HOPE

Last February, several student representatives from the club participated in a presentation and panel with WHS Director of Student Support and Counseling Services Kyle Miller at the Indiana School of Mental Health Initiative Educating the Whole Child Summit.

New this year, the club will work with WHS Dean of Wellness, Connections, and Growth Jake Gilbert to host a series of sessions focused on mental health for athletic team members. They also plan to dedicate a week to suicide awareness and to establish a scholarship through the Wellbeing Coalition of Westfield to provide funds for students who can't afford the mental health care they need.

"What this club is doing is really amazing," Dr. Biden said. "Know that your courage does not go unnoticed, and that's why I'm here."

Following the private meeting, Biden, Murthy, and Emigh joined a panel discussion with WHS school administrators that was open to select students, parents, WHS counselors, and WWS leadership.

A 30-year-educator herself, Biden asked the school to extend the invitation beyond students involved in Robbie's Hope so that she could speak to and hear from approximately 80 students.

"In the stories I am hearing from you today, there is so much resilience," Biden said. "In this school, you can feel that there is a sense that people can share their stories and get help."

She further encouraged the students to share, publicly or through written notes, anything they thought she should know or should work on.

Senior John Wickam talked about how it needs to be normalized for teens to reach out to mental health professionals and adults who can help.

"It's not our job to fix each other," Wickham said. "I would rather protect your life than your secret. That is the goal."

Other students spoke openly about social media promoting eating disorders, the unique struggles of queer teens, and how students need help learning to recognize and communicate their feelings.

"We are here because the youth mental health crisis in America represents a defining public health challenge of our time," Murthy said.

In the state of Indiana, according to the CDC, suicide is the second leading cause of death for teens.

The students of Robbie's Hope at Westfield High School want you to remember: "It's OK to not be OK."

Murthy discussed the Bipartisan Safer Communities Act passed in 2022 which allocated $1.7 billion to mental health care, including in schools. Westfield has benefited, receiving $400,000 from grants such as Project AWARE (Advancing Wellness and Resiliency in Education) and Stronger Connections.

"What it will take to address the mental health situation in our country is nothing short of a movement," Murthy said.

Robbie's Hope provides that movement of teens across the U.S. who aim to cut teen suicide rates in half by the year 2028.

"We're changing lives, and we have an impact not just in our school but in our community, and that means a lot to me," Emigh said.

Her father, Peter Emigh, gave credit to school leaders and counselors who have helped turn "compassion into action."

WHS Assistant Principal Kurt Frederick, who served as the panel moderator, joined WHS Principal Alicia Denniston, Westfield Education Foundation Executive Director Ashley Knott, and others in expressing their appreciation for having the first lady and surgeon general take time to visit Westfield.

"We tell our students all the time, 'Your voice matters,'" Frederick said. "And this was the perfect opportunity to show them that."

To find out more about Robbie's Hope and to find resources such as the Teens and Technology Handbook or Robbie's Hope Adult Handbook, visit RobbiesHope.com. For questions about local opportunities for involvement and support, email whsrob-bieshope@gmail.com.

If you or someone you know is in crisis, the National Suicide Prevention Lifeline at 1-800-273-TALK (8255) provides support 24/7. You can also call or text 988.

"There's one thing I want you to remember," Dr. Biden said, her words echoing the Robbie's Hope mantra, "It is OK not to be OK."

Creating a system for handling finances even before you own a home will help prevent what can be a crushing mental load in life. Not only does it make bill paying easier, but it also helps you manage your finances intelligently so you can build wealth.

How I wish I could go back in time and tell all of this to my "post college self!" I had to learn things the hard way later in life – and I'm still learning. But I'm doing better.

Let's first look at some ways you can learn to be wise with your money. Trust me, if you don't have this skill, your overall mental load will be twice as bad – and I am talking from experience here! If you already have this wisdom and have done a great job managing and building your wealth, feel free to skip to next week. If you don't have this knowledge and need some assistance, I know of some fantastic resources to help you.

My favorite expert on this topic is Dave Ramsey, an American personal finance guru, businessman, and author. Mr. Ramsey has helped millions of people turn their financial lives around. What I like about him is that he made mistakes, learned from them, and eventually built his wealth the smart way. He even went through the pain of bankruptcy before turning his life around.

Mr. Ramsey offers numerous resources on his website, daveramsey.com. They range from free downloads, apps, guides, calculators, forms, and books to his Financial Peace University course offered at hundreds of locations across the United States or online.

The books and course are quite reasonable.

Pride doesn't come in a box

I am not an artist. I don't have the imagination to come up with the spectacular visions that painters can create. I can't chisel stone or carve wood with any elegance.

However, I love what art can do. It can make people feel proud, awestruck, or even horrified. What I believe is most important about art is the culture that develops around it. One art form that does this impressively well is architecture – the beauty of buildings.

Fewer things make a place more recognizable than the structures that fill it. If you toured any large city across the world, you would certainly find some apparel or merchandise that shows the city skyline. You can identify a city simply by the shape of its skyscrapers. Indianapolis has the Salesforce Tower, Detroit has the headquarters of General Motors with the Renaissance Center, and Chicago has the Willis Tower (but it will always be the Sears Tower to me). These inanimate icons form an identity that every local identifies with. Almost all Indianapolis, Detroit, and Chicago residents have no legal ownership of their respective buildings, but I would bet almost all of them claim the towers as their own: "That's my town."

It can be difficult for towns without skyscrapers to find their local identity. In many instances the only unique structures are old town halls and churches. Some only remain standing due to preservation efforts by historical societies.

But why is this often the case? Rising costs of building materials, among other logistical concerns, could be the reason. Regardless, what has resulted is the rise of the rectangle – big box apartments, homes, churches, and town halls. I don't believe I am alone on this, but I find it difficult to identify myself with a cube.

But there is nothing wrong with the old town hall and the churches built a century ago. Those are some of the buildings that keep a town unique by breaking the modern mold. I was pleasantly surprised to find Carmel's City Hall reminiscent of a 1700s New England courthouse, and, despite being a newer addition, the Palladium at the Center for Performing Arts displays the Neoclassical style similar to the monuments of the nation's capital. And while the Hamilton County Government and Judicial Center is a welcomed and necessary addition to the community, the Hamilton County Courthouse Square still stands as a functional reminder of the styles of the mid-1800s.

Reporter photos by Hayden Parsons
Architecturally imaginative buildings – that is, those not shaped like boxes – help give smaller cities and towns a sense of shared identity.

While these buildings are no skyscrapers, they represent the beauty there is to find in Hamilton County.

Town pride should inspire us to make our homes, cities, and county a better place. It's a love for not just ourselves or our neighbors, but our guests as well. It should drive us to want to keep what we have in pristine condition and motivate us to build even greater beauty in the future. Just because Hamilton County is a rectangle doesn't mean everything inside has to be.

The next time a building project comes along to erect another box, remember your town pride – and build beautiful buildings.

Indiana Archaeology Month focuses on state's early industry

The REPORTER

Gov. Eric J. Holcomb has declared September as Indiana Archaeology Month, making it the 28th anniversary of a statewide celebration of archaeology in the Hoosier state.

All month long, Hoosier history buffs can meet archaeologists and learn about the state's fascinating past. Through the past years' celebrations, thousands of Hoosiers have experienced archaeology in new ways.

"Archaeology tells us not only about the past, but it also helps us figure out more about ourselves in the present day and what we might be like in the years to come," said Dan

Bortner, DNR director and State Historic Preservation Officer. "This year's long list of activities provides a fun and interesting way for Hoosiers to dive into how."

A variety of events for all ages will be offered by universities, museums, organizations, and individuals throughout Indiana. The Indiana Department of Natural Resources Division of Historic Preservation & Archaeology (DHPA) coordinates Archaeology Month. A schedule of events is at on.in.gov/archaeology-month.

This year's commemorative poster focuses on the archaeology of early Indiana industry.

"Archaeologists have recorded and investigated various industrial sites, some from the early 1800s, in our state," said Amy Johnson, state archaeologist of the DHPA. "Information regarding these manufacturing locations has helped us understand the early Hoosier efforts regarding brick and tile manufacturing, redware pottery production, and iron making."

The poster and an in-depth discussion of the design are also available online. Overall, archaeologists have recorded more than 75,000 sites in Indiana since the early 1800s, helping shape public understanding of the precontact and historic people who also called this land home.

National roadside cleanup effort returns to State Road 37

The REPORTER

A nationwide cleanup drive dedicated to the Birth Centennial of Dr. Shri Nanasaheb Dharmadhikari was undertaken on Aug. 26 by residents and volunteers of the non-profit organization Dr. Shri Nanasaheb Dharmadhikari Pratishthan (DSNDP). The cleanup took place near Hamilton County Auto Auction along State Road 37 between mile markers 179 and 180.

These events were organized by DSNDP in collaboration with the Indiana Department of Transportation (INDOT). The Adopt-A-Highway (AAH) program is part of a Nationwide Cleanup Drive undertaken by DSNDP across 17 states and 31 cities in the United States.

INDOT's AAH Program is a partnership between the INDOT and DSNDP volunteers, working together to make Hamilton County better, a mile at a time. More than just a cleanup campaign, this innovative program works to educate citizens of all ages about the responsibilities of land stewardship – the care and repair of the environment. Ultimately, the AAH Program is about people caring enough to make a difference.

The Hamilton County Adopt-A-Highway cleanup drive was scheduled and held very close with Pennsylvania, Wisconsin, Delaware, and California states and will be followed by other states. DSNDP has collaborated with 17 states and 31 cities for running these cleanup drives across the United States.

Members of the non-profit organization Dr. Shri Nanasaheb Dharmadhikari Pratishthan (DSNDP) cleaned up their portion of State Road 37 on Aug. 26.

The Adopt-A-Highway/Park/Beach/Street/Reservoir initiatives are driven by hundreds of DSNDP volunteers. To achieve concrete results by the implementation of these teachings, DSNDP committed to educate citizens of all ages about the responsibilities of land stewardship – the care and repair of the environment. Ultimately, the AAH Program is about people caring enough to make a difference.

The non-profit DSNDP is driven by over a million volunteers worldwide, who strive to keep the legacy of Dr. Shri Nanasaheb Dharmadhikari alive by running massive blood-donation drives, cleanliness drives, tree plantation and conservation drives, conserving natural water reservoirs, assisting hearing-impaired children with free hearing-aids, free adult, and children's literacy classes, etc.

A mega health camp which was organized by DSNDP in India, entered the Guinness World Records as the largest health camp benefiting 152,000 people attended by 1,571 doctors and 5,000 paramedics in a single day.

Chief Judge Altice administered the oath with the assistance of Judge Felix's wife and children. Judge Cale J. Bradford and Judge Rudolph R. Pyle, III assisted in the ceremonial robing.

Student loan forgiveness cures the symptom, not the disease

This month, my oldest son headed off to college. It has been an interesting experience to have a child starting his higher education while our country is in the middle of a debate about student loan forgiveness.

While I think it's fair to say that not everyone needs to attend college for their chosen career, I do believe that those who want a college education should have the opportunity. Unfortunately for many Americans, that path is resulting in a lifetime of debt. While the student loan conversation is an important one, I believe it must be part of a larger conversation addressing the extreme changes we have seen to how much college costs over time.

My son will be attending Ball State University in Muncie, Ind. – the current in-state tuition and room and board for one year is around $26,000.

By today's standards, Ball State's tuition is considered extremely affordable, but that tuition doesn't tell the full story. For any college or university, the tuition students and their families pay do not represent the total cost for an individual student to attend college. Grants, research funding, federal funding, and state funding are all applied "behind the scenes" to the cost of educating a student. The tuition money an institution asks students to pay is the balance left over after all other funding is applied.

In Indiana, tuition costs usually cover about 63 percent on average of the total cost of attendance. For Ball State, if we take into consideration all the "behind the scenes" funding, the actual cost per year is closer to $41,000 per student. $41,000 per year per student would be much less affordable for the average Hoosier wanting to start their college education. To keep tuition low, Ball State and our other Hoosier higher education institutions need federal and state support.

Unfortunately, state support of higher education has been reduced significantly in the last 40 years. While tuition covers almost two-thirds of attendance costs today, in 1980, Hoosier students were only asked to cover 28 percent of the total cost of college attendance. A large part of this difference is due to a reduction in state funding. In 1980, Indiana's state government spent the same as the national average on students at roughly $9,500 in today's dollars. In 2023, the Hoosier State spent only $6,200 per student compared to $10,200 nationally.

Moreover, if Indiana had the same funding formula today that we did in 1980, and college cost the exact same, a student graduating from Ball State would walk away with about $46,000 of student loan debt compared to $104,000 today.¹

The student loan debt debate has inspired a lot of discussion nationally about the costs of higher education. However, I think it is important to recognize the critical role of our state government in higher education costs. With Indiana allocating 30 percent less per college student today than it did in 1980, our state is making it more difficult for Hoosier students to achieve their higher education goals.

My family and I are very fortunate that the benefits provided for me by my military service will significantly reduce the cost of his college education, but I know the same cannot be said for all Indiana families. I believe it is past time for our state government to help alleviate the rising cost of college education by contributing more to support our excellent Indiana colleges and universities.

We owe it to all Hoosier students to show them the same support today that our state gave to students 40 years ago.

Sen. Mike Braun: older workers play critical role in U.S. economy

Submitted
On Aug. 22, U.S. Senate Special Committee on Aging Ranking Member Mike Braun held a field hearing titled, “Economic Challenges and Opportunities for Older Americans” in Indianapolis. The hearing examined obstacles older Americans have faced under recent economic conditions, approaches to alleviating these burdens, and opportunities ahead.

Sen. Braun’s remarks appear below.

Ongoing economic challenges

Older Americans play critical roles throughout the economy, in businesses and law enforcement, on family farms, and as workers and members of the community.

Earlier this year, a report from this Committee found that 43 percent of older Americans thinking about rejoining the workforce – or “un-retiring” – were doing so because of inflation. In July, prices rose again and were up almost 5 percent from last year. Inflation is still high years after pandemic-driven emergency spending, and it’s still hitting older Americans hard.

We have to confront reckless spending to help retirees on fixed incomes and older workers struggling with choices in their household budgets.

Both sides of the aisle spend too much, and it isn’t working for older Americans.

We know that inflation has pinched seniors’ Social Security checks. For law enforcement officers, this insecurity is added to another obstacle: the Windfall Elimination Provision (WEP) and Government Pension Offset (GPO). Police officers often retire earlier and have additional careers. WEP and GPO can cut their Social Security by 60 percent, just because they have a separate earned pension.

Braun

At the same time, rising interest rates are squeezing the employers and economic growth many older Americans and hard-working Hoosiers rely on.

Intrusive regulations like Environmental, Social, and Governance (ESG) rules push older Americans’ investments into worse rates of return. ESG rules also hinder family farmers’ work and livelihoods.

Farmers are the oldest workforce in the nation. They are feeding us all despite drowning in regulations, including ESG.

Inflation and misguided regulations and policies pose a threat to older Americans in every sector of society, and to the stability of the entire economy.

Older Americans’ economic value

When older Americans are productive, socially connected, gainfully employed, or secure in their retirements, we’re all better off.

The good news is that there are still economic opportunities for older Americans. Many are reinventing their retirements, deciding to stay active and split time between flexible work, leisure, and family and community activities. Older Americans help employers and communities, and benefit in the process.

Like an 82-year-old grandma who went back to work as a baker in Georgia. She was recruited while shopping. For employers facing labor shortages, older Americans help fill gaps.

A recent report showed that older workers will make up a quarter of the workforce by 2031. Older workers and members of communities provide wisdom, experience, and an unmatched work ethic.

Our goal should be unlocking that potential, supporting dignified work and retirements, not holding it back.

Briggs laments impending loss of Wilson Farm Market due to decision to limit access on U.S. 31

Dear Editor:

Hamilton County has a jewel in the middle of our county, and it is the red building on the east side of U.S. 31 and 256th Street, which is Wilson Farm Market.

Have you visited it lately? They have Amish cheeses and many jams and jellies and the well-known fried chicken dinner as a take out for the many motorists who are heading north to Kokomo or south to Indianapolis. Wilson Farm Market also supplies fresh vegetables of the season and frozen meats. My favorite purchases are the fresh baked pastries from the bakery and the most delicious ice cream cone selections.

This sounds like an advertisement for Wilson, and it is because in 2024 it will be no more. I am disappointed that our County Commissioners and Council are not supporting this small business since 1968. The Indiana Department of Transportation does not know the importance of Wilson Farm Market as it supports a grocery in a desert zone.

The development of U.S. 31 becoming a limited-access highway is closing out a lot of businesses but also hindering a much-needed access for locals in this area to U.S. 31 heading both directions for medical needs, as well as access for the school systems of Hamilton Heights and Sheridan. U.S. 31 is creating a dividing line between these two communities with no cross overs or lanes to access the local roads that support the community, schools, farms, and small businesses.

Why did this happen? Who made the decision of this community division and the elimination of businesses along U.S. 31 with no recourse in a financial location?

Carmel projects nominated for Indy Chamber's Monumental Awards

The REPORTER

Four unique construction projects in Carmel have been nominated for prestigious Monumental Awards, to be presented by the Indy Chamber on Friday, Oct. 4. The public can vote for The People's Choice Award on each project listed below by visiting this Facebook page.

This year marks the 46th anniversary of the Monumental Awards, highlighting the built environment in the nine-county Indianapolis region. A vibrant, built environment not only improves the overall quality of life but attracts talented individuals to call the Indianapolis region home.

The Monumental Awards are one of the ways in which the Indy Chamber showcases the economic development growth of the Indy region. This annual evening of recognition acknowledges individuals and businesses that contribute to excellence in architecture, construction, engineering, innovative reuse, interior design, landscape architecture, neighborhood revitalization, public art and real estate development throughout the nine-county Indianapolis region.

TODAY'S BIBLE READING

She gave this name to the Lord who spoke to her: "You are the God who sees me," for she said, "I have now seen the One who sees me." That is why the well was called Beer Lahai Roi; it is still there, between Kadesh and Bered.

So Hagar bore Abram a son, and Abram gave the name Ishmael to the son she had borne. Abram was eighty-six years old when Hagar bore him Ishmael.

Former Noblesville standout Emily Kiser signs to play professionally in Greece

By CRAIG ADKINS
For The Reporter

As her collegiate basketball career came to a close when the Michigan Wolverines season ended in the second round of the 2023 NCAA women's basketball tournament to eventual National Champion LSU, it was apparent that fifth-year senior Emily Kiser had more basketball days in mind beyond her time in Ann Arbor.

The 6'3" former Noblesville standout and 2018 Indiana All-Star has inked a deal with AO Eleutheria Moshatou in Athens, Greece to extend her playing career at the international level.

"Emily is a rare talent. I have no doubt she will thrive playing in Greece," said Noblesville girls basketball head coach Donna Buckley, now in her 16th season.

She left her hometown of Noblesville on August 26 to start her professional basketball career and hopefully take off from where she left her college days not too long ago. Eurocup qualification games start soon against Cluj Napoca on September 21st and 27th, so it's time for Kiser to familiarize herself with her new team and the European style of play.

"It feels amazing to be able to continue playing basketball at the professional level. I didn't play the majority of my college career, so I still feel like I'm just getting started. On top of getting to continue playing a sport I love, the experience of traveling and living in a different culture is a huge reason I wanted to continue playing. Greece was somewhere I always wanted to visit and it's surreal that now I'm going to be living there soon," said an excited Kiser.

Kiser's game has been on the upward swing the past two seasons in Ann Arbor, averaging 15.9 points and 7.1 rebounds during her fifth-year as a Wolverine. The Noblesville native was named MVP of the Gulf Coast Showcase, scoring 56 points and grabbing 28 rebounds in the three wins over Air Force, South Florida and No. 21 Baylor.

Down to the wire: Tigers edge out Millers in HCC match

By RICHIE HALL
sports@readthereporter.com

FISHERS – The Fishers volleyball team won an all-county match Thursday night at the Tiger Den.

The Tigers beat Noblesville in a highly entertaining five-set Hoosier Crossroads Conference contest, 25-13, 20-25, 18-25, 25-16, 15-10. While some sets were easier than others for both teams, it was a truly a match where the winner wasn't decided until the very end – something that's typical for the HCC.

"It's really nearly impossible to come out and play your C-plus level game and win against anybody in our conference," said Fishers coach Steven Peek.

The Tigers easily won the first set, leading 19-10 and running it out from there. Senior Lucy Kay finished the set with an ace.

The Millers began the second set with an ace from Aubrey Stitcher, and went up 3-0. Noblesville never trailed in the set, with Stitcher helping out big time by hitting five kills, including one on set point. Reese Resmer and Chloe Macias both hit kills as well. Meanwhile, Fishers' net game was strong, as Jurnee Hall helped out with a couple of blocks.

The third set was the tightest one, at least until the end. Neither team led by more than two points until the Millers made a run of six straight points to close out the set. Riley Resmer started the run with a kill, then served an ace. Madison Brown made a net tip, and Stitcher put down another kill, then Riley Resmer hit an ace on set point.

Hall stepped up for Fishers in the fourth set, with an early tip and a block. The Tigers had several players hit kills, including Kay, Ellen Roberts, Nicolette Skudrzik and Aubree Valcourt. Natalie Lux served an ace.

The fifth set was close for the first half, as it was tied 7-7. Kay then spiked a kill to give Fishers an 8-7 lead, and the Tigers never trailed again. Roberts closed out the match, hitting a kill to get Fishers to match point, then serving an ace to close it.

Kay had an incredible game, with 20 kills, including four in the fifth set, five blocks and three aces.

"She knows that she's somebody that's a focal point of our offense," said Peek. "She's a very humble kid. She's a hard worker, and she's going to play Division I next year. The motivation's there. This isn't her last hurrah, she's got four and a half more years of volleyball to play. So, she's hungry for herself, but she's also such a team player and wants to win for Fishers."

KISER

“Emily put so much time and effort into continuing to improve throughout her time here. She put in the extra work, starting with her freshman season when she would stay and play against our practice players. When she got her opportunity, she really took advantage of it and was ready for it” said 12th-year University of Michigan head coach Kim Barnes Arico.

It helped to significantly improve by having a best friend in Hillmon to motivate Kiser. Once Hillmon was drafted by the WNBA's Atlanta Dream in 2022, Kiser became more of a go-to for the Wolverines

“It was great getting to be teammates with Naz Hillmon whether that was playing with her or getting better defending her everyday in practice. Offensively with a player as good as Naz inside, I knew my perimeter play had to improve - shooting, passing, movement. In addition to being a great teammate she's also my best friend which made it even more fun getting in the gym together and putting up shots. Defensively I got to go against arguably the best college post in the country at the time everyday. It wasn't always fun at the time but made me better in the end,” stated Kiser on Hillmon.

“We played on the road at Central Michigan and Naz wasn't able to play, so we moved Emily down to the block. She showed what she can do, led us to that win and from there, she had such a great senior year and then turned into an all-conference player in her final season,” continued Barnes Arico.

It wasn't until her final two years at Michigan that Emily took advantage of every opportunity to shine on the court. She was able to open up and show what she's capable of as a player.

“Too many people want instant success, regardless of circumstances. Emily's ability to be patient while also working incredibly hard until it was her time to shine made her very successful. It is also what will help her thrive in the real world. She is such a special leader and person,” continued Buckley.

En route to being named first team all-Big Ten this past season, Kiser logged a career-high 34 points against Rutgers on February 23. Emily also received the Big Ten Sportsmanship award, while also being named BIG Player of the Week three times.

She also leaves Michigan ninth all-time with 129 games played, starting the final 65, ranking 17th in career rebounds with 603. Starting 33 games this past season, Emily reached double-figures 28 times, with eight 20-point games.

Kiser also was a four-time academic all-Big Ten and made the CoSIDA Academic All-District team in 2023 for her efforts in the classroom.

Buckley is beyond ecstatic about Kiser's opportunity to head to Europe and continue her hoops career in Greece.

“I am super happy for her! It will be an incredible opportunity for her as a player and as a person. She is a smart, curious person that will take in everything while thriving in her new life she will be living for the next several months. I am sure she will take time to experience Greece and its incredible culture,” continued Buckley on her former Indiana All-Star.

She left the high school ranks in 2018 as the Millers' fourth all-time in scoring, at the time, with 1,328 points (currently fifth), while also grabbing the most rebounds in Noblesville history with 903.

Kiser averaged a double-double with 21 points and 13.4 rebounds in her 2017-18 senior year as a Miller. She was an Indiana All-Star, three-time All-HCC, AP all-state 1st team, IBCA Supreme 15 and ranked No. 78 as a four-star recruit by ESPN HoopGurlz as a senior. These accolades alone make her one of the most-decorated Noblesville Miller girls basketball players of all-time.

Playing against some of the top teams and players in high school really helped Kiser prepare to play at the Big Ten level. The last two years as a starter at Michigan has really gotten Emily in shape to play at an even higher level.

“In my years as a Miller I was able to play against really strong talent. Our schedule, specifically the HCC, you had to take every opponent seriously on any given night. The Big Ten conference was the exact same way where at times there are six or more teams ranked in the top 25 in the country. Regardless of national ranking though every team in the big ten could play and it made for a grueling schedule. I would think back to our sectional in high school that was loaded with talent,” stated Kiser.

“My final game of my high school career was against my future teammate Amy Dilk and future BIG opponent Tomi Taiwo for Iowa, both from Carmel. Since then we've seen plenty of girls from our area continue on to both Michigan and the Big Ten, I got to play against that level of talent starting in high school,” continued Emily.

Kiser is pretty anxious to head overseas and jump at the opportunity to keep playing her favorite game. After two consecutive seasons as a starter and leader for Michigan, bigger dreams were on her mind beyond Ann Arbor.

“I had entered my name on the draft, however, at that point I still didn't even have an agent. I was working hard to finish my masters degree and the last bit of college before I decided what my next journey was. Once the emotions of a long season and conclusion of my college career faded it was clear to me I wasn't ready to be done with basketball. That's when I found an agent who helped me get in contact with teams in Europe and we found the best fit for me. I really wanted to be in a big city with lots to explore wherever I went,” said an optimistic Kiser.

Kim Barnes Arico keeps producing pro players, the latest being Auburn's Leigha Brown (DeKalb HS), like Hillmon, was drafted this year by Atlanta.

“Coach Arico gets the most out of her players. I had always thought I was a hard-working, hustle player before arriving at Michigan however coach Arico made me reevaluate quickly. Her passion in coaching made me quickly realize I had more to give. I don't think I ever took a single charge in high school and I finished my college career probably averaging two a game at least. A huge reason I think we found so much success,” said Kiser, speaking highly of her college coach.

The impact Emily Kiser has had on both the Noblesville and University of Michigan basketball programs is just unparalleled.

“I think it's such a great example for the younger kids that are watching to hear about Emily's story and to watch Emily's progression,” stated Barnes Arico.

The local pipeline to Ann Arbor keeps growing and a tremendous reason for that is 2003 Indiana All-Star and Noblesville grad Sarah Van Metre. The Eastern Michigan University grad is an associate director of athletic communications at the University of Michigan.

Van Metre couldn't be happier. The former Miller just beams that they have some local talent on the roster, which has also included players from Zionsville, Carmel and Westfield.

“I loved getting to spend nearly five years with Emily while at Michigan. I was so excited when we got a commitment from one of my fellow Noblesville natives. There is just something about being around people who are from the same place you are,” said Van Metre.

As the basketball contact for athletic communications, Van Metre has a different angle on the team, having a watchful eye on each and every player.

“I loved watching her get better and better throughout her time. Everyone always talks about her senior season but for me, I loved how she contributed and played when everyone was in foul trouble in the first round of the 2021 NCAA Tournament against Florida Gulf Coast. She gave great minutes and was a big reason the team advanced. That was so great to see and I am just so happy that she is continuing to play,” continued Van Metre.

Emily Kiser has set the bar high for Millers and Wolverines and will have a special impact for years to come on both programs.

Numerous times, she has come back to Noblesville to visit her high school coaches and team, continuously giving the youngsters someone to look up to. She's also already made a visit back to Michigan prior to the team's recent trip to Italy.

Both programs have been lucky to have a player like Emily Kiser come through, showing what it takes to overcome obstacles and adversity to get to where you want to be.

“Emily is one of the best role models for our program and truly for any program. She is a hard worker, great leader, and someone who takes a tremendous amount of pride in everything she does. She is fun, a great teammate, and very thoughtful. Seeing her play at Michigan and represent our program was such a joy. Having her come and talk to our kids and stay connected to our program has made a tremendous difference to our program. Anytime you can have someone like Emily in the gym with the kids, it is going to be a good experience for everyone,” Buckley concluded.

The four Kiser kids have kept their parents Brian and Chris Kiser logging miles all over the Midwest and beyond to watch them play basketball.

Emily's oldest sibling Jessica is a 2014 Noblesville grad and played collegiately at Purdue Northwest (2014-18), brother John a 2016 Miller alum played at Valparaiso University from 2016-20 and younger sister Anna is 2020 Noblesville graduate, now in her senior season at IU Kokomo.

Now, it's time for them to fly across the Atlantic Ocean to watch Emily play in Greece.

Roberts hit 13 kills and served two aces, while Skudrzik hit five kills in two sets of action. Hall was unstoppable at the net with seven blocks. On defense, Lux collected 15 digs and served two aces, Kennedy Tinch dished out 46 assists to go with 11 digs, and Juliana Kellogg had 10 digs and two aces.

Stitcher led the Millers with 17 kills, followed by Elaina Hendrix with 11 and Reese Resmer with nine. Maddie Coates had 17 digs and Macis made three blocks.

“I still think we had a lot of good bits and pieces,” said Noblesville coach Annie Poulson. The coach said there were three starters out for the match, “so we had to have some people step up into new roles and I think there were bits and pieces of things we saw that were great, and we just couldn't quite execute all of it together for the three sets we needed to tonight.”

Fishers is 1-1 in conference play and 6-6 overall. The Tigers travel to the Providence Tournament on Saturday, taking on Franklin Community and Roncalli.

The Millers are also 1-1 in HCC play and 5-2 overall; they started the season with five straight victories before falling to Lawrence North on Wednesday and Fishers on Thursday. Noblesville hosts McCutcheon Tuesday.

Westfield was swept by Zionsville Thursday, 25-20, 25-16, 25-11 in a Thursday HCC match.

Georgia Bresnahan hit seven kills for the Shamrocks, with Lilly Stanton serving two aces. Lilly Tucker made 14 digs, followed by 12 for Stanton and 11 for Audrey Bassett. Stanton also dished out 16 assists and Isabelle Jackson handed out 11.

Westfield is 1-1 in the conference and 6-5 overall and host Guerin Catholic on Saturday morning.

Sheridan split a pair of matches during the middle of the week.

The Blackhawks beat Traders Point Christian on Wednesday, 25-18, 25-11, 24-26, 25-20. Trinity Parkin served seven aces, with Meredith Krupp serving three. Krupp had a season-high 19 service points, with Parkin and Kenzie Garner both getting 10.

Garner put down 12 kills, while Parkin hit 10 kills. Shelby Eaton was next with seven, followed by Claudia Headlee and Nova Cross with four each, then Beth Adams and Krupp with three each. Cross dished out 23 assists.

On defense, Cross and Garner both made a block assist. Garner had 22 digs, with Krupp getting 17, Cross 11 and Headlee 10.

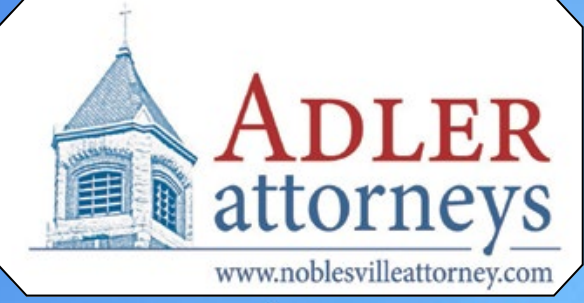

In a Thursday Hoosier Heartland Conference match, Sheridan was swept by Eastern 25-19, 25-13, 25-20. Headlee had two aces, with Parkin and Garner both serving one. Parkin led the kills with 11, with Cross hitting five and Headlee three. Cross handed out 15 assists.

Garner made two solo blocks, with Parkin getting one solo block and one assist. Eaton had two block assists and Adams made one. Parkin had 15 digs, Garner and Krupp both collected eight and Cross had six.

Sheridan is 5-3 and travels to Clinton Prairie on Saturday for a tournament.

Hamilton Southeastern swept Avon 25-22, 25-16, 25-17 in a Thursday HCC match to remain perfect on the season at 9-0.

The Royals will play matches Saturday against Bellmont and Fort Wayne Carroll.
