Denials can also result in cost shifting to patients. Could PA additionally result in increased costs to employers and insurance companies? It's a large, time-consuming, labor-intensive process. It's interesting that some insurers are actually modestly reducing their PA programs. And a new federal rule will obli-

- Prohibit requiring PA for services that are considered medically necessary and appropriate within the customary standard of care.
- Eliminate PA for prescription medications approved by the federal Food and Drug Administration, including those for treatment of opioid use disorder.
- Bar PA for pre-hospital transportation.
- Prohibit PA for emergency facility medical care for true emergencies.
- Mandate that all adverse PA determinations and appeals are reviewed by a physician in the same or similar specialty of the requesting physician.
- Exempt providers from PA requirements who met (or would have met) at least an 80 percent PA approval rate in the previous 12-month period for a particular health care service.
- Require transparency of a utilization review entity's requirements, restrictions, clinical criteria, and statistics on approvals and denials on its website.
- Compel that PA determinations must be made with 48 hours of requests with shorter turnaround times for urgent and emergency services.

Unfortunately, the bill died in the Senate Appropriations Committee over cost-to-Medicaid concerns. These are admittedly stringent requirements and undoubtedly the legislation would have faced stiff opposition in the House by powerful insurance and employer groups. The legislature must meaningfully address the out-of-control PA system. Probably not this year.

"We give away everything," Duffy said. "We haven't made a dime personally. Once we pay for the flour and sugar and packaging, every once in a while, we write a check to a food charity of our choice. We both have had such fortune in our industry that to just say 'I need another movie' or 'I need this or that' is different than saying, 'what would it mean to write a check for $50,000 to No Kid Hungry or a soup kitchen in downtown wherever?' Our goal is to leave something behind that will continue on afterwards and just become a standard of how to take care of your fellow person."

Purl said she appreciates the symbolism in this business.

"Working with bread is full of metaphors," Purl said. "There's the profound thing of the breaking of bread when you get to do that with friends with the end product, but also the resilience that this starter has – you cannot kill it. You feed a little bit of flour and sugar and off it goes. And it's kind of a miracle, this life force, as it reinvents itself and gives you another loaf of bread or another pancake. It brings people together and it's reassuring somehow to see this thing that that just keeps going."

Duffy ended The Reporter's conversation with a segue that made this old radio broadcaster proud.

"So bringing this full circle would be 'the new album is this could be the starter of something big.'"

Twenty-five local students headed to the Statehouse to call for higher cigarette taxes and vaping restrictions.

Empowering youth voices

High school students advocate for healthier communities at the Statehouse

Submitted by Breathe Easy Hamilton County

In an inspiring display of civic engagement, a group of 25 high school students from six different Hamilton County schools recently descended upon the Indiana Statehouse to advocate for increased cigarette taxes and stricter regulations on vaping.

The students, accompanied by educators and community leaders, embarked on this impactful journey to address the pressing issue of youth smoking and vaping within their communities.

Led by Breathe Easy Hamilton County, the students had the unique opportunity to engage in meaningful dialogue with Representative Victoria Garcia Wilburn (D-Fishers), who has been a stalwart advocate for public health in the state. The visit included an informative tour of the Statehouse, providing students with a firsthand look at the legislative process, and culminated in an insightful session where they observed lawmakers deliberating on matters affecting the well-being of citizens.

The primary focus of the students' advocacy was to highlight the importance of implementing higher cigarette taxes and more stringent regulations on vaping products. Their motivation stems from a genuine concern for the health and well-being of their peers and the broader community. Youth smoking and vaping pose serious health risks and contribute to a range of long-term health issues.

VOICE, Breathe Easy Hamilton County's youth-led initiative, believes that involving young voices in the legislative process is crucial for fostering a sense of responsibility and ownership over public health issues. By bringing together students from diverse backgrounds and schools, the organization aims to amplify the collective impact of youth advocacy and encourage a collaborative approach to address these pressing concerns.

"We are immensely proud of our students for taking the initiative to advocate for the health of their communities," Youth Coordinator Erica Strahm said. "Their engagement with Representative Garcia and their presence in the Statehouse signify the power of youth voices in influencing positive change."

The visit to the Statehouse not only provided the students with a platform to express their concerns but also served as a valuable educational experience that will undoubtedly shape their understanding of the democratic process.

As these young advocates return to their schools, they carry with them the knowledge that their voices matter and that they can actively contribute to building healthier communities. Breathe Easy Hamilton County remains committed to supporting youth-led initiatives and will continue to empower the next generation of civic leaders.

The Folks at Home is a nifty throwback to when sitcoms were good

Indiana Repertory Theatre (IRT) presents R. Eric Thomas' The Folks at Home, a sitcom-patterned comedy recalling any number of favorite TV series from our pasts.

COLUMNIST

KEN KLINGLENMEIER
A Seat on the Aisle

some rather short scenes with plenty of spaces for commercial messages, though this part of TV is thankfully not included.

Claire Wilcher completes the cast with two appearances – first as the couples' bizarre maid Alice, and next, in a superior comic appearance which generates the most laughs, as Brandon's pregnant sister Brittany.

Scenic designer Linda Buchanan, costume designer Yao Chen, light designer Jared Gooding, and sound designer Sharath Patel all contribute to the show's success.

Director Reggie D. White unwraps the script with a fine cast of players, depicting a good ol' fashioned '70s/'80s-style situation comedy.

The story is a bit more modernly faceted than any from that era – a mixed gay couple, Roger (Keith Illidge) and Brandon (Garrett Young), are struggling to keep up their mortgage payments since Roger lost his job at a realty agency. Brandon believes the solution is to sell the house, but Roger strongly disagrees.

About this time, Roger's parents Vernon and Pamela (Sean Blake and Olivia D. Dawson) have lost their home for a variety of reasons and come to live with their son and his partner. Next, Brandon's mom Maureen (Tracy Michelle Arnold) has disagreements with her landlord and must seek an alternative living situation, which means that she too moves into the crowded home. And thus, this homage to sitcoms is duly set in motion.

The one problem I had with the show is a rather uncommon professional ranks flaw – soft voices and some garbled speech. An odd occurrence right at the beginning of the show happened when an audience member actually shouted out "Can't hear you!" Kinda rude but also true. We couldn't. I hope the projection and diction improve here.

Bottom line: This is enjoyable and worthwhile entertainment – an engaging story told by a troupe of actors who built nifty characterizations, all wrapped up with a tidy bow with a satisfying conclusion.

The Folks at Home runs through March 16. Ticket information is available at irtlive.com or by calling (317) 635-5252.

Breathe Easy Hamilton County advocates for public health at Indiana Statehouse

Submitted by Breathe Easy Hamilton County

Staff members from Breathe Easy Hamilton County (BEHC), a leading tobacco control agency, took a proactive step towards promoting public health by participating in Public Health Day at the Indiana Statehouse.

The event, hosted by the Indiana Department of Health, provided a platform for key stakeholders to converge, share insights, and address critical issues in the realm of public health.

The day commenced with an insightful speech from Governor Eric Holcomb, setting the tone for discussions centered around enhancing public health policies and initiatives. A highlight of the event was a panel discussion featuring experts delving into topics crucial for the well-being of Indiana residents, particularly focusing on the Health First Indiana initiative.

The dedication and contribution of local health department heroes were celebrated during an award ceremony, recognizing their unwavering commitment to safeguarding the health of their communities. BEHC extends its heartfelt congratulations to the honorees for their outstanding service and dedication.

One of the key moments of the day was the meeting between BECH staff and Senator J.D Ford (D-Indianapolis). The agency took this opportunity to advocate for vital measures aimed at curbing tobacco use among the youth. Discussions revolved around the urgency of implementing higher cigarette taxes and reinforcing regulations on vaping products to mitigate the growing public health concerns associated with these practices.

"Breathe Easy Hamilton County is steadfast in its commitment to championing public health," BEHC Executive Director Stacy Collins said. "Our engagement with Senator Ford was an important step in advancing policies that can make a significant impact on reducing tobacco-related harm in our community."

Shaffer criticizes Carmel Redevelopment Authority's habit of overspending

Dear Editor:
Monday's 2023 annual financial report published by Carmel's redevelopment authority presents a cautionary tale for those Hamilton County cities and towns following Carmel's lead into its $1.4 billion debt.

The redevelopment authority reported it spent more than it received in all but two of the last six years.

And its $580.6 million unpaid principal debt is more than a third of the $1.4 billion principal and interest owed by the city and authority combined.

The Carmel Redevelopment Authority reported its 2024 debt repayment will total $34 million – nearly as much as the city takes in by way of property taxes, for comparison's sake.

Since 2018, the redevelopment blight fighters took in $603.6 million but spent $686.6 million, or 19 percent more.

Spending more than you receive and borrowing the difference at ever-higher rates of interest is no way to run a household economy, let alone a city's.

Millers waste no time beating Zionsville in sectional opener

By RICHIE HALL
sports@readthereporter.com

NOBLESVILLE – Everybody did their job for the Millers on Tuesday night.

The Noblesville boys basketball team opened play at Class 4A Sectional 8 with a convincing 67-49 win over Zionsville at The Mill. The No. 2-ranked Millers broke away from the Eagles after a tight first quarter and used great balance to easily advance to Friday night’s first sectional semifinal game.

“It’s a nice luxury that we do have that depth and balance,” said Noblesville coach Scott McClelland. “We’ve seen it this year over and over.”

The Millers only trailed once in the game, down 3-2 in the first quarter. Baron Walker, who scored Noblesville’s first basket, got his team on top with two free throws, then Aiden Brewer made a layin for a 6-3 lead.

Zionsville tied the game on a 3-pointer, the first of four ties during the opening period. Walker stepped up again at the end of the quarter, with a layin to give the Millers a 15-13 lead.

Noblesville started the second quarter with a 9-0 spurt, with four different players contributing to the run. Aaron Fine’s jumper finished the run and put the Millers ahead 24-13. Fine later drained a 3, and Noblesville led by double digits for the remainder of the game.

The Millers were up 30-18 at halftime. Walker opened the second half with a triple, the first of 23 points in the third quarter. Noblesville put its depth on display again during that period, as six players scored. Fine and TJ Davidson also hit 3s.

In the fourth quarter, the Millers made a final 8-0 run that led to their largest lead of the game at 67-41. Walston, Davidson and Fine all made layins, while Justin Curry threw down a dunk. Walston and Curry’s baskets moved them into double digits, something that Fine and Walker had already done by then.

Fine finished the game with 18 points. Walston, Walker and Curry all scored 11, with Walston dishing out four assists. Noblesville had balanced rebounding as well: Walston finished with eight, Will Smits collected six and Fine, Curry and Brewer all pulled four.

“We just got great dudes,” said McClelland. “We got really good guys that are unselfish. It’s a really nice luxury knowing that everybody just wants to get the win.”

Noblesville’s Hunter Walston was one of four Millers in double figures during their 67-49 sectional win over Zionsville Tuesday at The Mill. Walston scored 11 points, pulled eight rebounds and dished out four assists.

McClelland also gave recognition to Luke Etchison, who helped out in practice by playing the role of Zionsville’s Maguire

Mitchell, one of the Eagles’ best players.

“He just gave us a great look and he made our team better,” said McClelland.

“That’s a huge compliment,” said Etchison. “And honestly, I’m just glad I could help the team. It was so being Maguire this week and just playing ball.” Noblesville improved to 21-2 and plays No. 3 Westfield in the first semifinal at 6 p.m. Friday.

Tigers get moving early, gain spot in sectional semifinals

By RICHIE HALL
sports@readthereporter.com

NOBLESVILLE – A fast start got Fishers into the Sectional 8 semifinals.

The Class 4A No. 1 Tigers blasted out of the gate and carried that momentum to a 54-41 victory over Carmel in the first round of sectional action at The Mill in Noblesville. Fishers will take on Hamilton Southeastern in Friday’s second semifinal.

The Greyhounds, ranked No. 16 in the IBCA one-class poll, had handed the Tigers their only loss of the season exactly one month ago (Jan. 27). Fishers junior JonAnthony Hall said his team was “so focused” as it was coming into the game.

“That’s all we worried about,” said Hall. “As soon as we beat North Central, we just attacked that film. We went over and over and over again like it was ingrained in our head.”

That preparation showed itself in the first quarter. The Tigers scored the first 12 points of the game: Hall started things with a layin, then Millen McCartney alternated two 3-pointers with a pair of Keenan Garner baskets.

Carmel worked its way back to 16-7 with an Alex Couto 3 and Ryan Clevenger layin, but Fishers’ Justin Kirby answered that with a triple, and Parker Perdue finished the quarter with a pair of free throws, giving the Tigers a 21-7 lead.

“We talked all week about, they’re so disciplined, they’re so well-coached that if you get behind on them, it’s really hard to come back,” said Fishers coach Garrett Winegar. “We dealt with that last time, so we had a big focus on getting a great start. We had a lot of actions that we felt would be successful that we really worked on and they worked for us.”

Carmel continued to press throughout the game, and a Ben Bremer triple got the ‘Hounds within 23-14 in the second quarter. The Tigers answered that with a 7-0 run, led by a steal and dunk from Hall. Taden Metzger threw in a 3, and Nathan Baker’s layin gave Fishers a 30-14 lead.

Five points from Evan Harrell cut the Tigers’ advantage to 30-19 by halftime, and Couto hit a jumper to open the second half. Fishers stayed in front, with Kirby scoring four points in the last minute of the quarter to keep the Tigers ahead 40-27.

Carmel made a 6-0 run during the early part of the fourth quarter to get within 43-35; Aidan Dickerson, Evan Harrell and Couto all made baskets. Hall ended the run with a layin, and Fishers kept its lead around 10 points for the game's final two minutes.

All nine Tigers players scored, led by Hall's 10 points. Metzger and McCartney both had eight points. Garner finished with four points, but was effective passing the ball with six assists.

"He did a really great job on making extra passes to open guys for shots," said Hall.

"That's his lowest-scoring game of his career and I think he dominated the game. I really do," said Winegar.

"The way he passed, he made the right read every time."

Couto scored 13 points for Carmel, with Harrell adding 11 points and five rebounds. Clevenger made four steals for the Greyhounds, who finished 12-11 but 8-2 for their last 10 games.

"I think the response from our team is indicative of the season," said Carmel coach Ryan Osborn. "They didn't back down, they didn't stop fighting. They didn't stop believing. And I give all the credit to our seniors. Our seniors all season were incredible in how they responded to challenges."

Fishers is 23-1 and will play the Royals in the second Friday semifinal, which will start around 7:30 p.m.

Golden Eagles cruise past Herron, advance to sectional semifinal

By CRAIG ADKINS
For The Reporter

NOBLESVILLE – It didn't take long for Guerin Catholic to get into a groove in its sectional opener. Few mistakes and continuity on both ends of the floor helped considerably.

The Golden Eagles jumped out early and were never forced to look back on their way to a 78-17 first round sectional win over Herron.

Guerin burst out 9-0 in the first 90 seconds-plus, forcing the Achaeans to burn their first timeout. Robert Sorensen scored the first points when caught the opening tip and then knocked down a three for a 5-0 lead just 1:13 into the contest. Bryson Cardinal scored the next six on two field goals and a pair of free throws for the nine-point cushion.

"Look, I know it's our home gym and I know it's a place we're accustomed to, but still, it felt different tonight," Guerin Catholic head coach Bob Allen said. "It just does. It does every single year."

The starters took full advantage of the situations Herron presented and it allowed them to pose their will.

"It's finally nice to see our starting five out there all healthy and ready to go at the right time," Allen continued. "It's been long overdue for us this year and we were very confident in what we did this evening. We're very confident in our preparation in what we have going on going forward.

From that point, the hosts went on a 21-2 run to end the first with a 30-4 lead.

"We talked about it all year. When the opportunity presents itself, you don't play the scoreboard, you don't play what's going on. You try and do what we've been preaching all year and I thought our guys did that for the most part," Allen stated.

GC kept its feet on the gas pedal in the second, expanding their wide margin to a halftime score of 55-11.

Guerin's bench continued to produce in the second half. They outscored the Achaeans 12-4 in the third, pushing the lead out to 67-15.

With a comfortable lead throughout the game, the Guerin coaching staff was able to go pretty far down the bench to rotate players in. Multiple players logged double-digit minutes, allowing the Golden Eagles to work on and iron out some things heading into Friday's semifinal.

"I thought our guys put in some great minutes, just to get their feet wet and feel comfortable with the atmosphere," Allen commented on his bench's play.

The fourth would be similar to the third with GC scoring 11 to Herron's two, turning out the final score of 78-17.

The Golden Eagle starters were able to save some energy for Friday's game. Aside from a majority of the first and some of the second, none of the starting five played more than nine minutes, allowing depth to play a huge role.

Balanced scoring and consistency on both ends of the floor helped Guerin do a lot of things well. They shot 60 percent from the floor, making 30-of-50, but more importantly they had 20 assists on those 30 made field goals. Knocking down 9-for-16 from outside-the-arc proved to be another dagger that kept Herron at a distance.

"It's one of those things where, if you look at our stats for the year, we don't have one guy scoring 20 something points a night," Allen said. "Who's taking advantage of the right opportunities when they're there. That's kind of what our team's done all year and what we're all about."

Sorensen led with 15 points on 6-of-7 shooting, including 3-for-3 on three-pointers. Nik Balmuri came off the bench with 11 points, also knocking down all three of his outside shots. Cardinal, Malcolm Houze and Jake Grissom all chipped in eight.

Guerin Catholic (18-7) moves on to the Class 3A Sectional 27 semifinal on Friday against fellow Circle City Conference foe Bishop Chatard (9-12) at 6 p.m.

"I think with Chatard, it's one of those things where their coaches have them prepared. They're a physical team. They compete hard. We had a tight game with them earlier this year at their place," Allen said on playing Chatard.

Guerin won at Chatard in their CCC matchup on January 5, 56-52.

"We've obviously made some changes and so have they. We're excited for the opportunity to play great teams. We're going to enjoy this evening a little bit and we're going to get locked in on Chatard starting tomorrow," Allen said.

Countdown to 108th Indy 500 accelerates

New 'This Is May' campaign video featuring Newgarden narration unveiled

Submitted by IMS

The countdown to the 108th Indianapolis 500 presented by Gainbridge shifted into even higher gear Monday, Feb. 26, which marks 90 days until Race Day, with milk and stirring words from 2023 race winner Josef Newgarden.

In celebration of basketball's biggest stage calling Indy home for the 2024 NBA All-Star Weekend on Feb. 16-18, Indianapolis Motor Speedway President J. Douglas Boles (photo, right) initiated a toast – using milk, of course – and presented Pacers Sports & Entertainment CEO Rick Fuson (photo, left) with an exclusive Indy 500 milk bottle during ceremonies Feb. 26.

“2024 is a big year for sports in Indianapolis – from the NBA All-Star Weekend to the 108th Indianapolis 500 and the USA Swimming 2024 Olympic Trials – no one hosts the biggest sporting events in the world like Indy,” Boles said. “Our fans bring this city to life and embrace countdown moments with enthusiasm and excitement. The countdown is on, and we can't wait to celebrate May.”

Five hundred exclusively numbered milk bottles will be presented to celebrities, community leaders, partners and fans in the lead-up to the green flag for the Indy 500. Bottle number one was presented to Fuson in Bicentennial Unity Plaza to launch the countdown toward Race Day, Sunday, May 26.

As part of today's celebration, the 2024 Indy 500 marketing campaign video also was premiered live.

Click here to see the “May is Yours” video.

Narrated by Newgarden as he sits in the empty grandstands across from the Yard of Bricks at IMS, the 60-second extended spot promotes the “This is May” campaign for this year's race and was created by Penske Entertainment.

While “This is May” celebrates the always epic and unique experiences that make May a tradition for many, May truly belongs to the fans. No winner celebration better showcases that magic than Newgarden's climb through the fence to join the fans after he crossed the Yard of Bricks and earned his first Indianapolis 500 victory May 28, 2023. May is Ours. May is Yours. This is May.

The extended ad spot, which captures the story and distills the passion of Indy 500 fans, also will be posted on IMS social channels, the IMS YouTube channel and IMS.com for viewing and sharing. A 30-second version can be seen on local broadcast affiliates and cable television throughout Central Indiana.

Tickets are on sale at IMS.com for the 108th Indianapolis 500 presented by Gainbridge, Sonsio Grand Prix and all Month of May activities.
