is instilled in them for when they have the opportunity to help in the future," said TCSC School Board President Rick Powell.

Construction started in early June and is expected to be complete by mid-August. A special community ribbon cutting and dedication on the new facility will take place later in the fall.

Fishers Police adding avenues to provide tips

By LARRY LANNAN
LarryInFishers.com

Fishers Police will be expanding the ways citizens can provide tips to local officers. Many of the systems already in place will continue but new options are coming through partnerships with private companies.

Here are more details, from a Fishers Police Department news release:

The Fishers Police Department announced a recent partnership with the Texas-based company, Anderson Software, to provide a more seamless and efficient way for community members to offer information to help solve and prevent crimes or other serious matters. P3 Intel will provide another valuable resource to Fishers residents partnering with the police department to proactively maintain a safe community.

The Fishers Police Department will now be accepting tips via the web, FPD social media platforms, and by way of the new, free FPD Tips mobile app available on the iOS and Android platforms, greatly enhancing the mobile tip submission process. Anderson Software's sophisticated encryption processes obscure any and all identifying information and provide assured confidentiality for tipsters.

Even without the app, there is still an easy and secure option for submitting tips from any internet or mobile browser by going to fishers.in.us/241/Police.

Using whichever method, once a person submits a tip, they will be given a TIP ID and password. FPD Crime Tips is not monitored 24/7 and all emergency situations must be reported to 9-1-1 or 317-773-1282.

This new FPD Crime Tip software is just one resource the agency is using to connect and communicate with residents. In addition, residents can also report non-emergency situations thru the FPD Crime Watch App. For more information please visit crime-watch.fishers.in.us. It is important to remember that neither the Crime Tip nor the Crime Watch Apps are designed to replace 9-1-1.

Messiest day of the year in Fishers

Saturday was a day to wear your most beat-up shoes and clothing – it was Mud Day 2019 at Cyntheanne Park in Fishers. Youngsters, accompanied by adults, spent part of the day covering themselves in mud. This year's Mud Day featured mud volleyball, tug-of-war, live entertainment and even a mud run.

Indy nonprofit seeks to expand understanding of food insecurity

Submitted

Editor's note: The following was sent to the Hamilton County Reporter from Faith Hope and Love Community, an Indianapolis nonprofit which "aims to be a catalyst for change by engaging in relationships with food insecure neighbors on their path to self-sufficiency through mission food pantry training."

Faith Hope and Love Community (FHL) announced the 15th annual FHL Week's theme is Hunger Awareness Week from July 20 to 27. This is the first series of events in Indiana where businesses, churches and local residents will come together to raise more awareness of the food insecurity problem that has been lingering in the state. This week is dedicated to raise awareness in order to help alleviate hunger.

Around 1 in 9 Americans suffer from food insecurity, about 42 million. In Indiana, 1 in 6 Hoosiers are food insecure, totaling 910,000. Indianapolis was labeled as one of the largest food deserts in the nation.

Food insecurity plus food deserts equals hungry children, families and workers. This has profound effects on communities' immediate health, as well as state and national health.

Beyond stress and fatigue, serious and long-term health problems have links to food insecurity, even the profitability and security of your business. Type 2 diabetes and heart problems are responsible for thousands of deaths and millions of dollars in medical expenses each year and are also closely linked to food insecurity. The negative health effects reach beyond the walls of hospitals and into schools, neighborhoods, businesses and homes.

Food insecurity has been directly linked to multiple measures of failure in school, from truancy and behavior issues, to grades and test scores. Income plays a major role in food insecurity: 72 percent of households affected by food insecurity live at or below the federal poverty level with a median annual household income of $9,175.

A staggering 29 percent of repeat food pantry clients have full-time jobs. A study from Clemson University found that a 1 percent increase in food insecurity led to a startling 12 percent increase on violent crime. Another study by a university revealed that more than one-third of college students are food insecure.

These issues are affecting Indiana's neighborhoods and cities.

And yet, a study revealed that America has more than enough food to feed everyone. But the land of plenty is also the land of waste. According to some studies, $162 billion worth of produce (alone) is wasted and 63 million tons of food is wasted every year. Households contribute the most waste, which is about 27 million tons.

So where's the gap between 42 million people experiencing food insecurity and 63 million tons of wasted food? Beyond the physical help, relational, logical and spiritual solutions are needed. Hunger is complex and cannot be solved by just food alone. There needs to be a redefining of the deeper role of food pantries – not just a place to distribute food but a place of establishing a community of faith, hope and love. In the process of giving food away, there needs to be an uncovering of the other deep-seated needs such as relationships, job training, education, counseling and other referrals. Beyond the pain of hunger is also pain of emotions that affect one's interaction with others; it affects the learning capacity of the children and the productivity and safety of workers.

Many Hoosiers are not aware of these unfortunate statistics. In an effort to raise the public consciousness about hunger and innovative solutions, FHL is hosting the Hunger Awareness Week in Indiana.

Schedule of events

- Hunger Walk from 9 a.m. to noon on Saturday, July 20 at the Indianapolis Canal starting at Walnut Street basin. Corporations and other organizations are invited to take a part in this hunger walk. State Senator and Indianapolis mayoral candidate Jim Merritt will speak about hunger.

- Prayer Walk on Sunday, July 21. Local churches will do prayer walk for an hour in their own neighborhoods and will start simultaneously at 3 p.m. The prayer walkers are encouraged to bring canned goods to their local churches to help in raise hunger awareness and help local food pantries.

- Hunger (0-0-1) Challenge on Monday through Friday, July 22 to 26. This event is to challenge individuals to experience how it feels to be hungry by eating one meal a day. Each participant is encouraged to raise awareness and support the cause of Faith Hope and Love by raising funds in alleviating hunger beyond bags of groceries. At their option, they can join a group of people who will be walking from one food pantry to further experience the plight of some food insecure population. Details of the route will be published at fhlinternational.info.

- Hunger Awareness Community Gathering from 9 a.m. to 2 p.m. on Saturday, July 27 at 1100 W. 42nd St., Indianapolis. This is open to the families and residents to fellowship, fun things with the kids with former Indianapolis Colts players and food trucks. Call 317-572-5793 or email info@fhlinternational.org for available vendor space before July 17.

About Faith Hope and Love Community

Faith Hope and Love Community is a catalyst for change by engaging in relationships with food insecure neighbors on their path to self-sufficiency. Poverty creates real challenges for individuals, their families and communities. Growing numbers of Indianapolis residents are struggling to make enough money to consistently feed and support their families. Despite the Indianapolis community's heroic efforts, far too many people continue to go hungry and require food assistance. Faith Hope and Love Community is redefining the deeper role of a food pantry in a neighborhood: It's about people, not just about food.

Chasing Coral in Noblesville

By STU CLAMPITT
ReadTheReporter.com

The world's coral reefs are dying and one Noblesville group is trying to raise awareness about this global environmental issue.

Kara Bilbrey is a member of the Social Justice and Advocacy Team at Noblesville First United Methodist Church, 2051 Monument St.

Bilbrey, who helps organize a monthly film and discussion event at the church, spoke to The Reporter about this month's film, "Chasing Coral." The church calls this program the Just Films series, and it takes place the third Monday of each month.

At 6:30 p.m. on Monday, July 15, the Social Justice and Advocacy Team will continue its Just Films series in The Vine room, which can be reached by entering through Doors 4 and 5.

"The evening will feature the visually stunning 'Chasing Coral,' a 2017 documentary film about a team of divers, scientists and photographers around the world who document the disappearance of coral reefs caused by global warming," Bilbrey told The Reporter.

Monday's guest expert will be Indianapolis Zoo Oceans Area Manager Sally Hoke.

According to Bilbrey, the church will screen the porter this film moved her deeply.

"For me it was really impactful," Bilbrey said. "You hear that honeybees are dying and you hear that polar bears are dying, but you still see honeybees and you still see polar bears on videos. But for the coral reefs it is so impactful because one minute they are there – beautiful and colorful and healthy – and two months later they are dead. They are nothing but skeletons with brown algae growing on them."

The event is free and open to the public. Coffee, water and popcorn will be provided.

You can learn more about "Chasing Coral" and watch the trailer at chasing-coral.com.

Indiana seeks federal aid for 88 counties over crop losses

WISH-TV | wishtv.com

Gov. Eric Holcomb is seeking federal disaster aid for farmers across most of Indiana for crop losses caused by flooding and excessive rainfall during the planting season.

Holcomb said Friday his request to the U.S. Department of Agriculture seeks an agricultural disaster designation for 88 of Indiana's 92 counties.

The four Indiana counties not included in the governor's request are Benton, Rush, Shelby and Warren counties.

Holcomb says persistent rainfall in recent months have left fields saturated statewide, "hurting Indiana crops and our farmers."

A disaster designation can be requested when at least 30 percent of one crop is damaged or lost in a county. The 88 counties included in Holcomb's request have reported data which meet that threshold.

A disaster designation would make emergency low-interest loans available to farmers.

As of Saturday, July 13, the parking stalls along the west side of Lantern Road between Commercial Drive and North Street are closed for repairs. The closure is expected to last one week.

When was the state's first police academy held?

The REPORTER

1906 – Gary was incorporated by the United States Steel Corporation. It was named for the company's founder, Judge Elbert Henry Gary. The new city grew quickly and within 20 years was one of the largest in the state.

1913 – Comedian Red Skelton was born in Vincennes. Starting as a circus clown, he became famous in vaudeville, movies, radio and television. Today he is honored by a museum in his hometown which includes a fully-interactive exhibit entitled "Red Skelton: A Legacy of Laughter."

1926 – Dedication ceremonies were held near Angola for land that would become Indiana's fifth state park. Originally called Lake James Park, the name was changed to Pokagon to reflect the area's Native American heritage and Potawatomi leaders Leopold and Simon Pokagon. Among those at the ceremony were Governor Ed Jackson and former Governor James Goodrich.

1935 – The first Indiana State Police Academy was held at the State Fairgrounds. The recruits slept on army cots on the second floor of the horse barn and took their meals at the State Fair Hotel near Gate 6. The rigorous five-week training program produced the first class of formally-trained state troopers.

1950 – Sales of television sets were expected to rise in Indianapolis as WFBM announced plans to carry network programs. Viewers could look forward to seeing the World Series and popular shows featuring Arthur Godfrey, Jack Benny and Hopalong Cassidy. Most of the RCA receivers were built in factories in Indianapolis, Bloomington and Marion. A 19-inch console set at the time cost $450, which, in today's dollars, is over $4,000.

1969 – 50 years ago, the headline "THEY MADE IT" from the South Bend Tribune said it all as the whole world watched the progress of the Apollo 11 mission. Purdue University graduate Neil Armstrong became the first person to walk on the surface of the moon. He was 239,000 miles from home when he stepped from the lunar module Eagle and said, "That's one small step for a man, one giant leap for mankind."

Indiana receives $1.1M in insurance settlement

The REPORTER

The Indiana Department of Insurance (IDOI) was the Managing Lead State for a market conduct examination of QBE Holdings, Inc. (QBE) that resulted in a settlement between QBE and 47 jurisdictions.

The exam resulted in findings that some Indiana consumers were being overcharged for force placed property insurance coverage (insurance placed by a lender who holds a mortgage on the property) from 2009 to 2014. As part of the multi-state market conduct settlement agreement with QBE, Indiana received $1,127,990.

IDOI is sending refunds for the claims received by Hoosiers for the overcharges. The average refund is $141 and approximately 6,400 valid claims were received and processed.

"The Department will continue to perform market conduct examinations of insurance companies licensed to do business in our state to ensure they are complying with the insurance laws intended to provide Indiana consumers with fair rates and fair claims practices," said IDOI Commissioner Stephen W. Robertson.

QBE is the fifth refund project conducted by IDOI. Others included Tigor of Florida and Meridian Title for overcharges on title insurance, and American Modern and Assurant for overcharges of force placed property insurance. Refunds were successfully issued for those overcharges as well.

TODAY'S BIBLE READING

Again the next day after John stood, and two of his disciples; And looking upon Jesus as he walked, he saith, Behold the Lamb of God! And the two disciples heard him speak, and they followed Jesus. Then Jesus turned, and saw them following, and saith unto them, What seek ye? They said unto him, Rabbi, (which is to say, being interpreted, Master,) where dwellest thou? He saith unto them, Come and see. They came and saw where he dwelt, and abode with him that day: for it was about the tenth hour. One of the two which heard John speak, and followed him, was Andrew, Simon Peter's brother. He first findeth his own brother Simon, and saith unto him, We have found the Messias, which is, being interpreted, the Christ. And he brought him to Jesus. And when Jesus beheld him, he said, Thou art Simon the son of Jona: thou shalt be called Cephas, which is by interpretation, A stone.
