Noblesville's Mike Carr named Nickel Plate Indiana Firefighter of the Year Express dinner train sold out

The REPORTER

Noblesville's Mike Carr was honored with the prestigious 2019 Indiana Firefighter of the Year Award during a private ceremony on Thursday with members of the Noblesville Fire Department and Mayor John Ditslear. Carr was voted by his peers in the fire prevention community for the award, but was unable to attend the annual Indiana Emergency Response Conference in Indianapolis when it was announced.

"Mike Carr has been a tenacious advocate of our active shooter program since he started building it over a more fitting honor for him assessing the need for an acfive years ago," Noblesville Fire Chief Greg Wyant said. community recognized Noblesville's longest serving mayor, John Ditslear.

The tribute honoring Ditslear, and his 16 years serving as Noblesville's mayor, was held at the Embassy Suites Conference Center and was sponsored by the Noblesville Chamber of Commerce.

During the event, Noblesville City Court Judge Matt Cook described Ditslear as a good role model and someone who cares about his community. "There is one word when I think of John, and that is loyal."

on his ability to lead Noblesville

Ditslear says he plans to continue serving Hamilton County.

Cook also commended Ditslear through a time of unprecedented growth and prosperity.

Kathy Williams recanted how Ditslear stepped into the role of mayor as a businessman during a time when Noblesville needed that.

"Noblesville and Hamilton County are better places because of John Ditslear," said Hamilton County Commissioner Mark Heirbrandt.

Mayor Ditslear closed the event by saying, "It has been a great run and we are going to keep on running till Dec. 31."

When describing what the future may hold, Ditslear said, "I'm looking forward to serving someone, somewhere in Noblesville, certainly in the county."

Soldier's remains being returned home for burial

By FRED SWIFT | ReadTheReporter.com

After 51 years, the remains of Vietnam War victim Alan Bardach are being returned to Indiana for burial. Bardach whose family lived near Westfield at the time of his death, was killed in action in January 1968.

A burial with full military honors will be conducted on Saturday, Oct. 5 in Crown Hill Cemetery in Indianapolis. The 1 p.m. service at the Bardach family plot is open to the public, according to Bardach's brother, Neil.

Alan Bardach, whose name appears on the Veteran's Memorial on the Courthouse Square along with others killed in Southeast Asia, was the son of Mr. and Mrs. Thornton Bardach. His brother and sister-in-law, Lee and Gail Bardach, currently live in Carmel.

Clay Twp. fieldhouse in the works associated with constructing its own

The REPORTER

Clay Township is proceeding with design and construction of a new multi-use indoor fieldhouse at Mark Badger Memorial Park after the Carmel City Board of Zoning Appeals voted unanimously on Monday to approve several variances associated with the project.

Several people from the surrounding area, including church and school leaders, spoke in favor of the fieldhouse, which is expected to exceed 120,000 square feet. While cost estimates associated with the project are still being finalized, officials expect construction to begin by January 2020.

The fieldhouse is one of 19 projects of the Clay Township Impact Program. All projects are being funded by bonds and will be completed over the next three years.

"This facility will be an incredible opportunity not only for the Car-

Generation gap can cause fashion challenges

I never thought about what I wore growing up. I was fortunate to be in a typical Indiana middle-class family - well, sort of. My parents adopted me when they were 38.

Nowadays it's not unheard of to have a baby in your late 30s (or late 40s for that matter.) But back then this was unusual. I never cared, as they still had plenty of energy and were terrific.

I always thought Mom's clothes looked nice on her and knew her friends considered her to be a sharp dresser. So, I didn't think much when she passed items down to me in my teens and 20s.

It may have taken me decades to get the fore buying them, paying attention to fit hang of it, but I wouldn't change my experience for the world. And now, I'm the one taking Mom clothes shopping. But don't worry, I'm not going to dress her too young for her age. Stacy and Clinton are still with

Noblesville attorney selected for State Supreme Court Tech Working Group

Submitted

Local attorney Seth R. Wilson of Adler Attorneys in Noblesville has been selected as a member of the Indiana Supreme Court's 12-person Technology Working group to work on new technology initiatives.

Indiana has been a national leader in justice reform in areas such as evidenced-based decision making, pre-trial release, problem solving courts and commercial courts. The Indiana Supreme Court is working on additional innovation opportunities designed to make Indiana's system of justice more efficient, less expensive and easier to navigate. At the same time, it is continuing to ensure that justice is fairly administered and the rights of all litigants are protected.

Toward that end, the Indiana Supreme Court has created the Indiana Innovation Initiative to analyze research on justice reform, assess the impact of reform efforts in other states, identify innovative strategies to manage difference case types, and make recommendations for best practices.

Improving quality of life for cancer patients

Dear Editor:

A cancer diagnosis changes your whole world. I witnessed this first hand when I was a caregiver for my mother when she was diagnosed with Non-Hodgkin's Lymphoma in 2000. Every day brings a new and different challenge; fear, anxiety and pain are a regular part of the diagnosis and treatment of a serious disease. Over time, these can take a toll on your quality of life.

But there is a promising field of medical care that could change the way care for those with a serious illness like cancer. Palliative care treats the whole patient, not just the disease. Specialized medical professionals can improve the quality of life of the patient and their family through coordination of care, focusing on relief from pain and other symptoms of the disease and treatment. Not only can it improve patient experience and outcomes, it can also reduce medical costs.

A couple weeks ago, I traveled to Washington, D.C., to urge Senator Braun to support the Palliative Care and Hospice Education and Training Act, a bill that would increase education of and access to palliative care. This bipartisan legislation has tremendous support in both the House and Senate, and it could make a world of difference for cancer patients, like my mother, and their families.

Congress has the opportunity to increase access to palliative care, so patients and their families have that extra layer of support when they need it most. Join me in calling on our lawmakers to help move this important bill forward.

Alan was the son of Thornton A. and Lillian G. Bardach. He was a 1961 graduate of Broad Ripple High School in Indianapolis and a 1966 graduate of Purdue University, where he was a member of the Phi Gamma Delta Fraternity.

He is survived by his sister, Ann Bardach Vollmar (David); his brothers, Neil (Andrea), Lee (Gail) and Joel (Priscilla) Bardach; and his daughter, Kristen Vandiver (Troy).

TODAY'S BIBLE READING

They say unto the blind man again, What sayest thou of him, that he hath opened thine eyes? He said, He is a prophet. But the Jews did not believe concerning him, that he had been blind, and received his sight, until they called the parents of him that had received his sight. And they asked them, saying, Is this your son, who ye say was born blind? how then doth he now see? His parents answered them and said, We know that this is our son, and that he was born blind: But by what means he now seeth, we know not; or who hath opened his eyes, we know not: he is of age; ask him: he shall speak for himself. These words spake his parents, because they feared the Jews: for the Jews had agreed already, that if any man did confess that he was Christ, he should be put out of the synagogue. John 9:17-22 (KJV)
