Reverence & irreverence

Grandpa Howard told me the story that when, on one occasion when he went to the Otter-Creek church west of Brazil, Ind., an epidemic of measles prevented holding church services. He stayed over the weekend with a family near Fountanet, where he accompanied the family to church Sunday evening. Rev. Deeter, the pastor, cordially invited Grandpa to take part in the meeting. Consequently, his position on the rostrum enabled him to see the young couple who came in late and occupied the rear seat near

Their rude behavior attracted the attention of the entire congregation. The minister continued speaking, apparently oblivious of the disorder, when, suddenly digressing from his subject, he asked permission to tell a story. He began, "Once upon a time when Dr. Wilde was addressing a large audience a young man in the assembly created a disturbance. He rebuked the offender, but without effect. A little later, a member of the congregation informed the speaker that the young man was an idiot. Ever after Dr. Wilde was careful not to rebuke an idiot."

The shame-based couple was very quiet during the remaining service but hastened out the door immediately after the benediction. Grandpa noted that those who show disrespect in the house of worship unwisely dishonor themselves.

Grandpa also told the story of the doctor that had just returned from a professional call in the country when Grandpa came to his office. This patient, bedridden, was very feeble due to the infirmities of old age. Therefore, he did not expect much improvement, but was anxious to know whether medical treatment could prolong his life a few months.

Considering the psychological effects of a negative answer, the doctor noted it would be useless worry, but added, "Of course the old machine eventually wears out." This evasive replied was refuted. Then, the doctor asked why a short time should make any difference. But he said, "They have depended on me to open the doors, build the fires, and care for the church. I want to find someone else to take my place."

Grandpa noted it was better to be a doorkeeper in the house of God than to dwell in the tents of wickedness.

Gleaners Food Bank glad for tentative debt ceiling, calls for improvement to federal nutrition programs

We're pleased Congressional leaders and the White House have reached a tentative agreement to avoid default. Failure to do so would be catastrophic for our country as a whole, and particularly so for our neighbors facing food insecurity.

Without this compromise and the likely government shutdown and default, Gleaners and our hunger-relief partners would see an immediate increase above the already pandemic-level need we're currently experiencing. Short-term fixes such as cuts to Supplemental Nutrition Assistance Program (SNAP), unemployment for federal government workers, and halts in military pay have led to increases and some general panic during prior shutdowns. Adding default on our national debt would have unimaginable consequences for all of us.

This compromise contains provisions that are less severe than those passed by the House earlier this year. For example, the agreement offers time-limit exemptions for SNAP benefits for extraordinarily vulnerable populations, including veterans, young adults aging out of foster care, and people facing homelessness. We're thankful for these improvements.

We are concerned, however, regarding SNAP time limit provisions for older adults aged 50 to 54 and the likelihood that this will increase food insecurity within this age group. Withholding food assistance does not foster employment or productivity.

Most SNAP participants already work, or they are seniors, people with a disability, or children. SNAP often helps people when they are between jobs. Past research from Feeding America has found that 74 percent of non-disabled, non-elderly adult SNAP recipients work. The rate is nearly 90 percent for families with children.

Gleaners and our network of agency partners will continue to offer increasing access to highly nutritious foods. We call on Congress and the White House to put people facing hunger first and strengthen federal nutrition programs in the upcoming Farm Bill.

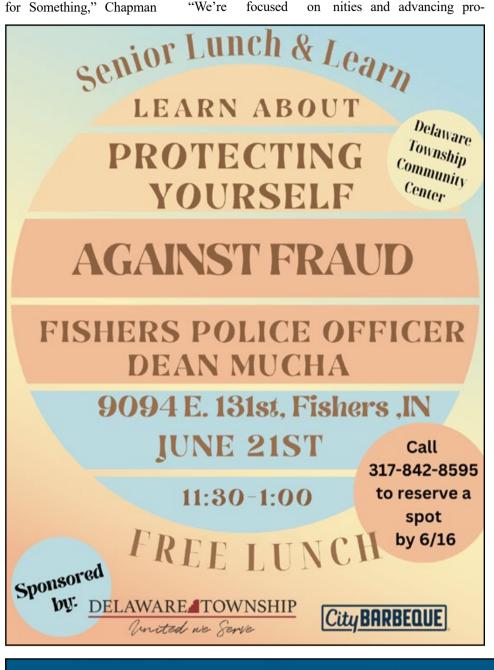

In the United States of America, no one should go hungry.

Understanding how fuel cost adjustments impact your bill

Fuel and purchased power can account for as much as 25 to 45 percent of an average residential customer's bill, so when the markets are volatile, it can have a big impact on energy bills. Costs are starting to decline, and the Indiana Utility Regulatory Commission has approved Duke Energy's requests to pass those savings along to customers.

Four times a year, Indiana utilities adjust prices based on fluctuating fuel costs. Fuel rate adjustments are not permanent; fuel costs rise and fall, and those costs are passed along to customers with no profit, so customers pay what the power company pays.

 - Use a ceiling fan in occupied rooms to supplement your air conditioning. Make sure the fans are set to operate in a counterclockwise direction to push cool air down into living spaces.
 - Grill outdoors. Using your electric oven and stovetop creates a lot of indoor heat. Help save energy by firing up the grill outdoors or prepare meals that don't require cooking.

TODAY'S BIBLE READING

And God said, "Let there be lights in the vault of the sky to separate the day from the night, and let them serve as signs to mark sacred times, and days and years, and let them be lights in the vault of the sky to give light on the earth." And it was so. God made two great lights—the greater light to govern the day and the lesser light to govern the night. He also made the stars. God set them in the vault of the sky to give light on the earth, to govern the day and the night, and to separate light from darkness. And God saw that it was good. And there was evening, and there was morning—the fourth day.

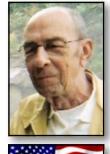

And God said, "Let the water teem with living creatures, and let birds fly above the earth across the vault of the sky." So God created the great creatures of the sea and every living thing with which the water teems and that moves about in it, according to their kinds, and every winged bird according to its kind. And God saw that it was good. God blessed them and said, "Be fruitful and increase in number and fill the water in the seas, and let the birds increase on the earth." And there was evening, and there was morning—the fifth day.

And God said, "Let the land produce living creatures according to their kinds: the livestock, the creatures that move along the ground, and the wild animals, each according to its kind.' And it was so. God made the wild animals according to their kinds, the livestock according to their kinds, and all the creatures that move along the ground according to their kinds. And God saw that it was good.
