Noblesville Schools first district in state to implement door barricading devices

The REPORTER

Noblesville Schools this week announced a safety enhancement aimed to further protect students and school staff as they return to buildings.

After extensive research and evaluation in partnership with the Noblesville Police Department, approximately 1,000 new door barricading devices in all schools across the district were installed this summer.

The barricading devices are new to Indiana schools and required a special hearing with the Indiana Department of Homeland Security, Fire Prevention and Building News

I was born and raised right here in Noblesville. I grew up in a home without domestic violence or assault - it wasn't something I saw, or even heard about. But when I was introduced to Prevail of Central Indiana, I was shocked by the number of individuals who are affected by domestic violence. In 2018 alone, Prevail helped more than 4,000 clients in Hamilton County. (Nearly 80 percent of clients are women and children.) Domestic violence and abuse are hard topics to discuss, so you don't often hear about them. But at Tom Wood Volkswagen in Noblesville, we're breaking the taboo and raising awareness for Prevail, an organization that helps families in Hamilton County. - Mike Bragg, GM of Tom Wood Volkswagen in Noblesville

Instead of huge, the civic spenders are playing small ball perhaps as a way of further ignoring the colossal economic impact of the government-invoked lockdown.

On Wednesday, city hall quietly added $186,098 to the total outstanding debt obligation it submitted to the Indiana Department of Local Government Finance.

On Friday, $171,866 quietly joined the $186,098. This brings the 2020 debt increase to $26.5 million since New Year's Day. And, of course, the outstanding debt reported is based on just $311.7 million in principal despite the city's annual reports showing $790.9 million in principal outstanding Dec. 31, 2019.

At those prices, don't you think Carmel's taxpayers deserve a bit more creativity than an every-other-day Chinese water torture?

Duke Energy Indiana plans gradual return to standard business operations

The REPORTER

Duke Energy Indiana will continue to suspend service disconnections for nonpayment for an additional month beyond the state's current moratorium on disconnection for Customers nonpayment. who are experiencing financial hardship due to the COVID-19 pandemic now have until Sept. 15 to settle their accounts or make payment arrangements.

Leading up to the deadline, Duke Energy is offering customers in need the opportunity to establish payment plans for up to six months in length. The company is also urging eligible customers to take advantage of additional Low-Income Home Energy Assistance Program funds available through statewide community action agencies due to the pandemic.

In response to the COVID-19 pandemic in March, the company immediately launched a sweeping series of steps to help customers, including suspending disconnections for non-payment, as well as late-payment fees and residential fees for credit card payments and other pay-

$950,000 in foundation and corporate funds to Indiana not-for-profit organizations, focusing on food, small business recovery, education and workforce needs of its customers and communities.

"So many of our customers are facing unprecedented adversity during this pandemic. We want to be thoughtful and provide extended payment options to avoid power interruptions," said Stan Pinegar, Duke Energy Indiana state president. "As financial assistance has become available for qualified customers, we believe now is the right time to begin resuming more standard operations. We will, however, continue to help our customers access resources to assist and provide additional information that can help reduce their bills."

Enhanced customer care

Duke Energy Indiana has contacted residential and non-residential customers with significant pastdue balances on their utility bills, offering payment plans to mitigate potentially challenges in the future.

"Our customer contact specialists are prepared to support our customers through these challenging times and provide manageable solutions so customers can keep their lights on."

Expanded assistance options

Duke Energy Indiana will continue to provide assistance to residential and business customers whose accounts have fallen behind due to illness or lost wages.

Support for these efforts include:

- Federal-funded programs like the Low-Income Home Energy Assistance Program (LIHEAP). Additional funds were added to the program due to the pandemic, and the state is urging utility customers to apply through statewide community action agencies. Click here for details.

• To make it easier to pay, the company will continue waiving credit and debit card and walk-in payment fees for residential customers for an additional two months once standard billing and payment practices resume. These fees will resume in November.

What customers can expect

Duke Energy Indiana will return to standard billing and payment practices in mid-August, which means customers in arrears will receive notices about their past-due balances and the earliest possible date their service could be interrupted. That change will result in disconnections for non-payment under regular credit and notice timelines after Sept. 15 for residential and non-residential customers.

The company anticipates higher-than-normal call volume and encourages customers to consider using the online self-service options now to avoid longer wait times.

Customers who need financial assistance are encouraged to visit 211.org to locate available resources. The free service can help customers find local community agencies that provide assistance to meet a wide range of needs, including:

- Utility bills
- · Housing, food and other essentials
- Child and elder care Medical expenses and health counseling

To get started, simply visit 211.org or dial 211 from your phone.

Service orders, field operations

The company also suspended some of its field operations and non-emergency work inside customers' premises. However, as a provider of an essential service, the company continues working hard to deliver the reliable power customits communities.

The company has been methodically resuming some activities, consistent with its commitment to safely and reliably serve customers.

As the company continues to resume service orders previously suspended, personnel will follow CDC guidelines to complete work.

Duke Energy Indiana employees and contractors who may interact with customers or engage in field work have access to necessary personal protective equipment and will maintain social distancing to the extent practical.

For work that must be scheduled, the company will contact customers in advance to inform them of the nature of the work and the safety protocols that will be used. Customers will have the right to refuse and reschedule the work for a later date, unless an immediate safety issue exists. If you have questions regarding work that needs to be scheduled, please call Duke Energy.

TODAY'S BIBLE READING

And at midnight Paul and Silas prayed, and sang praises unto God: and the prisoners heard them. And suddenly there was a great earthquake, so that the foundations of the prison were shaken: and immediately all the doors were opened, and every one's bands were loosed. And the keeper of the prison awaking out of his sleep, and seeing the prison doors open, he drew out his sword, and would have killed himself, supposing that the prisoners had been fled. But Paul cried with a loud voice, saying, Do thyself no harm: for we are all here. Then he called for a light, and sprang in, and came trembling, and fell down before Paul and Silas, And brought them out, and said, Sirs, what must I do to be saved? And they said, Believe on the Lord Jesus Christ, and thou shalt be saved, and thy house. And they spake unto him the word of the Lord, and to all that were in his house.

STEGER WINS INDIANA OPEN

Eric Steger, a star for Noblesville High School and Ball State University, won the Real Mechanical Indiana Open, which finished up Wednesday at Rock Hollow Golf Club in Peru.

Steger, now in Westfield, totaled a 13-under par 203 for the 54-hole tournament, and went under in all three of his rounds. He had 16 birdies for the event, including a 25-foot birdie on his final putt on Wednesday. Steger also had an eagle in the first round, on hole No. 3.

With the win, Steger followed in the footsteps of his father Scott Steger. They are now the only father-son duo to win both the Indiana Open and the Indiana Amateur championships.

"It's just super cool to be able to say the Steger boys are the only two to ever win them both," said Eric Steger in an interview with the Indiana Golf Twitter

Carmel's Brad Gehl finished tied for seventh with a score of 210, putting him six-under par. Gehl also totaled 16 birdies for the event and made one eagle, on hole No. 15 in the third round. The 15th hole proved to be a popular eagle spot, as Fishers' Graham McAreer made an eagle during his third round, and Carmel's Stephen Kochera eagled the hole in the second round.

Complete results for county golfers now follow.

Indy Eleven drew nearly 5,000 masked fans to Lucas Oil Stadium

By OLIVIA RAY WISH-TV

On Saturday, the Indy Eleven soccer team hit the restart button on its 2020 season inside Lucas Oil Stadium.

For the first time in over 120 days, fans were back inside the downtown venue and live sports officially returned to Indianapolis.

However, to walk through the gates at Lucas Oil Stadium anytime soon, visitors will need to know the protocol have changed amid the COVID-19 pandemic. Step one: You'll need to mask up.

Step two: Be prepared for a temperature check.

Finally, fans will be sat in seats that are socially dis-

Indy Eleven fan Chris Swales said, "It's challenging, it's hard, but, for us, we thought it was important. We're about to score, oh. For me, I just felt I had to be here. I had to show they were doing their best as safe as they. I think it's incredibly safe. We're all behaving well. We're all keeping our masks on. We're all separating from each other. So, you can't ask for any more. It's as safe as it could possibly be."

Nearly 5,000 tickets were sold for the Indy Eleven's home opener. That's the largest number of people in an indoor venue in Indiana since the COVID-19 outbreak, the first and only professional league to allow homebut, in a stadium that holds 70,000, just a few thousand was easy to manage.

"One of the things about Lucas Oil Stadium – obviously it's a huge stadium, so people are able to spread out for safety – but another thing is, with the roof, the noise stays in, so it was actually a great atmosphere," said Eleven head coach Martin Rennie.

There were time-staggered stadium entrance times for fans, assigned seats, and marked lines to maintain social distancing. The list of do's and don'ts was one of the first sports back, and seeing how they do, how lengthy, but it made Jordan Green and other fans feel comfortable enough to attend and adapt.

other, getting real close, so not having that is a little bit different. The point is the team scores, we're here to support this team, and that's our number one priority,"

Patrick Williams, another Indy Eleven fan, said, "I think the energy level has actually been pretty positive. We have a couple guys behind us that have absolutely been screaming their hearts out. People still have heart for the team and absolutely love Indy Eleven."

Now the Indy Eleven and USL Championship are town fans to attend. This came as the team aimed to start a trend of resuming live sports.

Williams said, "I want to see a victory here. It's super safe, and they've really taken care of the community in putting people back out here. So come out, cheer. If you still feel a little unsafe, watch from home, still cheer them on, still support Indianapolis, support Indy Elev-

Green said, "It's great seeing us and seeing us being they handle everything, and hopefully everything goes well and we can get all of our other sports back here, "Usually when we score, everyone is hugging each because we are a sports city. That's where we're focused on, that's what we love to see."

Coach Rennie said, "It's nice to be starting that process of hopefully starting to get back to normal by having a sporting event with people here, and it's great for us to be in that position."

The Eleven won their Saturday match. The team's next game will be Wednesday, July 29, against Hartford athletic at Lucas Oil Stadium. It will air on MY-INDY 23 and ESPN+.
