Grandpa Howard's Door

as a feather, he carried her into their first home. Like the door, the house was old. It was small, made of logs, and certainly a humble dwelling. So why should it be of interest to you, Raymond?

The door is part of your history because the young couple, who set up house that cold December day, became your grandparents many years later. I don't suppose I could even point out the exact site of the house. It was between Veedersburg and Covington, Ind., near Layton Station. I doubt that there is any marker for Layton Station now. They didn't live there long but moved to Sterling. After living in two or three houses, they purchased one in the northeast corner of Sterling. It also was small – only three rooms.

Dan Stevens gives 50 years of service to Hamilton County

Photos provided by Office of Congresswoman Victoria Spartz

County Administrator Dan Stevens was honored on Wednesday for his nearly 50 years of outstanding and invaluable service to Hamilton County with a Special Congressional Recognition. He will retire effective Friday. A Westfield native, Stevens first started working for the county in January 1974 as a jailor and dispatcher in the Old Jail on the Courthouse Square. Just two years later, he was promoted to a sheriff's deputy where he also served as a Chief Deputy for eight years. Elected Sheriff in November 1986, Stevens served two terms before accepting a job as the Jail Commander for 13 years. Commissioner Steve Dillinger tapped Stevens to fill the role of Director of Administration in 2009 following Stevens' retirement from the Sheriff's Office. Stevens said he and his wife plan to finish traveling to all 50 states in retirement. The couple also has five grandkids they'd like to spend more time with. Westfield senior Madyson Jones finds her voice despite deafness

By AMY ADAMS

For The Reporter

Madyson Jones passed her newborn hearing screening. However, by the time she was four years old, Maddy was having tubes put in her ears for the fourth time.

Her parents' frustration with a lack of answers eventually led to an appointment with pediatric ENT Dr. Benjamin Copeland. Dr. Copeland's insistence on a CT scan before even seeing Maddy led to the discovery that she had been born with enlarged vestibular aqueduct as well as malformed cochlea.

"She was always a quiet baby," said Madyson's mother, Katie Jones. "She was never fussy. She was our first child, so we didn't really know any different. But now looking back, we wonder if there was some evidence of hearing loss and we just didn't know it."

Madyson received her first hearing aid when she was in third grade. Nevertheless, she said she grew up reading lips without even realizing it. People would notice and comment that instead of making eye contact with others she would watch their lips.

Now, as a senior at Westfield High School (WHS), Madyson has lost 50 percent of the hearing in her right ear

I was born and raised right here in Noblesville. I grew up in a home without domestic violence or assault - it wasn't something I saw, or even heard about. But when I was introduced to Prevail of Central Indiana, I was shocked by the number of individuals who are affected by domestic violence. In 2018 alone, Prevail helped more than 4,000 clients in Hamilton County (nearly 80 percent of clients are women and children). Domestic violence and abuse are hard topics to discuss, so you don't often hear about them. But at Tom Wood Volkswagen in Noblesville, we're breaking the taboo and raising awareness for Prevail, an organization that helps families in Hamilton County.

At St. Maria Goretti Catholic School, where she attended kindergarten through eighth grade, Madyson began volunteering as a puppeteer with the Joseph Maley Foundation Puppets. The puppet program, which falls under the Joseph Maley Foundation's education pillar, teaches middle school students to voice puppets who have disabilities so that they can present skits about awareness and inclusivity.

One of the leaders of her puppet troupe asked Madyson if she had considered speaking to groups of students about her hearing loss. At the suggestion of that leader, Maddy began went on to speak to a fifthgrade class and then a kindergarten class.

"I've been open and honest about my hearing loss for as long as I can remember," Madyson said. "I will talk about it to anyone who is willing to listen."

Although entering Westfield High School after eighth grade was not what her parents had expected, Katie said that Madyson was adamant that she was ready for the change. Maddy threw herself into the theater program and Verbatim, an online space for poetry and short stories written by WHS students.

"She has found her niche," Katie said. "Overall, we have been happy with Westfield High School."

Recently, Madyson decided that it was time to share her voice with WHS.

"I am often out in the halls during passing periods," WHS Assistant Principal Kurt Frederick said. "One day, Maddy just came over like a flash, and she had such a zeal."

Madyson told him that she really wanted to do a presentation for high schoolers before she graduated.

Frederick helped her set up a day to speak during CORE, a 30-minute flex period between fourth and fifth periods for Connection, Opportunities, Remediation and Enrichment. They advertised the opportunity through school media and opened it for any students to sign up.

Madyson gave a roughly 15-minute talk to about 20 students and a few staff members. According to Frederick, some students

> Along with March being Disability Awareness Month, Madyson also wove the WHS monthly theme of respect into her speech.

"Accommodating people is respecting people, whether it's someone with hearing loss or an exchange student," Madyson said. "The big thing I hit on is "There is a big difference how to love everybody."

Accepted into the Hon-University, Madyson will not let her hearing loss hold her back. She plans to study premedicine and then hopes to attend medical school and go into orthopedic surgery.

"We have always told her that she can do anything she wants to do," Katie said, "to do what's in her heart. We told her to do what makes her happy but not to settle for anything. You can manifest and make your dreams come true, you just have to do it."

Carmel author's second book of youth fantasy series hitting shelves April 18

Submitted

Dave Maruszewski of Carmel continues his Raven, Romda and Ravai Middle Grade (MG) series with Malketh and the Undead. The book is the second of the series where the trio set off on journeys of epic fantasy while dealing with common everyday challenges.

The first book had the three heroes experience an inhuman villain on their first mission beyond the walls of their training. In this second story, the more experienced trio has to take a larger step on their journey. They are pitted against a former mage of the kingdom. After years of exile and being buried in a catastrophic incident, Malketh (the mage) has returned. This time he brings an entire undead army with him.

The first book in the series tended to be traveling adventure, where world building came as a result of what they found through their trek. The second book will be more in depth on the kingdom and lays rich in backstory for not only the Malketh but Raven, Romda and Ravai, as well.

Maruszewski has promised that the book will reveal the first impressions of how certain characters met.

The series overall strives to entertain youth who may not like to read or have a hard time reading. The author hopes that parents will enjoy reading it either with or in parallel with their children. Shorter paragraphs, higher dialogue and engaging interactions are some of the devices that are employed to encourage non-traditional readers.

Whereas many writers rely heavily on description and setting, Maruszewski tends to err on the side of paucity in order to engage the readers' imagination. He says his intention is to give them just enough information that they will "fill in the blanks." In this way, he is creating interaction between the story and person reading it, making the book original to each person who reads it.

The book is intended for Middle Graders. It is suggested, but not reserved, for ages 8 to 14. Content includes action, some violence and magic, but avoids profanity, lewdness, mature themes, and morally corrupt protagonists. It is meant to display the virtue of three young people who endeavor to be heroes for the people they serve. RomdaAndRavai.com.

Comedy is used to lighten some of the more

Maruszewski has this series continuing well into many volumes, although each book will be a self-contained story, that way a newcomer won't feel lost. He actively is also working a game plan for a host of books to come. In fact, his third volume is in the editing stage already, and he hopes to publish it within the next year.

As a person of a varied background, Maruszewski tries to employ aspects of all his past pursuits in his writing. His experiences include being a detonation physicist, teacher, painter, 3D modeler, animator, video game maker, software engineer, comic book dealer, and engineering analyst. He maintains that all these are useful in writing, at least for a paragraph.

Maruszewski moved to the Carmel area in 2021, and he says is enjoying this great area with his family. He and his wife haven't regretted it for a minute. He says they like seeing people going out and about, enjoying the weather, and engaging in all the local things to do.

The book's official launch date is Tuesday, April 18, although the pre-order period has begun. Malketh and the Undead is published by BookBaby. It is available on Amazon, Barnes and Noble, Bookshop.org, Booktopia, Indigo, thriftbooks and BookBaby.

TODAY'S BIBLE READING

After this I looked, and I saw in heaven the temple—that is, the tabernacle of the covenant law—and it was opened. Out of the temple came the seven angels with the seven plagues. They were dressed in clean, shining linen and wore golden sashes around their chests. Then one of the four living creatures gave to the seven angels seven golden bowls filled with the wrath of God, who lives for ever and ever. And the temple was filled with smoke from the glory of God and from his power, and no one could enter the temple until the seven plagues of the seven angels were completed.

Sheridan girls basketball team boasts full National Honor Society membership

The REPORTER

The girls basketball season is over at Sheridan High School (SHS), but last week the team was together again – at the National Honor Society (NHS) induction cere-

NHS membership is open to high school students in grades 10 and up, and all members of the girls basketball team (sophomores pressed pride in both the through seniors) are part of the prestigious NHS based on scholarship, leadership, service, and character. A 3.0 grade-point average is required, in addition to community service requirements.

The team ended the season with an honorable record of 13-9, but Coach Jaidlin Bradshaw is even more impressed with traits that do not show up in the win/loss tally.

The team's sportsmanship was noticed by more than just the SHS leadership. During the season the team received three exemplary reports from the Indiana High School Athletic Association (IHSAA) – reports generated by referees based on observations of sportsmanship during games.

"This team has been really fun to coach," Coach Bradshaw added. "The seniors are awesome leaders on and off the court and really held themselves and each other accountable on and off the court. These kids SHOW UP – I can't say it enough. They make my job really easy by getting it done in the classroom so we can focus on basketball when it's time to do so."

SHS leadership team and the coach.

"Academic success in the classroom leads to success on the court," Athletic Director Beth DeVinney said. "It is our pleasure to celebrate Coach Bradshaw and her team on and off the court. These young ladies exemplify all that is right about high school sports. Leaders win."

SHS Principal Rick Davis said, "The girls basketball program reflects what we strive for in all aspects of Sheridan Blackhawk Athletics. These student-athletes work hard in practice, games, and most importantly in the classroom. Their past and future successes are a tribute to their character and a product of having outstanding families, coaches, and educators."

Congratulations and great work, ladies!
