Change sweeps county

End of the Brainard Era in Carmel & Westfield will look quite different in 2024

The REPORTER

While the voter turnout may have been low for the May 2 primary, the changes coming across the county are larger than we can yet know.

Carmel

Sue Finkam has won the Republican primary for Carmel mayor and, if fundraising is any indication, will now face off against a strong Democratic opponent in current city council member Miles Nelson in November.

Teresa Ayers was technically an incumbent, having been caucused into her seat earlier this year, and she made an impressively strong showing against two opponents to win the GOP nod for November. She will now face Democratic opposition from Courtney Culver in the general election.

Sara Draper and Jake Madore will face off on the Democratic side against Jeff Worrell, Rich Taylor, and Matthew J. Snyder for three at-large council seats.

Tony Green ran unopposed for the GOP South Central council seat but will face Democrat Jessica Irvine in November. Similarly, Republican Adam Aasen will face Democrat Jeremy Eltz.

Cicero

candidate First-time Emily Pearson has defeated sitting Town Council President Chad Blueher, who was caucused in after Jack Russell left the council.

Fishers

Jennifer Kehl has won the GOP race for City Clerk by a wide margin primary against Rachel Segars and will now gear up for a November election against Democrat Janet Pritchett.

NEW LEADERSHIP IN CARMEL & WESTFIELD: Both mayoral candidates Sue Finkam and Scott Willis earned comfortable victories in their respective cities' Republican primary races on Tuesday. Westfield & Noblesville Lions team up for day of service

Clubs work together to get Indiana Diabetes Youth Camp ready for kids

The REPORTER

On Saturday, April 29, the Westfield Lions Club and Noblesville Lions Club worked together for a "day of service" at the Diabetes Youth Foundation Camp in Noblesville. Fifteen Lions spent a few hours opening up the facility after the winter shutdown, cleaning up the camp, and preparing cabins for the campers.

"Camp Until a Cure" is the only camp in Indiana owned, designed, and operated specifically for the needs of children with diabetes. Located in Noblesville, Camp Until a Cure hosts children and teenagers battling Type 1 diabetes. Swimming, crafts, hiking, paintball, archery, challenge courses and award-winning science programs with diabetes education, along with a full-time medical staff, give diabetic youth an opportunity to enjoy the experiences of a summer camp.

The facility, which opened in 1989, offers family camps, as well as overnight, day, and teen camp weekends. It is the Diabetes Youth Foundation of Indiana's belief that every child should have the opportunity to come to camp.

The journey of motherhood relationship between sisters is truly a dynamic one. There's a quote by Marion C. Garretty that I've always loved because I feel it so perfectly captures the relationship of adult sisters. "A sister is a piece of childhood that can never be lost." If you have a sister, you know there is nobody who can have your back, make you laugh, or make you angrier than her. There is nobody on the planet who understands where you came from and why you are the way you are more than your sister. There is nobody who remembers your childhood quite like her. If you have a sister, you know you can literally have a blowout argument followed by a cookout in the same week.

May is upon us. It is a month that we celebrate being a mother. Whether it be yourself, your own mother, wife, stepmother, sister, aunt, grandmother, or whomever, we associate motherhood with the month of May. It is the month that we celebrate Our Lady and Mother of Jesus, Mary. How fitting that this particular month where we celebrate being a mother happens to be the same month as my sister's birthday.

My sister is on a journey to becoming a mother through adoption. I can honestly say I never thought I'd love a kid I have never met or that wasn't mine like I do this child. I do not know who they are, what their gender is, or what they'll look like, but I feel this deep sense of love for this child.

I long for my sister to feel the squishy and chubby fingers of her baby wrapped around hers. I can't wait for her to enjoy a cup of morning coffee in bed and Facetime me while her little one is cuddled up at her side. I am so excited for her to experience the magic of a Christmas morning with a little one. I picture her reading a book to the baby after an evening bath, rocking the baby in her arms. I cannot wait until my sister knows what it feels like for her baby to look at her and smile for the first time.

I cannot wait for my sister to let her little one help stir the brownies and lick the batter from the spoon. I know the sound of excited feet pitter pattering down the hall, and I cannot wait for that sound to echo in the halls of her home.

I cannot wait for her to hear her baby tell her that they love her, and for her to hear this little one call her

I cannot wait to meet this child that God has chosen by His hand for my sister and her husband. I long for the day when her heartache of not having a child is replaced with utter clarity. The moment this baby is placed in her arms, I know she will realize why she was put on this Earth, and the reason for their pain and struggles.

I fervently pray for her journey to motherhood. After all, that is exactly what motherhood is: a journey.

Motherhood isn't easy. In fact, there are days that are really hard. I pray for those who long to be a mother or are mourning the loss of their own mother this month. I pray for the mother who is an empty-nester and struggling to find her place. I pray for those who have experienced loss in their motherhood. I pray for the mother of a sick child.

I pray for any mother who is not in the place they wish to be with their child right now. I pray for any mother who is sick right now and putting on a brave face for her family. I pray for the single mothers who are struggling, but still manage to show up every single day for their children. I pray for any mother who is doing the best she can right now.

I pray for the mothers of adult children who are navigating their roles. I pray for the grandmothers who show up every single day for their children and grandchildren; the ones who realize what a true gift they've been given.

I pray for the mothers who choose the selfless act of adoption, putting

I pray for any woman struggling with a difficult decision in her pregnancy right now, and rather than being met with judgment, I hope she is embraced with love and understanding. I pray for any woman who has made a decision that she regrets.

I pray that Mother Mary intercedes in all our lives and provides us grace, peace, and comfort.

days when she and I share the special role of being an aunt. I know she will make sure this baby hears about her own mother in Heaven frequently, just as I will speak of my dad in the same fashion. This baby will grow up hearing both of their names.

Emily, I know the desire in your heart to be a mother and I cannot wait to watch this journey unfold for you. You are meant to be a mother.

No matter what, you will always be my baby sister. I love you and happy

I was born and raised right here in Noblesville. I grew up in a home without domestic violence or assault - it wasn't something I saw, or even heard about. But when I was introduced to Prevail of Central Indiana, I was shocked by the number of individuals who are affected by domestic violence. In 2018 alone, Prevail helped more than 4,000 clients in Hamilton County (nearly 80 percent of clients are women and children). Domestic violence and abuse are hard topics to discuss, so you don't often hear about them. But at Tom Wood Volkswagen in Noblesville, we're breaking the taboo and raising awareness for Prevail, an organization that helps families in Hamilton County.

Scott Willis victorious in Westfield mayoral primary

Submitted

Republican Scott Willis, current Westfield City Councilor, has won the Republican Primary for Mayor of Westfield.

"I am honored that the residents of Westfield have placed their trust in me to be their next Mayor," Willis said after the election results were available. "I have worked hard to earn their support, and I think my experience, qualifications, and vision really resonated with people."

Willis said his goal for Westfield will be to build upon the community's roots to create a world-class city where you can live, work, and play - a place where you can raise a family, send your children off to college, and see them return home to raise theirs.

"I am excited about what Westfield can become," Willis said. "A vibrant downtown where family and friends gather for fun with Park Street as the cen-

Nonetheless, there she is, braving the elements for any voter who might happen to stop by and cast their ballot on actual Election Day! That's the kind of dedication that got her the job on Cicero Town Council. Meanwhile, an unnamed person can be seen at left looking at a sign about not allowing more signs.

Teresa Ayers easily won re-election to the Carmel City Council representing the North Central District. She received nearly half the vote in a three-way race. "Thank you to everyone who supported my campaign, as well as everyone who came out to participate in the Republican Primary whether they voted for me or not," Ayers said. "I am looking forward to continuing to work to earn the voters confidence in general election this November. I thank both Leah York and Chuck Ford for their work in the community and their contributions to the ongoing discussion on how to keep Carmel a great place to live and work. I will continue to work as hard as I can for Carmel and to make my father Paul Ayers proud who died last week while working tirelessly for my campaign to push us over the finish line in the primary."

Submitted

Following her win in the Carmel Republican mayoral primary Tuesday evening, Sue Finkam released this statement to the Reporter:

We knew to win this we had to have a strong grassroots presence. I was working as many hours and doing as many things as possible. I'm super appreciative that it resonated with voters and I'm looking forward to taking the next step.

My favorite book is The Obstacle Is the Way and we knew the obstacle in this race was that Kevin had worked really hard and done a good job of raising a lot of money. For us to work around that we had to do grassroots, which meant engaging vot-fact that we raised most of our dollars from individual donors. And with those individual donors come votes and in some cases families of votes. We just knew we had to get in front of enough people with our message. We knew early our message was resonating, we just didn't know how many people we could get in front of and how many people it would take.

We felt with my marketing background and Kory's background in running campaigns, if we were super targeted, we didn't need that kind of war chest. If you target the right voters at the right time in the right way – if you get in front of them in a meaningful way - that's what we talked about from ers. I'm super proud of the the very beginning.

Hamilton County Councilman Mark Hall's May 2023 Timesheet

Welcome Timesheet. This column is a report of work done on behalf of the people of Hamilton County. It's to be informative, too – a place learn about projects and how our county government works.

Council meetings are at 7 p.m. the first Wednesday of every month at the judicial center in downtown Noblesville. They are also available to watch online for those unable to attend in person. Here is where my time this past month has been spent.

Month four is complete. Insulated backpack The learning continues, as does relationship building with department heads and leaders throughout county government. I made my first procedural mistake, too. I continue to ask questions about how we operate and why we do things the way we do them. When we spend taxpayer dollars, how can we spend them in the best way? Month four included more "doughnut diplomacy" with community corrections and the sheriff staffs. Sweet treats are a collective thank you from us all, and a

The Highway Committee meeting included detailed reviews of pending projects, including the Pleasant Street expansion project, where the county is responsible for the bridges, Olio Road, Bell Ford Bridge, 146th Street resurfacing, Dunbar Road, and the State Road 37 at 141st Street project, among sever-

The full council votes today, May 3, on recommendations from the committees. Public meetings are a product of hours of work behind the scenes. To serve well, one must be informed well. Keeping up with the meetings, reading, email, addressing taxpayer questions, meeting with department heads, committee meetings and conversations with other council members all require an investment of time.

In addition to the County Council public and committee meetings, I attended Cicero and Noblesville town council public meetings. This month also included working a shift, listening in at the 911 Operations center, listening to county attorney, discussions with voters regarding Council library board appointments, attending working sessions with fellow council members, and policy meetings with the Human Resources department.

Of note this month was position approv- a planning meeting with als in the Pre-Trial Services the leaders at the Hamilton County Senior Center. The senior center facility is dated, expensive to maintain and potentially in the path of future county growth. The leaders at the center believe that they need to be in a new facility over the next few years and described their vision for a future facility along with their present challenges. Some investigation with the Hamilton County grants experts in the Auditor's Office revealed that grant funds are available for a senior center project. That led to scheduling an initial meeting to understand the scope and availability of grant dollars to put into a project. If the project is feasible, I'll present the findings to the Commissioners for their evaluation. I spent time this month working on affordable housing solutions from two perspectives. One, the most obvious, working with a low-cost home builder to frame how a potential project in Hamilton County could look, and second, less obvious, proposing a program that uses affordable housing dollars to assist county employees who don't live in the county to consider doing so.

I must confess that council meetings often move very fast, and this past month I made a mistake on employee questions regard- a procedural vote thinking that I am not a fan of. It's my personal practice to review the agenda packet ahead of time and make note of questions and make comments and notations for likely council votes. I got caught looking at the prior agenda item. Fortunately, the procedural vote passed and my no vote on the spending item was recorded.

This month's work also included representing the County Council at the Rise Up for Kids breakfast, an area not-for-profit that offers programs to reduce suicide and child sexual abuse, attending the Arcadia Wastewater Treatment Groundbreaking, and meeting with county Human Resource leaders to discuss handbook changes.

This is my time sheet. This is where my time went during month four. There are quite a few projects in the queue for 2023, and while my job is primarily the financial oversight of the county budget it is important to understand the Board of Commissioners priorities and balance them with the stewardship of taxpayer dollars. That is the job, and I am excited to do the people's business.

As a taxpayer myself, and listening to so many of you, our employers, it's important for the taxpayers to have access to all the information you want. I work for you, and although you may not choose to do a deep dive into what your County Council does, it's important that you always can do so.

Feel free to contact me at (317) 832-1104 or mark. hall@hamiltoncounty. in.gov with questions, feedback or if you would like to talk about county business.

TODAY'S BIBLE READING

I saw heaven standing open and there before me was a white horse, whose rider is called Faithful and True. With justice he judges and wages war. His eyes are like blazing fire, and on his head are many crowns. He has a name written on him that no one knows but he himself. He is dressed in a robe dipped in blood, and his name is the Word of God. The armies of heaven were following him, riding on white horses and dressed in fine linen, white and clean. Coming out of his mouth is a sharp sword with which to strike down the nations. "He will rule them with an iron scepter.' He treads the winepress of the fury of the wrath of God Almighty. On his robe and on his thigh he has this name written:

'Blazers play tough against No. 2 Western

By RICHIE HALL

sports@readthereporter.com

If there's a ranked baseball team anywhere in Indiana, chances are University has played, or will play it.

The Trailblazers have taken on a number of teams rated in the top 10 in the Indiana High School Baseball Coaches Association rankings. University is playing three of them this week, starting with Class 3A No. 2 Western, whom the 'Blazers hosted Tuesday at Grand Park.

University is receiving votes in the Class 2A poll, and played an incredible game against the Panthers before dropping a 1-0 decision. Western scored its run in the top of the seventh inning, but the Trailblazers got two runners on in the bottom of the seventh.

"I thought our kids were outstanding. I thought their kids were outstanding," said University coach Chris Estep. "Every time we play them, it's this kind of a game. It's really exciting. I love playing Western."

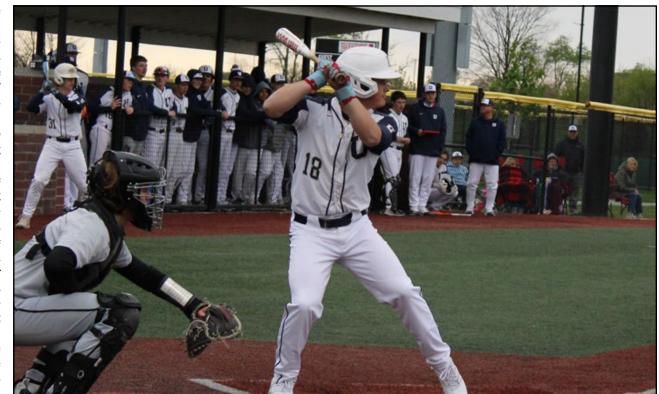

the University of Louisville next fall.

"I thought we had extremely competitive at-bats against a guy that may one day pitch in the big leagues," said Estep. "That kid is really, really good."

University was held to just one hit, a fifth-inning single by Sam Woodward. But the Trailblazers' defense kept Western from scoring more than one run. As a result, University still had a chance in the bottom of the seventh inning, when Owen Schellhase reached on error with two outs, then moved to second base when Woodward drew a walk. Dean got a strikeout for the third out.

Dean finished the game with 11 strikeouts and three walks. Trailblazers' pitcher Seth Hogg held his own, with seven strikeouts and one walk. Western got eight hits in the game, the biggest a one-out triple in the third inning. But University took care of that with a groundout and a flyout.
