Carmel Police Department's night shift gathered near Main Street and the Monon Trail to secure an American flag that had been placed by an anonymous person on the popular statue that commemorates fallen Carmel Police Officer Frank Carey, who was shot and killed by Cyclone Johnson in 1900.

CPD honors display of support by adopting flag

The REPORTER

On Friday, just after 1 a.m., a Carmel police officer noticed something attached to the statue honoring Officer Frank Carey at Main Street and the Monon Greenway.

According to the Carmel Police Department, due to recent vandalism of the statue earlier in the week, the officer was concerned it happened again. Instead of finding the statue damaged, the officer discovered the item was an American flag fashioned like a cape. It was properly aligned for vertical display and fastened so it wouldn't fall to the ground.

CPD officers decided they wanted to honor the display of support from the community by adopting the flag for a new department tradition.

The flag was secured by members of the police department, properly folded, and given to an officer to keep for the remainder of their shift. The flag was then passed on to an officer from the oncoming shift and will continue to be passed on so it will always be on patrol with CPD.

A statement issued by the Carmel Police Department said the following:

"In addition to being a tangible representation of our community's support, the flag will also be a reminder that our actions and our care in performing our duties should live up to the principles and ideals the flag represents, and that we should strive to never let our actions dishonor those ideals or violate the public trust that was powerfully represented by one quiet anonymous act. In addition, the Carmel Police Department would like to express its sincere appreciation of this display of patriotism and kindness."

Deadline for penalty waiver on property taxes approaching

The REPORTER

Property taxes were due for residents in the State of Indiana on Monday, May 11. However, an executive order issued by Governor Eric Holcomb gave folks who needed extra time in making those payments an extra 60 days without penalty.

The deadline for that payment is Friday, July 10.

The executive order issued March 19 asks counties to waive penalties for delinquent non-escrow property taxes – both real and personal – paid for up to 60 days.

"Property taxes are more critical now more than ever,"

Hamilton County Treasurer Jennifer Templeton said. "These taxes are distributed to our police and fire departments, schools, and trustees – services that are critical to our COVID-19 recovery efforts. Paying your property taxes ensures no disruption to these services."

Taxpayers have several options for making their payments including the following:

- Pay online at this link.

Templeton

Online payment fees do apply; e-Checks are $1 and credit cards are 2.5 percent.

- Drop off payments at the antique drop box outside the east door of the Old Courthouse.

- Drop off payments at the Treasurer's Office in the Old Courthouse in Noblesville.

If you have any questions about property taxes, please call the Treasurer's Office at (317) 776-9620 and select Option 7.

Leaders should speak out against violence

The insane idea of cleansing history is out of control in America and has graduated into an anarchy-like assault on authority.

What started out as a protest over the death of a black man in Minneapolis has even reached Hamilton County with the defacing of the statue of a police officer in Carmel.

History is history and it is not all clean. It cannot be changed no matter how many monuments and statues are removed or vandalized. But, radical elements in our society are trying, and we can only guess what the next step will be.

Will there be a move to change history books to present a more politically correct version of our past?

Too many people in leadership positions appear intimidated by radicals calling for all sorts of crazy measures, the most frightening of which is defunding police agencies.

Back to that defacing of the Carmel police officer statue: The vandals who did that have no idea who the memorialized Deputy Frank Carey was. He was shot and killed in 1900 by an unstable man who Carey was taking to court.

In the current situation it is time for reasonable people to speak out against the lunatics. Peaceful protest is one thing, but what we are seeing from coast to coast is not that.

Westfield hotels full for the weekend

The REPORTER

The City of Westfield reported on Friday its hotels are at full capacity for the weekend of June 27-28. In addition, the city's four hotels, which remained open during Indiana's lockdown but at minimal capacity, report expectations to be at or near capacity every weekend in July.

This increased activity is related to the reactivation of the Grand Park Sports Campus. Grand Park's re-open strategy and campus guidelines can be found at grandpark.org. The city's hotels have also increased sanitization and health/safety practices.

This weekend Grand Park hosts The Grail lacrosse tournament, the Great Lakes National Qualifier baseball tournament, the Amateur Baseball Championships and the Grand Park Frenzy (baseball).

A study from Hamilton County Tourism reports Grand Park is responsible for generating more than 547,000 hotel room nights each year in Central Indiana.

Heights Youth Assistance Program continues good work – whether schools are open or not

The REPORTER

The work of Hamilton Heights Youth Assistance Program never stops and is ongoing whether the school buildings are open or closed. The program, now in its sixth year at Heights, has been and continues to be a lifeline to services for district families in need.

Mary Ann Haymaker, Youth Assistance Early Intervention Advocate, spearheads the program at Heights and has become the "go to" for connecting Husky families to resources for food, clothing, financial assistance, mental health counseling, medication management, parenting support and a little bit of everything in between. She is supported by a vast network of compassionate partners in every sector of the county. She works in tandem with other in-school advocates serving schools in Hamilton County.

"The harmful effects of this pandemic have not been distributed equally," Haymaker said. "The socio-economic impact and, in some cases, by mitigation measures, are resulting in additional hardships for families, many who are already struggling. The needs and our caseloads are increasing."

During this period of off-site instruction and physical distancing, Haymaker has been made it a point to reach out and keep in touch with the families to make sure they know this program services are not shuttered and to make sure they are doing ok. She also checks in regularly with program supporters.

"Our families are extremely grateful to continue their connection to the program and we are extremely grateful to our supporters who are there when we need them," Haymaker said. "Our County Youth Assistance team meets virtually each week to discuss the needs and progress of our communities to stay in close contact to make everyone who needs assistance receives it."

Haymaker has been appreciative of the of the community's efforts to help to keep the shelves full at local food pantries to ensure lo-

Morse Lake cleanup set for July 18

The REPORTER

The Morse Waterways Association (MWA) is organizing its 16th annual lake cleanup from 8 a.m. to noon on Saturday, July 18. Volunteers are needed along the waterfront, in the water at the shoreline, and on boats and personal watercraft to gather the debris and bring it to Red Bridge Park for removal. Boats/ personal watercraft of any type are needed and appreciated.

All residents are encouraged to remove and haul larger logs and debris from in front of their property or elsewhere to the southernmost dock at Red Bridge Park, just south of the kayak launch. They may be delivered as early as Thursday, July 16, and must be securely tied to the dock or shore so they can't float out.

Volunteers will pull logs out of the lake and use chain saws to cut the logs into manageable pieces to be placed in the dump trucks and hauled away. These logs will be taken to Green Cycle in Noblesville to be recycled as mulch. Other volunteers will work along the shoreline to remove smaller tree limbs and debris and load these onto a trailer to be hauled to the Red Bridge location or to the Town burn site. Last year, the group set a new record by collecting 10 dump trucks of logs which were transported to Greencycle for recycling and three truckloads of old docks, etc. to be burned.

Volunteers should wear old clothes and footwear and plan to get wet and dirty while making a remarkable difference that can be seen and felt. The annual cleanup, conducted the third Saturday in July, is a collaborative effort among the MWA, Town of Cicero, and many volunteers who take part in the effort each year. To participate in this half day beautification effort that benefits all who live around the lake and/or for more information, email Art Hall (arthall870@aol.com), Dave Vanette (vanette-da@hotmail.com) or info@morseh2o.org.

PREVAIL

Advocating for Victims of Crime and Abuse
www.prevailinc.com

I was born and raised right here in Noblesville. I grew up in a home without domestic violence or assault – it wasn't something I saw, or even heard about. But when I was introduced to Prevail of Central Indiana, I was shocked by the number of individuals who are affected by domestic violence. In 2018 alone, Prevail helped more than 4,000 clients in Hamilton County. (Nearly 80 percent of clients are women and children.) Domestic violence and abuse are hard topics to discuss, so you don't often hear about them. But at Tom Wood Volkswagen in Noblesville, we're breaking the taboo and raising awareness for Prevail, an organization that helps families in Hamilton County.

– Mike Bragg, GM of Tom Wood Volkswagen in Noblesville

To help Hamilton County families affected by domestic violence and sexual abuse, you can donate the following items:

- Art supplies (for children to journal and express their emotions)
- Bottled water (8 oz. bottles, preferably)
- Individually packaged snacks
- Gas cards (many women have no access to funds after fleeing their abuser)

Drop off items at Tom Wood Volkswagen in Noblesville, 14701 Tom Wood Way.

Need a PI? Call the Westfield spies

By STU CLAMPITT

Strategic Professional Investigation Services, or SPIS (pronounced “spies”) is both Hamilton County’s newest and also its most experienced private investigation firm. Collectively, SPIS has over 120 years of investigation experience to bring to the table.

Lead investigator Jeff Kirk likes to tell clients he is not Magnum P.I. or James Rockford. “Since we are all retired police officers, we all understand the legal ramifications of what we do,” Kirk told The Reporter. “There are legal standards we have to adhere to and there are certain things we won’t do.”

As an example, if some calls SPIS trying to look up an old flame from high school, they can certainly find that person, but they will not give out that person’s contact information until SPIS has ensured it is acceptable to that person to do so.

“There are certain ethical standards we have to adhere to,” Kirk said.

Kirk moved to Hamilton County in 2013 and opened SPIS early this year.

“When I retired from the police department up in Kokomo, my wife was commuting back and forth to St. Vincent hospital,” Kirk explained. “I had accepted a position with the gaming commission in downtown Indianapolis. Rather than both of us commuting, which was ridiculous, we decided to look for something closer. We chose Westfield and Hamilton County specifically because of the low crime rate and the community as a whole. We like it here. It is a wholesome place.”

And now he is looking help this wholesome place by offering his expertise to those in the community who need it.

Kirk

According to the SPIS website, spis-llc.com, “We know that family turmoil can strike any family. From infidelity to divorce and child custody issues, we are committed to getting you the information you need to prevail in court or negotiations.”

They also offer assistance with criminal defense.

“We also know that sometimes good people find themselves in bad situations,” Kirk told The Reporter. “All of our investigators are proven trial ready investigators or former deputy prosecutors. We know what should and shouldn’t be in reports and statements. We know what to look for. We can review police reports and witness statements for inaccuracies or inconsistencies, often just what is needed to put that shadow of doubt in someone’s mind.”

Unlike his role as a police officer, where he spent most of his career as an investigator, Kirk is now working in a field that is more proactive than reactive.

“As a private investigator I want to be able to help people and eliminate problems before they become major issues,” Kirk said. “There is a lot of stuff out there and times when people aren’t sure who to turn to.”

He sees SPIS as a place people can call to ask, “What can I do about this?” And if SPIS can help they will. If they cannot help, they will tell you that too.

Indiana goes hands-free July 1

The REPORTER

Beginning July 1, Indiana law will prohibit drivers from holding mobile devices, such as smartphones and tablets, while driving to reduce distracted driving and improve safety on Hoosier roadways.

Indiana has had a “do not text while driving” law since 2011, but it has been found to be unenforceable by the 7th Circuit Court of Appeals because it’s too narrowly tailored. However, restricting the use of all telecommunication devices while driving (unless used in conjunction with a hands-free or voice operated option) would create an easy, clear-cut and enforceable law.

During the 2020 legislative session, the Indiana General Assembly passed a measure to ban handheld devices while driving. Governor Eric Holcomb signed the bill into law March 18. The objective is to increase roadway safety in Indiana by updating Indiana’s distracted driving law to require drivers to use hands-free technology when using a telecommunications device behind the wheel.

Across the U.S., serious traffic crashes and fatalities have sharply increased in recent years due in large part to distracted driving. Requiring drivers to put smartphones and other devices away and focus on driving is proven to reduce crashes and deaths. According to the National Highway Traffic Safety Administration, states that have passed hands free driving laws have seen a nearly 20 percent decrease in traffic deaths in the two years after passing the law.

Three independent studies found that crash risk was two to six times greater when drivers were using a cellphone versus when they were not.

On average people that text and drive take their attention away from the road for five seconds at a time, increasing the chances of a serious crash substantially. At 55 miles per hour, this is the equivalent of driving a full football field blindfolded.

Of the 15 states and the District of Columbia that enacted these laws before 2018, 12 saw a decrease in traffic fatality rates within two years after passing and enforcing their new laws, and two states do not have available data (NHTSA).

Q&A: Following the law and consequences of breaking it

Q: So, does this mean I cannot use my phone at all?

A: It means you cannot use your phone if it’s in your hand.

Q: How else can I use my phone if it’s not in my hand?

A: You can use your Bluetooth, headset or any other hands-free technology.

Q: Can I still use my phone maps while driving?

A: Yes, as long as you are still using your device hands-free.

Q: What are the consequences of breaking the law?

A: You will be subject to a fine.

Q: Will points be added to my record if I break the law?

A: Starting July 1, 2021, the Indiana BMV will begin adding points to records.

New comment card invites public feedback on state parks

The REPORTER

Indiana State Parks has created a new comment card that lets users share thoughts about service, hospitality and facilities.

State Parks staff know memories are made at properties in a number of ways – on hikes, around campfires, at family dinners, and through the DNR staff, from those you see and meet when you visit to those who work behind the scenes.

Because of this, the Indiana State Parks team has a renewed focus on service and hospitality using an internally developed program called “Service State Park Style” that focuses on hospitality as you camp, stay at an inn or spend a day outdoors in a state park.

“Service State Park Style is, for us, at the heart of providing memorable experiences for our guests,” said Karen Hinton, the deputy director of Indiana State Parks who has coordinated this initiative. “We want to hear how we are doing with welcoming you, looking for ways to assist you, giving you great ideas for enjoying our parks and then saying thank you for visiting with an invitation to come back again.”

New printed comment cards are available in park offices, nature centers and other public buildings to share your thoughts about state park service, hospitality and facilities. The comment card is now also available for easy completion online at stateparks.IN.gov.

Anyone who completes and submits a printed or online comment card along with contact information will be entered in a drawing for a 2021 annual pass later this year.

TODAY'S BIBLE READING

And God, which knoweth the hearts, bare them witness, giving them the Holy Ghost, even as he did unto us; And put no difference between us and them, purifying their hearts by faith. Now therefore why tempt ye God, to put a yoke upon the neck of the disciples, which neither our fathers nor we were able to bear? But we believe that through the grace of the Lord Jesus Christ we shall be saved, even as they. Then all the multitude kept silence, and gave audience to Barnabas and Paul, declaring what miracles and wonders God had wrought among the Gentiles by them.

No plan as of now to lift TV blackout . . .

IMS to limit Indy 500 attendance to 50 percent capacity

WISH-TV

While the Greatest Spectacle in Racing is still set to run in 2020, the stands at the Indianapolis Motor Speedway will not be full.

That's because IMS announced that they will be limiting fan attendance to the Indianapolis 500 to 50 percent capacity.

President Doug Boles tells us IMS is giving fans the option to give up their seats and have priority at next year's race. This means some fans who have already bought tickets, may not get to see the race in person.

When News 8 asked Boles how many tickets have been sold this year, he wouldn't tell us.

"So that ticket question is one of those questions that we don't typically answer specifically. But I can tell you within the 500 hours after the Indy 500 last year in renewals, we're closing in on 175,000 tickets sold in those 500 hours and obviously we have had several months since then," said Boles.

He was not able to answer what IMS plans to do if not enough people are willing to give up their seats. He said customers have already been notified and many said they would give up their tickets because they don't feel comfortable attending the race, even at half capacity.

Boles said once the track has all that information back from ticket holders, they will start adjusting the track.

"Our capacity includes infield suites, it's more than just the grandstands you see. It's a big 250 plus acre venue and there's thousands of fans all over the place so once we begin to reduce that, that capacity includes all those spaces," he said.

As of right now there is no plan to lift the race day blackout. Boles said fans can expect a nighttime replay only, as they have in past years.

The Speedway put out a statement announcing the move Friday morning, with Boles saying on Twitter:

"We're committed to running the Indy 500 on Sunday, Aug. 23 and will welcome fans to the world's greatest racing venue. We will be limiting attendance to approximately 50 percent of venue capacity, and we are also finalizing a number of additional carefully considered health and safety measures. We'll unveil the specific details of our comprehensive plan in the coming weeks."

Due to the COVID-19 pandemic, the 500 will now run on Aug. 23.
