This newspaper handled the 4th of July like most Americans do vacations ... which is to say we scrambled around like madmen going to every single thing we could possibly get to, took a thousand photos, then went home, collapsed, and thought, "I need a vacation!" In this week's edition you will see stories and photos from Carmel, Cicero, Fishers, Noblesville, Westfield, and Sheridan. If you didn't get to everything you wanted to, you can at least read all about it in the Hamilton County Reporter. See more photos on Pages A2, A3, A9, and A10, and at ReadTheReporter.com.

Another Janet adventure

 JANET HART LEONARD
 From the Hart

A little rain must fall into our lives, and sometimes, a lot of frustration. Frustration arrived this week in waves.

It was a good thing we were headed to the beach. The Gulf waters never disappoint in warming my heart and my thoughts. There is something about watching the sunrise over a quiet beach that soothes and refreshes my weary soul.

As my readers know, my travel adventures are quite interesting. Those who know me would rather not be on a flight with me.

We were scheduled to leave Wednesday night at 7:45. After five departing time changes, we took off at 10:45. Takeoff time was past our bedtime, so arriving in Tampa at 1 a.m. was brutal. We still had about a 45-minute ride to our house.

We were not the only plane arriving at that middle-of-the-night hour. The tram to the main area where we would pick up our luggage had us packed like my luggage ... squished into every open space. I would be traveling to the She Speaks Conference after my gig with granddogsitting. Yes, I'm that lady traveler who packs for a week when I will only be gone for a few days. There are two stacks of clothing: "I know I'll need this" and "I might need this."

Upon walking up to the #15 luggage carousel, we were informed that the luggage for three other flights was in front of ours. After patiently (?) waiting, we were told that our luggage was now on the #13 carousel. We paraded with 130 sleepy travelers.

Jeff, Chuck's son, was four cars deep when we finally found him. The pick-up area looked like a swarm of buzzing people trying to escape a traffic jam. Horns were honking!

2:15 a.m. We arrived at Hunter's Green. With a short summer night's sleep, we ventured to the beach where my thoughts could relax and write this week's column. My computer thought differently. It seems it was out of memory. Well, at 68 years vintage ... so am I. Thankfully, Jeff's wife, Sara, showed me that I needed to delete files, photos, and many other things and how to empty my trash. Have I mentioned I love technology? I hope you read that with the most sarcastic voice you can imagine me having.

As I looked out over the Gulf waters, I wrote my column. It was one from my heart. It was about courage and faith and how the beach is always a place where I leave my worries and frustrations. I wrote how courage is not something you ask for but something you find when you have no other choice unless you give up. Courage takes you into battle mentally and physically, but most of all, emotionally. I hit "save" ... or so I thought.

When we woke up on Saturday morning, Chuck and I planned to head to First Watch for a leisurely breakfast. I looked for my medication. It's one I need to take. How many times do you have to search for something in the same place for it to be officially lost?

We went on to breakfast. I had a bit of anxiety with my scrambled eggs and grits. I then headed, with great dread, to the local pharmacy.

Mike K. gently informed me that because I had just refilled the prescription on Tuesday, the $550 cost would not be covered by insurance ... unless I got the insurance pharmacy department to override it.

First Meijer grocery-only store in Indiana opens July 11

By ANNA MITCHELL
anna@readthereporter.com

Coming this Thursday, July 11, Meijer will open its first Indiana store that only sells groceries at 5956 Promenade Shops Blvd., Noblesville. That's on the northeast corner of State Road 32 and Little Chicago Road/Hazel Dell Road.

Since 1934, Meijer has cared for its customers. From the Great Depression to today, Meijer has invested in its community. Now, it's offering a fine selection of fresh food and other necessities for families.

"Meijer really believes in giving back to the community and enriching the lives of the community we serve," Meijer Grocery Store Director Travis Bernath said.

When shoppers enter the store, an array of fresh food, deli, and bakery options await in an open floor plan. A few scales stand next to the produce sections to weigh and label fruits and veggies.

The Heartland Bakery offers fresh baked bread, and the Northside Deli has fresh cuts ready for the picking. People can find their dry goods and wine selections all down the center aisle.

Nestled next to the bakery is a coffee vending machine: Costa Express. Using the touchscreen, shoppers can mix

Carmel Christkindlmarkt announces 2024 mug design

The REPORTER

The Carmel Christkindlmarkt has unveiled the 2024 design of the Market's iconic boot mug. This year's mug will be royal blue, with a snowy white interior.

Along with the updated color, this year's mug features a heart-shaped handle for the first time. The mug maintains the traditional scene of delicate snowflakes, views of the Palladium, ice skaters on the Ice at Carter Green, and the Glühwein Pyramid – one of the signature sights at the Market, and the first Pyramid of its kind in the United States.

"Since the inaugural Christkindlmarkt in 2017, the Glühwein boot mugs have become wildly popular," said CEO Maria Adele Rosenfeld. "They are a treasured keepsake for many individual collectors and families. This year's rich blue and white colors help evoke the wonder and magical feel of the Market, and the heart-shaped handle represents how beloved the event is to our visitors."

These collectible mugs will be available for sale on-site at the Market for $6 each

Mugs can be purchased at various booths throughout the Parade of patriotic rebels keep tradition alive in Sheridan

By AMY ADAMS
news@readthereporter.com

The rain in Sheridan started around 9 a.m., the same time registration for the annual Lions Club Fourth of July Parade was set to begin. The difficult decision was made to cancel the parade, but not without disappointment.

Vance Wallace and his friend Steve Bilby sat next to a tractor that would have paraded down Main Street at 10 a.m. from Sheridan High School to Biddle Memorial Park.

"I've never seen the parade canceled because of rain," Wallace said. "I've seen it rain before the parade, and I've seen it rain after the parade, but never during the parade."

Pat Pickett expressed similar regret as he sat in the driver's seat of the Noel Pickett family's 1929 Model A with nowhere to go.

"This would have been the car's 47th year in a row to be in the parade," Pickett said.

Word spread that the parade had been canceled. Word also spread that the people of Sheridan wanted the tradition to continue.

With some grassroots organizing and help from social media, an unsponsored parade took place at 4 p.m., and plenty of people braved the rain to cheer them on.

"The parade that came through was not sponsored by anyone," Sheridan Events Committee Secretary Diana Schwartz said.

"It was a group of patriotic townspeople who quickly got together to keep the tradition alive. The committee members were busy at the park and weren't able to help, but I believe the town police were helping guide them through traffic to make sure everyone stayed safe."

The crowd at Biddle Memorial Park was off and on due to rain, but by the time Nora Stites sang the national anthem, the clouds had begun to part. Sheridan High School graduate Steve Fulton, who took the stage to play some country standards, joked that he was playing for 13 people representing the 13 original colonies. But as the rain let up and the time for fireworks drew closer, there was a nice crowd as Lisa Frank and the Trapper Keepers began their set.

The fireworks went off around 10 p.m. without a hitch.

Carmel Clay Public Library to hold Local Author Fair

The REPORTER

The Carmel Clay Public Library will hold a Local Author Fair, a celebration of literary talent and community engagement, from 1 to 4 p.m. on Saturday, Aug. 24 at the Main Library, 425 E. Main St. Admission is free.

Attendees will have the unique opportunity to connect with dozens of local authors representing a diverse range of genres. From established writers to emerging voices, the fair will showcase work by authors from Carmel and the surrounding area. Authors will discuss their writing, sell and sign books, and share insights into their creative process.

"We've seen an increase in recent years in the number of authors in our community, especially as self-publishing has taken off," said library Adult Services Assistant Manager Kendall Culbertson. "This event will be a great way to connect those authors with new readers and for readers to learn about the writing process from the people who do it."

Local authors who are interested in being part of the event may apply online through July 26 at carmelclaylibrary.org/local-author-fair.

More details about the event, including a list of participating organizations, can be found at carmelclaylibrary.org/events.

Westfield unveils design for new Fire Station 84

The REPORTER

The City of Westfield and the Westfield Fire Department have unveiled renderings for Station 84, located at 191st Street and Chad Hittle Drive in the northern portion of the city.

This additional station will serve the growing community with exceptional fire and medical services. Construction will begin soon and is anticipated to open and operational in October 2025.

The two-story, 20,000 square-foot building will include three full apparatus bays, living and sleeping quarters, and a museum open to the public. It can house up to 12 fire department personnel for 24/7 response with a ladder truck and an engine.

The location fills a critical need as the city's northern area has grown with additional residential neighborhoods. The station will serve primarily the U.S. 31 corridor, the Grand Park area, and Chatham Hills. Given that the nearest fire stations for this area are located off State Road 32, it is expected to reduce response times by more than two minutes in an industry where every second matters.

"We are woefully behind in the number of fire stations needed for the City of Westfield," Mayor Scott Willis said. "It is a priority of my administration to provide exceptional public safety to our residents and visitors, and this is one of the first steps in accomplishing that goal. We can only advance Westfield if we get projects like these started."

The cost of Station 84 is approximately $11 million and is financed through a Build-Operate-Transfer (BOT) bond.

Designs for Station 85 are currently underway.

and match the coffee beans and milk to create the specific drink they desire.

This Meijer will offer more than food, though.

The store has a full pharmacy with a drive-thru for customers' convenience. Shoppers can also buy health, beauty, baby, and pet products. Towards the front of the store, there is a card section. Customers can celebrate for every occasion at "The Card Shop."

Bernath said the new store is about half the size of a traditional supercenter, making the store a more convenient shopping destination for busy families.

"It's all about convenience. We offer everything a family needs to come in on their weekly shopping trip," Bernath said.

While they care for their community by providing groceries for their shoppers, Meijer Grocery takes it a step further. On July 2, the store donated $15,000 to Fueled for School, a program that provides children in Hamilton County with the food and nutrition they need.

"Meijer has been with us a few years now, and what I truly love about them is not only do they join us in the fight against child hunger in our community here at the store, but they also join us in the campaign with their boots on the ground," Executive Director of Fueled for School Kristina Trusty said.

Meijer has provided meal packs for the children as well as other support for the Fueled for School program in the work to alleviate child hunger.

"And so I think it just speaks a lot about their dedication to the children in our community and we can't thank you guys enough for loving us," Trusty said.

Bernath said Meijer would give another donation to a different youth organization this week. Meijer's values are its customers, family, competition, freshness, and safety and health. The company carries out those values for its customers with each shopping experience.

Can I be a pantry host?

We get questions regularly, lots of questions. Neighbors ask us about pantry usage, what to donate, product expiration, how to volunteer, what can I do to help, and one of my personal favorites: how do I host a pantry?

MARK HALL
The Feeding Team Feature

one of their next few meals is coming from. Next, a pantry host may adopt their pantry. This means that the host either gathers food donations or picks up food supplies from the Feeding Team offices two times a month. A few times each week, the adopter sorts, cleans and stocks their pantry. It takes a few hours each month. Pantry adoption is a great opportunity for Scouts, clubs, church groups, individuals, civic organizations, and families to demonstrate giving back to those in need right here in central Indiana. Watching parents and grandparents teach the importance of generational giving is one of the biggest joys that comes from being a member of the Feeding Team.

Glad you asked. Hosting a pantry is not nearly as daunting as some might think. Pantry hosts vary greatly, but include businesses, schools, churches, government organizations, civic groups, unions, apartment complexes, HOAs, daycares, and on and on.

First, a pantry host provides a location to house one of our no-questions-asked pantries. It costs the host nothing but some space. We locate pantries near where gap families live or in locations that gap families frequent.

What is a gap family, you ask? These are our neighbors whose income is too large to qualify for public assistance, but whose income isn't large enough to ensure food security should something go bump in the night and impact their budget. These are families who are one blown engine, one large medical bill, one unexpected big expense away from not knowing where as possible, and our hearts are with those who, like my family, could not always make ends meet. Thank you for supporting the pantries. We love serving with so many neighbors across Hamilton County. In future columns, we will share more stories about how your generosity served neighbors in times of need. The face of hunger in Hamilton County is not what you may think. In practical terms, this straightforward way to help neighbors is having real impact on lives, families, and our communities. Thank you. A few meals can change the course of a person's life. A can of green beans means so much more when you have nothing to feed your kids.

Would you like to get involved? Volunteer opportunities are available. We are evaluating new pantry locations. If you think you have a potential location, please contact us.

Mark and Lisa Hall are the Founders of Feeding Team. They may be reached at lisa@feedingteam.org and mark@feedingteam.org or by calling (317) 832-1123.

Do you have a location that you'd like to be considered? Please reach out and let us know. We are looking for the next pantry location and the next pantry host.

As a "Take What You Need, Give What You Can" model, your donations are responsible for hundreds of meals each week. Although you may never see the recipient, know in quiet satisfaction that you are making a difference in the lives of Hoosier families right here in central Indiana.

Feeding Team provides a way and a place for those in need to get food for their family. While each pantry really is just a big wooden yellow box, it means so much more for donors and for families in need. You are welcome to join us as together we fight to eliminate hunger in Hamilton County.

With over 40,000 food-challenged neighbors in Hamilton County, FeedingTeam.org is a registered 501(c)(3) not-for-profit organization that provides outdoor 24/7/365 no-questions-asked free food pantries throughout the county.

The pantries exist to meet the food insecurity needs of gap families, neighbors who may not qualify for public assistance and could use a few meals before payday. The pantries serve as many food-challenged neighbors

Carmel Mayor's Housing Task Force to hold public input meeting July 25

The REPORTER

The Carmel Mayor's Housing Task Force will hold a public meeting from 7:30 to 9 a.m. on Thursday, July 25, exclusively for resident input. The meeting will be held in the Council Chambers on the second floor of Carmel City Hall, 1 Civic Square.

The task force is nearing the end of its fact-finding phase, which has occurred over the past five months during public meetings. So far, the task force has received and reviewed relevant reports, studies and data presented by subject matter experts who have shared their expertise and insights. Although each meeting has included time for public input, the upcoming July meeting will be dedicated to hearing residents' feedback on the housing issues facing the Carmel community.

"We believe the input from our residents is an important part of this process," Task Force Chair Christine Zoccola said. "Community feedback is incredibly valuable, and this feedback will ultimately help shape the recommendations made to Mayor Finkam. We look forward to the July 25 meeting and hope to hear from many of our Carmel residents."

An agenda outlining the issues and topics for discussion will be available for review and comment before the July 25 meeting. The task force maintains a website where videos and presentation materials from previous meetings can be viewed. Additionally, study materials, public correspondence, and supporting information are available for review at tinyurl.com/CarmelHousingTF, as well.

Thanks for reading!

READ ON!

"So Many Books, So Little Time."

For decades, I've seen this written on T-shirts, coffee cups, bumper stickers, book markers, etc.

It's even the main title of a book by Sara Nelson, which I haven't had time to read yet. So Many Books, So Little Time: A Year of Passionate Reading was published in 2004.

In the past two decades, you'd think that I would've found time to at least read her book since 20 years IS. A. LOT. OF. TIME.

I get antsy and angsty thinking about the passage of time.

If there was "so little time" 25 years ago, it goes without saying that there is even less time to read now, especially for someone like me soon to turn 60, the death-knell number of middle-aged status, the official, dreaded door knock to old age status. My "book of life" pages have started to yellow, the fanning of its pages wafting a denser mustiness, like the thickening of bad morning breath as we age.

There are more books that I've read in my past than there will be books that I'll read in my future. Younger people think they will get to them all, with time to spare. I can't think of a sadder thought than that of a deathbed book dog-eared at page 60.

Just when did my reading days of wishful thinking morph into days of wistful thinking?

The subject of reading (well ... not reading) arose during a recent therapist visit.

"How's your marriage?"

"My marriage is great. It's the only solid part of me."

"Can you tell me more?"

"Things that brought me pure joy most of my life gradually have lost their magic."

"What things?"

"Very important things."

"Like?"

"Music. Songs that brought me great joy just don't do it for me anymore. Remember as a kid when you heard that favorite song on the radio ... finally ... days might've passed since you last heard it ... and it meant so freaking much to you ... when that radio dial conjured that song that you were starving for ... maybe you bought the 8-track, the 45, the album, the cassette, the CD ... just to have easier access to that song ... but no matter how many times that song spun or unspooled, it maintained its magic ... but now ... now ... you can play any song anytime anywhere thanks to streaming ... and well ... you end up playing it so many freaking times that it loses its ear-hole mojo ... as B.B. King sings, 'The thrill is gone.' And even that song has lost its thrill. And movies. Movies suck now. All this comic book hero horse hockey and prequels and sequels and remakes. Movies used to be my life. Like music! And books! Like I said, I used to read all the time. But not anymore. Now, it's like I've forgotten how to read. Night reading is out of the question ... I fall asleep after two paragraphs. Mostly, my wife and I spend our married time streaming Netflix, Prime, Max, Hulu, Paramount, Apple TV, and PBS instead of opening books ... and guess what ... the next day neither one of us can even remember what we watched! Never ever have I forgotten what book I had my nose in the night before ..."

"But your marriage is good."

"Married life is good."

"Have you thought about not turning on the TV and setting aside time to read books with your wife?"

"My marriage is good. Let's not mess with my marriage. Besides, I'm just not a book group kind of guy."

My therapist scribbled something in her notebook. She closed The Book of Scott. "I hate to tell you this but your 45 minutes are up," she said.

And there I was just about to share some trivial revelation about how my parent-like cats keep telling me to murder the paperboy.

Welcome to my point of personal paradox. Despite my period of reading decline, I still buy books. Seven in the past week. My stack of unread titles has surpassed my stack of read titles. Each unread book brings with it a vicious scrotal squeeze. But maybe that's good. Maybe it's a sign that my reader's pulse hasn't flatlined. Hope remains that I'll get to those books eventually.

There's a quote attributed to the late singer-songwriter Warren Zevon that packs a mighty wallop: "We love to buy books because we believe we're buying the time to read them." I like how this Zevon-ism occupies the seat opposite of the "so many books, so little time" seat on the great sea-saw of life.

Despite knowing Zevon, an avid reader, died at 56 – so little time! – I can't help but gravitate closer to his side of the teeter-totter now.

Maybe that's why I buy books that I likely will never read.

Maybe my angst goes deeper than books.

Maybe in this time of "so little time" I'm desperately hoping to buy time.

Maybe I'll discuss this revelation during my next therapy session. But I'll have to do it quickly. I only have 45 minutes.

Acceptance & joy within myself – that's why I write

Aside from a few papers in high school and college and a sporadic journal I kept, writing and I really didn't have much of a relationship.

I was sitting in a church service one Sunday a few years ago, and my pastor challenged us to do something way outside of our comfort zone – something that could push us further toward our purpose in this life.

I couldn't think of anything more terrifying than vulnerably sharing my story about my life living with a disability, and what it was like being on a lifelong search for a diagnosis. At the time of this challenge, I was still being referred to as "unidentified" by my doctors, so starting out that's what many of my blog posts centered around.

AMY SHINNEMAN
Disability in the City

Of course, I had no way of knowing that just around the corner were the answers I had waited a lifetime on, and in a sense, a new beginning for me. It was like I was finally released to be the person I was always meant to be. The curtain was finally pulled back, allowing me to see and understand so much about myself.

It was a physical as well as an emotional release when I finally heard the words I had been longing to hear my whole life. "Your genetic test results revealed you have a condition called 'Bethlem Myopathy.'" I stood in the bathroom of a local coffee shop of all places to take in this news. Not exactly how I always envisioned it going down. I had never heard of Bethlem Myopathy, let alone knew anything about it. But yet, I already knew everything about it because it was with me from the beginning. A strange feeling.

As I kept writing, I found that the more I opened up, the more I started to understand about my life. Recounting times from the past, helped me to walk through those times again. I was able to process all those emotions through a different lens. Writing about these life experiences was serving the purpose I had of wanting to reach others who were feeling alone on their path with a disability, while also healing my past wounds.

In time, I began to see a change in myself, and others around me began to see it as well. I became open in a way that I never was before. Bitterness and anger slowly transformed into acceptance and joy. Where only darkness was for so long, a light began to glow. Over time, the light has become brighter. My inner thoughts have become much more positive.

There were many things that deep down I knew were true, but I didn't really believe those truths until I started writing about them. The more I wrote about these truths, the more I felt them.

Writing continues to open doors for me that allow me to serve my community and help others. While I never envisioned myself as a "writer" here I am. Sometimes our joys in life sneak up on us and take us by surprise. Be ready!

Until next time ...

Remembering Poof & her lilies

There was a day about 10 years ago that my husband and I were driving on Allisonville Road and saw a wheelbarrow filled with orange ditch lilies with a sign inviting folks to take.

I told my husband to turn the car around and that we were going to put in a new flower bed in at our old house.

This became one of our favorite spots in our old house, but nobody loved this spot more than Stella. You see, her name was Stella, but we only called her Poof. Poof would wait until the sea of orange was in all its glory and walk through with the foliage of the lilies brushing her face. If you have a dog, you know that anything new in your yard is an immediate source of curiosity. From the moment we planted them, they became her domain. I know she must've felt like a lion walking through the Sahara. She was such a big dog that I think part of her liked this wild patch of lilies because they became so big that it offered her some privacy. Of course, we could still see her, but she didn't know that, and we never told her.

When it came time to move, one of my biggest priorities when transplanting my flowers from the old house to our current one were my ditch lilies. They were not just sentimental; they were absolutely beautiful. Fortunately, we were able to have Stella in our new house, but she passed away about a year after we moved. After we lost her, my sister gave us windchimes with her name and we placed them in the yard where we planted the ditch lilies.

Every time I see an orange daylily, I think of Poof wading through them and how much she loved them. I used to get so mad at her when she would decide to run through them and knock the stalks to the ground. Looking back on it, those are some of my favorite memories of her.

My poof lilies make me think about my mom and her Mema's peonies. Every time the peonies bloom, it's not just a beautiful flower; it is a reminder of her grandmother that she loved so much. She isn't just trimming a bloom; she is tending to something that her grandmother used to and it's a reminder of how much of a role she played in my mom's life.

The beautiful thing about nature is the continuity. Nature's cyclical beauty is comforting for me because I know that even though I do not get to see Poof, I get to take care of her lilies and remember some of the things that made her the happiest. I also know that when the season is over that they will bloom again next year. I also know that as they continue to grow, they will be split and placed in various places in my yard and make me feel Stella's presence.

My first bloom of the season makes me happy because it reminds me of Poof in all her glory. Of course they make me a little sad, but when I see how beautiful they are and am reminded of her romping through them, I can't help but smile.

Now, I have two dogs that run through the same orange lilies and cause the same mayhem that Stella always did, though they will always be Poof's lilies.

Bigger ways to show joyful appreciation to your customers

This week we're talking about showing appreciation to customers by spreading joy to them in bigger ways.

Remember a good old-fashioned phone call from a real human being? This concept is starting to disappear in our society. With more texting, emails, and the occasional "robo/telemarketing/scam" call, sadly, talking to someone on the phone is not as great as it used to be. Thank-a-thons can bring that positivity back!

A thank-a-thon involves a group of people such as staff or board members from an organization or business making phone calls of appreciation to customers. Everyone usually calls five to 10 customers with a short script that goes something like this:

"Hello, Joe? This is Amy from ABC. We wanted to take a minute today to call and personally thank you for your recent donation/purchase/visit with us. It's already making such a difference and we appreciate you very much."

AMY SHANKLAND
Perfectly Imperfect

Then, they stop talking. Chances are that your customer will be flabbergasted, in a good way, if you reach them versus their voicemail!

How about having a business owner, manager, director, or someone else in a high position call and thank a customer occasionally? Can you imagine how good that would make someone feel to have, for example, a founder of a company call them and share their appreciation for a minute?

No matter who makes that call, even if it just goes to voicemail, it may be a welcome relief to hear and it might make someone's day. People won't soon forget your sincere phone call of appreciation!

Just like with staff members, another way to show appreciation to customers is through food. And what's better than breakfast – the most important meal of the day! Spread the word on social media, email, newsletters, or other avenues that you're hosting a free annual "grab and go" breakfast to thank your customers.

Keep things simple by serving a variety of bagels, coffee, juice, tea, and fruit. Host it in an easy, accessible location where customers can park, stay and chat awhile if they like, or simply grab a bag and their favorite morning beverage and be on their way.

Finally, here's something that makes a big visual impact – if you frequently see your customers throughout the day, why not create a wall of fame" showing off a customer of the month? You can select a customer of the month for numerous reasons.

As we end this topic of thanking customers by bringing them joy, just remember, like all the steps discussed in this series, to take things one at a time when exploring new ways to show appreciation to customers.

If you've never gone above and beyond to thank your customers, start slowly with one or two new methods. Divide and conquer as well – many of these can be done by several different employees. Some methods might appeal to one type of employee more than others.

Be prepared as you slowly build your arsenal of appreciation, however, to increase your business like nothing you've ever done before; begin to feel incredibly warm and fuzzy; gain an unbelievable number of new customers; and leave a lasting impression upon your existing customers that will have them remembering you fondly for years to come!

We'll wrap up our joy at work series next week.

Pay attention to the source, not all protein is created equal

"Let food be thy medicine and medicine be thy food." – Hippocrates

Does anyone remember high school "health" class? My summer school health class was taught by a football coach and all-around great guy, Dale Snelling. Many of my readers will recall Mr. Snelling's easygoing way and great sense of humor. He was also a local realtor after retiring from the school system. Most of us NHS students who took the easy credit summer class were busy daydreaming about summer fun, the pool, parties, and time spent with friends ... not so much the tenets of good nutrition and health!

SHARON McMAHON

Let's review the importance of good protein sources and how they help our bodies:

1. Build. Protein is an important building block of bones, muscles, cartilage and skin. In fact, your hair and nails are comprised mostly of protein.

2. Repair. Your body uses it to build and repair tissue.

3. Oxygenate. Red blood cells contain a protein compound that carries oxygen throughout the body. This helps supply your entire body with the nutrients it needs.

4. Digest. About half the dietary protein that you consume each day goes into making enzymes, which aids in digesting food, and making new cells and body chemicals.

5. Regulate. Protein plays an important role in hormone regulation, especially during the transformation and development of cells during puberty.

As noted above in this column, both meat and dairy products are known as good sources of protein. While that may be the usual case, there are often issues associated with this type of protein consumption. The digestion of protein, particularly from meat products, can cause stress on the kidneys, and in the colon excess undigested protein can putrefy into toxic substances, some of which are absorbed into the bloodstream. Therefore, varying your protein sources is quite important.

Vegetarians and vegans must pay close attention to eating adequate protein. Some of those protein sources may include avocado, spinach, sweet potato, peanuts, soybeans, lentils, cashews, almonds, nut butters, non-dairy milk, and grains such as quinoa, oatmeal, and supplements. Protein bars, shakes, smoothies, etc. can be a good source oc-asionally but not as a regular source of your protein.

A general guideline for adequate protein intake is approximately 30 grams per day, although please note that I am not giving you, dear readers, a specific guideline for your personal consumption. This should be discussed with your professional health care provider.

Protein is an essential nutrient that plays a key role in how our bodies function. The key is to consume a diet focusing on proteins along with your complex carbohydrates and healthy fats. (Yes, there are healthy fats!)

Enjoy our local farmers' markets and abundance of fresh vegetables and fruits along with your favorite protein sources – balance is the key!

Gary married the love of his life Doris on July 28, 1972, their daughter Jenny was born on January 21, 1973, and they resided in Noblesville for many years. He moved to Pendleton in 2021 to be with his daughter and son-in-law, after losing the love of his life whom he was married to for 50 years. Gary was a kind, sweet, gentle man who never met a stranger and always took care of the people he loved. He was a joy to be around and we are very thankful he lived with us for the past three years. We lost him way too soon.

Gary retired from Carmel Street Department after many years of service. He was a hard worker and enjoyed his retirement years very much. Gary so loved his Barn/Garage and spent a lot of time in there, and he was looking forward to it being completely finished.

Gary will be missed beyond words and our hearts are broken. He was just not ordinary, he was extraordinary. Men like him are very rare these days. He taught me so many things but most of all he showed me what true kindness and love is.

Norma Jean Robey April 18, 1933 – June 29, 2024

Jean passed away peacefully at her home, where she had lived for 66 years, on June 29, 2024, surrounded by her family.

She was born in a farmhouse at 151st Street and Gray Road near Westfield, the third of five children born to G.C. and Kathern Clark. She was a proud graduate of Westfield High School and married the love of her life, Robert Robey, Sr., on July 6, 1951, to whom she had been introduced on a blind date. They were the proud parents of Robert, Jr., Roy, Victoria, and Karen.

In 1968, Jean embarked on a highly successful real estate career in the booming market of Hamilton County by joining Kaiser Real Estate Company. In 1984, Jean and Robert Sr. decided to open Robey Real Estate, Inc. which grew into Century 21 Robey Real Estate. After Robert's death in 1994, Jean continued her successful business eventually merging with Realty Group Companies and enjoyed continued success until her retirement in 2013 after more than 45 years, helping hundreds of families buy and sell homes and farms. During her entire career, the families she worked with were more than clients – they were friends.

Despite working many, many hours, Jean found time to be the hostess for huge extended family gatherings at Thanksgiving, Easter, and Christmas, and would perfectly prepare traditional "Hoosier" meals. She was an excellent cook and carried on an amazing legacy from her mother in preparing everyone's favorite dishes, especially matching and even exceeding her cobbread!

Jean loved Westfield and Westfield Schools and was an avid supporter at all her children's, grandchildren's, and great-grandchildren's events. Her favorite saying was "I bleed green." One of her favorite songs was "Glory to Old Westfield" and she loved belting it out at the many games she attended while supporting her family members. Jean was a long-time member of Little Eagle Creek Christian Church.

Mother was a drop-out, part 3 one day of school in two years.

Two years passed quickly. Now where to find a job. Every place I heard of a job opening, I heard the same story. They would be glad to hire me, but a local person had already applied.

So I dropped out. With a debt hanging over my head, I had to find some kind – any kind – of employment. I was lucky enough to get a job with R. R. Donnelley. This was a printing company located in Crawfordsville. I worked there for a little over two years (1937-39).

I started in the bindery for 33¢ an hour. After a while I was promoted to time clerk. Later the office boss called me upstairs for an interview. He gave me a test and a few days later I began office work as a cost clerk. Then through my dad's influence and effort,

I was hired to teach grades three and four at Rob Roy School south of Attica. That was in the fall of 1939.

My classmate was teaching all eight grades, but I had to go back to college in order to teach third grade. I taught at Rob Roy from fall 1939 to Spring 1941. At that time I moved to Adams County (sic) and I dropped out of school.

Time marched on and brought many changes. Sometime around 1950, a cousin wanted Dad to go to Huntington College with him. That worked until the cousin finished his four-year course. Having begun, Dad wanted to finish, but it was a long drive after working all day. Dad needed someone to ride along, and he elected me. Grandma encouraged that and offered to baby-sit. Dad graduated in 1953. We took the children to his Commencement. I wonder if either one remembers. It was an outdoor service. The speaker got tied-up in a traffic jam and arrived late.

Ronald Bartley Glover

June 9, 1942 – June 28, 2024

Ronald Bartley Glover, 82, Athens, Ala., formerly of Sheridan, passed away on Friday morning, June 28, 2024, surrounded by his loving wife and family. Born June 9, 1942, in Sheridan, he was the son of the late Edward B. Glover and Mary Francis Glover-Bienert.

Ron was a 1960 graduate of Sheridan High School. After graduation he enlisted in the United States Air Force, where he honorably served his country from January 15, 1962, to September 30, 1984, at which time he took his retirement at the rank of CMSGT. His accomplishments during his career in the Air Force were many, including his service during the Vietnam War and being awarded the Distinguished Flying Cross. However, his proudest moment came when he was awarded his Purple Heart.

Ron saw retirement a little bit differently than most people. Although he did find time to get more fishing in, a life of leisure wasn't his idea of a good time. He soon found himself working as a project manager on the B2 bomber program with Northrop and as a Space Station change board chairman with Boeing. "Retirement" did give him a little more flexibility in his schedule, so along with fishing, he was also able to keep better tabs on the Atlanta Braves. A lifelong fan, he was glad to be able to see more games and not just catch the scores. He also enjoyed keeping up with hockey.

He was a proud member of the Veterans of Foreign Wars (VFW), American Legion, The Military Order of the Purple Heart (MOPH), The Retired Enlisted Association (TREA), and the Air Force Association. He was also a member of the Bassmasters Fishing Club.

He took great pride in his family and loved time spent with his children, grandchildren, and great-grandchildren.

Ron is survived by his loving wife of 55 years, Thoy "Toy" (Boonchoo) Glover. She and Ron were married on January 15, 1969. Also surviving are three sons, Chris Glover (Tina) of Sheridan, Bryan Glover of Strayhorn, Miss., and Scott Glover of McCordsville; daughter, Rhonda Glover-Geyer of Fort Worth, Texas; nine grandchildren; seven great-grandchildren; and stepbrother, Steven Butcher of Indianapolis.

He is preceded in death by his parents, Edward B. Glover and Mary Francis Glover-Bienert; stepfather, Harry Bienert; two sisters, Marcia Sue Glover, and Connie Joan Roudebush; and brother-in-law, Ronald Roudebush.

Graveside Services with Military Honors will take place at 11 a.m. on Monday, July 8, 2024, at Crown View Cemetery in Sheridan.

Pastor Steve Hacker will be officiating.

In lieu of flowers, memorial contributions may be presented to Riley Children's Foundation, 30 S. Meridian St., Suite 200, Indianapolis, IN 46204, or online at give.rileykids.org.

Hard work is his forte

Meet Noblesville's Luke Whitlock, one of the nation's youngest Olympic swimmers in 24 years

By RICHIE HALL

sports@readthereporter.com

Some people enjoy doing things because they're difficult.

Luke Whitlock is one of those people. At age 12, he swam his first-ever mile race and enjoyed it.

"It's just something I've always liked to do, because it's hard," said Whitlock. "I just like working hard. It just makes me feel good."

Here's something else that feels good: qualifying for the Olympics. Whitlock, representing with Fishers Area Swimming Tigers, did that last month at the Olympic Swim Trials at Lucas Oil Stadium, where he finished second in the 800 freestyle and earned a place on the U.S. Olympic Team.

The recent Noblesville High School graduate clocked in with a time of 7 minutes, 45.19 seconds, just behind reigning gold medalist Robert Finke's time of 7:44.22.

"I went out pretty aggressive the first half of the race," said Whitlock. "I was hurting pretty bad at the end, but I still got the job done. I was happy that I took that chance to go out fast. It paid off."

Noblesville's Luke Whitlock qualified for the U.S. Olympic team with a second-place finish in the Men's 800 freestyle at last month's U.S. Olympic Trials. The Fishers Area Swimming Tigers representative has been dropping time consistently in the long-distance events over the past two years.

"The 7:45 that he went was a national age group record," said FAST coach Joe Keller. "Three seconds faster than any other 17-18 year old's gone in U.S. history.

"And one think that Luke will mention, he wants to go faster, but one of the things that he wants to do is have an opportunity to break the world junior record." The world junior record is 7:43; Keller said, "we want to put him in a position to do that."

The winner of a race at the Trials gets first priority on the Olympic team, with the runner-up receiving second priority. But Whitlock Carmel's Alex Shackell and Aaron Shackell spoke to the media at a press conference at Carmel High School on June 28. The siblings are presently training with the U.S. Olympic swim team in Raleigh, N.C., preparing for the Paris Olympics.

Shackell siblings en route to Paris

Journey to 2024 Olympics goes through Raleigh, N.C. & Croatia

By RICHIE HALL

sports@readthereporter.com

The Olympic journey for Aaron and Alex Shackell began on July 2.

The Carmel siblings that turned heads at the U.S. Olympic Trials, which took place just down the road at Lucas Oil Stadium, joined the other members of the U.S. Olympic swimming team at the first of two training camps that began earlier last week in Raleigh, N.C.

The Olympic swimmers will train at Raleigh until July 11, when they travel to Croatia for the second training camp. The second camp lasts until July 22, after which the Olympians head to Paris, the site of the 2024 Games, to begin international training.

This year's Olympic Games begin with the opening ceremonies on July 26, with the swimming events taking place from July 27 to Aug. 4. (A complete schedule of all swimming events is available at olympics.com/en/paris-2024/schedule/swimming.)

The Shackells spoke at a press conference last Friday at Carmel High School, right before a practice and a few days before traveling east to Raleigh. The two will be following in the footsteps of their father Nicholas Shackell, who competed in the Olympics for the United Kingdom at the 1996 Atlanta games.

"My whole life, I've wanted to be an Olympian, ever since my dad explained to me what it was," said Alex Shackell. She competed in the trials for the Tokyo Olympics three years ago, and she said, "that's when it hit me that I have to do a lot of work if I want to make it in three years."

Alex did indeed put in the work and quickly became someone to watch in the swimming world. She grabbed notice at the 2021 Speedo Winter Juniors Championships as a 15-year-old, when Shackell and her Carmel Swim Club teammates won the 200 medley relay.

Shackell is also helping Carmel High School to continue its long state championship streak. The incoming senior has so far won 11 state championships, including setting state records in the 100-yard butterfly and the medley and 200 freestyle relay.

Shackell claimed two gold medals at the 2022 Junior Pan Pacific Championships in Honolulu. She won the 100-meter butterfly and was the anchor of the 400-meter free relay. Shackell also picked up a silver medal was part of the American 800-meter free relay at the 2023 World Aquatics Championships in Fukuoka, Japan.

Shackell earned her place on the U.S. Olympic team by placing second in the 200-meter butterfly. She achieved her dream in front of a large crowd at Lucas Oil Stadium.

"It's so crazy," said Alex Shackell. "The walkout was the longest walk of my entire life, just walking to my block. And then trying not to look at everyone up there. That was something that was big for me, not getting too caught in the pressure that was there."

Aaron Shackell graduated from Carmel High School in 2023, also doing his part to keep the Greyhounds' boys team's state championship streak going. He won seven state championships and set state records in the 200 free and as a member of the medley relay team.

Olympic Tennis

One more go at it: Carmel's own Rajeev Ram winding up for Paris

By RICHIE HALL

sports@readthereporter.com

When Rajeev Ram left Tokyo three years ago, he thought it could be the last time participating for the United States in the Olympics.

But it turns out, the Carmel tennis star will get one more chance. Ram is one of 11 players that made the United States Olympic team. Ram and his fellow Americans will be playing in the 2024 Paris Olympics when they begin later this month.

Not only is it a chance to compete for another medal – Ram teamed with Venus Williams to take the silver medal in mixed doubles at the 2016 Rio de Janeiro Games – but it means he will get to have a proper Olympic experience. The 2020 Tokyo Olympics were delayed one year due to the Covid-19 pandemic and were conducted without fans – "not quite the Olympic experience that you hoped for," said Ram. He said he is "pretty excited" and grateful to be able to enjoy a normal Olympic situation.

The six-time Grand Slam doubles champion will be partnered with Austin Krajicek in the men's doubles division. Like Ram, Krajicek has been ranked No. 1 in the ATP Tour world doubles rankings, and has also won a Grand Slam title, taking the 2023 French Open with Croatian Ivan Dodig.

"We played Davis Cup doubles together, so we played quite a few times," said Ram. They played together at an event in Houston earlier in the spring as a Carmel's Rajeev Ram is in the midst of a busy part of the tennis calendar, with the addition of the Olympic games to the regular summer Grand Slam events. Ram is part of this year's U.S. Olympic team, and will return to the U.S. Open in August, where he and his partner Joe Salisbury have won the last three men's doubles titles.

prep event and will play at an event in Germany right before the Olympics.

Ram spoke to the Reporter from the United Kingdom, where he was playing another tournament to prepare for Wimbledon, which began June 24. That is the third of four big events taking place in a short span of time not just for Ram, but also for the entire tennis community.

Ram and his regular partner, the United Kingdom's Joe Salisbury, reached the quarterfinals of the French Open, and are presently competing in Wimbledon. Then there's the Olympics, where the tennis event takes place from July 27 to Aug. 4, after which there's a slight break before the U.S. Open begins at the end of August.

"That's something we looked at the very beginning of the year," said Ram. "We knew this was going to be the meat of our season." Ram said he and Salisbury are trying their best to make sure they are physically healthy and mentally prepared for the challenge.

Getting teed off over Lou Gehrig's disease

Longtime Indy sports journalist Bob Kravitz gathers community for ALS benefit

By RICHIE HALL
sports@readthereporter.com

On Monday, local celebrities and golfers headed to Prairie View Golf Club for a benefit to help those affected by one of the scariest and most devastating diseases there is: ALS.

The 12th annual 2024 Bob Kravitz ALS Golf Classic was held July 8.

ALS is formally known as amyotrophic lateral sclerosis, and is commonly referred to as Lou Gehrig's disease, named after the baseball legend whose career ended prematurely after he was diagnosed with it at age 36. ALS is a progressive motor neuron disease, which gradually robs people of their ability to walk, talk, swallow, and eventually breathe. There is no known cure for ALS.

The event is hosted by Kravitz, a longtime Indianapolis sports journalist who lost his mother Edith to the disease in 2017. It was organized not only in memory of Edith but in support of all those impacted by ALS, raising funds for Hoosiers and their families as they deal with the disease.

"This golf outing has been an instrumental event, especially in the Indy area," said Jena McEwen, Director of Development for the ALS Association. "We have such a large ALS community there and such a tight-knit ALS community there. It helps bring attention to their journey and the struggles that they face."

There are around 420 people in Indiana with ALS, with 100 of them having been recently diagnosed.

"It's absolutely vital that events like this are happening and raising the critical funds to support people living with ALS and their families," said McEwen.

The Kravitz Classic took place at Highland Golf Club last year but has been hosted by Prairie View in past years. The event annually raises over $70,000 for Hoosiers living with ALS, and that helps the ALS Association to provide equipment, support groups and other tangible and intangible aid for people living with ALS and their families.

"We're really hyper-focused local because ALS is such a unique disease and it needs people on the ground," said McEwen. "We have a care service team local to Indiana. We help fund the multidisciplinary clinics in Indiana." Those clinics allow patients to see neurologists, social workers and other caregivers so they can have all their needs met at one time and not "have to find transportation for multiple appointments with multiple doctors and social workers," said McEwen.

The local focus also helps patients to remain in their homes. McEwen said Indiana patients have an equipment loan closet, including an Obi, a robotic adaptive eating device that allows patients to eat independently. Another important part is home modifications for people who need to reassess their home.

The ALS Association also gives support for the caregivers of people living with ALS. McEwen said the Association has a class called "Powerful Tools for Caregivers," which is designed to educate and guide caregivers.

"When we say it takes a community, it really takes a community to help someone," said McEwen. That includes what is called a respite grant, which allows caregivers time for themselves.

"ALS is a full-time job," said McEwen. She said the organization has found that ALS patients' quality of life "is so much higher when they're allowed to stay in their homes. A course like this, it really allows the caregiver to learn more about how to safely care for their loved ones. That's really empowering at a time when you feel like so much is out of your control."

The Kravitz Classic was emceed by Scott Sander, anchor for WISH-TV's Daybreak show. Also in attendance were former Purdue University men's basketball coach Gene Keady, Indiana Fever general manager Lin

Dunn, Indianapolis Colts wide receiver Bill Brooks, former Indiana University basketball player Phil Isenbarger, Indiana Pacers assistant coach Jenny Boucek, former professional hockey player Al Karlander, who played for the Indianapolis Racers team from 1975 to 1977.

In addition to golf, there was also a silent auction at the event. Some of the items up for bid included a year-long membership to the Dormie Network of golf courses, two tickets to a Purdue football game, tickets to the Indianapolis Symphony Orchestra, an autographed Colts football, and tickets to winery events.

RAM

Ram won't be the only Carmel resident at the Olympics, of course. The city will have three swimmers, Drew Kibler, Aaron Shackell and Alex Shackell competing in swimming. Their success after the U.S. Olympic trials has gotten attention from all over the world.

"I think it's great," said Ram. "The more Carmel people that we can have in such a prideful event is awesome. I think it's really cool. I hope to get to meet them. I hope I can make that connection."

Once the Olympics are done, Ram and Salisbury will be together again and trying for a fourth consecutive U.S. Open men's doubles title. The duo won their first Open crown in 2021, coming back to win in three sets. After a tough straight-set victory in 2022, Ram and Salisbury were triumphant again in 2023, getting another comeback win over Rohan Bopanna and Matthew Ebden.

Ram and Salisbury became the first team to win three consecutive U.S. men's doubles titles since Americans Maurice McLoughlin and Tom Bundy did so from 1912 to 1914, well before tennis' Open Era began.

Ram called the feat "incredible," saying the Open is where he's played his best tennis. "It's been amazing," he said. "That's my home Grand Slam. Even one Grand Slam, you'll take that."

After the U.S. Open is done, Ram said that it will be time for "a little bit of rest afterwards," but he is hopeful that he and Salisbury can return to the year-end ATP Finals tournament in Turin, Italy.

Ram turned 40 this year, but he is still ranked in the top 10 in the world doubles rankings. He said he isn't "going to put a time limit" on how much longer he will be playing, but said he's still capable of working on his tennis and improving.

"It's a balance," said Ram. "As long as the fun parts override the not-fun parts, I'll still do this."

was confident that he would be on the roster.

"There's never been a second-place individual person that hasn't been named to the team, so I pretty much knew that I was going to make it anyway," said Whitlock.

"Nothing he does surprises me," said Keller. "I actually told people, they were asking, and I said, 'I'd be more surprised if he didn't make the Olympic team than if he did. I think that was a surprise to people, but to me, watching him every day and doing what he was doing, I was pretty confident he had a legitimate chance."

Whitlock began swimming when he was 10 years old. He began to rapidly improve in 2022 at age 16, making his first big splash by placing fifth in the 7.5K race at the Open Water Junior Nationals in Sarasota, Fla.

He continued to drop time consistently throughout the next two years, first breaking the eight-minute mark in the 800 free at the 2023 World Aquatics Junior Championships in Netanya, Israel. He finished fifth in that race with a time of 7:55.00.

It all came to a head in Indianapolis. The swimming news website swimswam.com placed Whitlock on its breakout watch, calling him "a name to watch as things shake out in the mid-distance freestyle events." That included the 400 freestyle race.

Whitlock proved he belonged on the list, as he placed first in the 400 free prelims with a time of 3:46.42. That advanced him to the final, where he finished fifth in 3:46.55. But the tone was set for his 800 free race, and he earned his ticket to Paris with a solid performance in that event. Whitlock also made the finals in the 1500 free, where he placed third, just a quarter-second away from second place and qualifying in that event.

At age 18, Whitlock is one of the youngest men to make the U.S. Olympic team this year. Thomas Heilman, 17, of Charlottesville, Va., qualified in the Men's 100 and 200 butterfly races. The duo are two of the youngest men to qualify since Michael Phelps did so for the 2000 Sydney games at age 15. Phelps, of course, went on to win 23 gold medals, an all-time Olympics record for all sports.

That's certainly good company to be with, but Whitlock is keeping his goals realistic when he swims in Paris. He also has an eye on the future, already thinking about the 2028 Olympics in Los Angeles.

"I'm just going to try to drop some more time and try to make the final in my event," said Whitlock. "A medal at this point might be a little bit out of reach, but I think the experience will be awesome if I can get into the final too and set me up well for 2028."

"I fully expect him to go faster," said Keller. "I expect him to make a final. If you've got one of those eight lanes, you've got a chance at one of those medals."

It's time for the Indy 500 to be broadcast on local TV

It was around 2:30 p.m. on Race Day.

We were all sitting in the Indianapolis Motor Speedway media center, listening to Speedway president Doug Boles giving another update on the weather. The storms that prevented the Indianapolis 500 from starting on time had moved out, and the green flag finally dropped at 4:45 p.m.

Towards the end of his update, Boles made a big announcement: the race would be shown live on local television. The annual blackout of the Indy 500 was washed away for this year. There was a little bit of applause among those in the media center — including from me.

Why the applause? Because it's always good to see someone do the right thing. While a decent number of fans stayed until the end of the race, at 7:45 p.m., I'm sure there are others that had to leave for one reason or another. Maybe they had to relieve a babysitter. Maybe they had to get up early the next morning.

Whatever the "maybe" was, it was good to see the Speedway be proactive in accommodating fans who wanted to watch the race but couldn't stay at the track because of weather and scheduling concerns. And the race got good TV ratings locally because, well...this is Indianapolis and people here like the race.

So why do we have to wait for a weather delay, or some other extenuating circumstance, to show the Indy 500 live? Why can't this be a permanent thing?

I'm aware this is something people have been asking for years. I understand it's because the Speedway wants local people to attend the race in person. And having gone to the 500 for several years now, I enjoy getting to be there on race day.

But what about the people in central Indiana that want to see the race, but can't? I'm not talking about ticket prices or crowds. I'm talking about people who have physical disabilities and limitations that make spending an entire day at the Speedway not just exhausting, but impossible.

As many of you are aware, my dad had to deal with health problems during the last few years of his life. In August of 2020, an infection in his foot spread so quickly that he had to have his leg removed below the knee. He spent the last two and a half years of his life in a wheelchair, which required him to use van transportation to take him to a doctor's appointment or the rare family outing.

Do you think it would've been easy for him to go the 500? Technically, it would have been possible, but it would not have been advisable. Dad had other health problems besides losing his leg, and he was well into his 70s. There's no way he would've made it through a "normal" 500, let alone a marathon day at the Speedway like the one we just had.

I'm not the only one with this issue. Before the race, I was talking to radio host Derek Schultz, who posted on Twitter about the physical and medical conditions his father has. "He can't go," said Derek. I'm sure there are many more who would say the exact same thing about their parents or older family members.

It's not just "older" people that are affected by this. I have family members, friends and newspaper colleagues of all ages with physical conditions that would give them pause about spending a long

There were once again large crowds at the 2024 Indianapolis 500, so why continue the local television blackout? Broadcasting the 500 live would allow race fans with physical disabilities and challenges to be part of the race experience.

day at the Speedway.

That should be a good enough reason to lift the local TV blackout. But it appears it won't be happening anytime soon, as the Speedway will likely stick to its tradition of not showing the race live here in Indy, unless there's a sellout or unforeseen circumstance.

At the same time, the Speedway has been less rigid when it comes to the blackout. Of the past nine Indy 500s, four of them have been shown live in the Indianapolis market. All four of those races had unique reasons to be broadcast live.

The 2016 race (the 100th running!) was sold out. The 2020 edition was delayed to August due to the Covid pandemic, and no spectators were allowed. In 2021, there was limited seating available, again because of Covid. And now we can add the 2024 race to the list because storms caused a delay, and some fans may not have been able to stay for a race that lasted late in the evening.

Those are all good reasons to show the race live. But we shouldn't need to have reasons anymore. It's time to lift the local TV blackout for good.

The Indianapolis 500 has been such a part of this area for over a century, and it's the dedicated and passionate fans that make the race what it is. But some of those fans that are here in the Indianapolis area are people who can't, or are no longer able to, attend the race because of physical disabilities and challenges. Allowing them to watch the race live would allow them to be a part of that experience — something that every race fan deserves.

Aaron also competed in the 2022 Junior Pan Pacific Championships, where he won the gold medal in the 200 butterfly. He swam for the University of California for part of his freshman year, but returned to Carmel in December 2023, taking an Olympic redshirt. Shackell later announced that he was transferring to the University of Texas.

Shackell joined the U.S. Olympics team with his prime-time victory in the 400 freestyle at the Trials. He won the race in 3:45.46. That race got him noticed by a couple of swimming legends.

"It was really cool to see Michael Phelps post me on his Instagram story," said Aaron Shackell. "That was really cool. Me and Katie Ledecky both won the 400 and we were underneath the pool to get our medals. She said she knew I was going to do something cool like that."

Both Shackells gave credit to Chris Plumb, head coach for both Carmel Swim Club and Carmel High School. Plumb has been the coach at both places since 2006 and has built both programs into powerhouses that are getting recognition on the national and international scales. Plumb will be an assistant coach for the U.S. Olympic Team.

"I'm just happy to do it for Coach Plumb," said Alex Shackell. "He deserves it so much. We have so many people behind us, and everyone wants us to achieve what Chris Plumb has on his mind. He's never satisfied. Coming with us, it makes me so happy for him."

Aaron Shackell mentioned Carmel's associate head coach Chris Pfaff, saying "he works side by side with Chris and he just doesn't get enough credit. He's right up there with Chris as one of the best coaches in the world."

"To have them converge to make the Olympic team when they moved here is just crazy to think about," said Plumb, who also spoke at the press conference. "It's obviously a tremendous honor for them, and our program and myself." Plumb said knowing he helped them get there and being part of the process is what makes coaching fun.

Alex and Aaron have been champions together for a long time already. Now they will soon be Olympians together. Their story is just beginning and it's already playing out as they feel it should.

"We've done everything together our whole lives," said Aaron. "I made her try basketball when she was younger. I think she played like two games and then she quit. I'm not surprised we're doing this together for the first time."

"It just feels right," said Alex. "I couldn't see another way. I can't imagine both of us not going to the games together."

The INDYCAR Hybrid Era is about to begin

INDYCAR is on the precipice of one of the largest regulation changes in its history.

This week at Mid-Ohio Sports-cars Car Course in Lexington, Ohio, INDYCAR will introduce its new hybrid power unit.

The introduction of hybrid power was first revealed publicly in 2019. For the last five years, INDYCAR has been working with its engine manufactures, Chevrolet and Honda, to integrate a hybrid system into the current cars.

Originally, the hybrid power unit was to be introduced at the beginning of the 2024 season. However, additional testing was needed and INDYCAR opted to wait until after the 2024 Indianapolis 500 in order to ensure that all the new parts and pieces were safe and reliable. It was then decided that Mid-Ohio would play host to the introduction of the hybrid era.

COLUMNIST

ZECH YODER
Checkers to Wreckers

Hybrid technology is not new to road going cars or the racing world. In fact, one might say that INDYCAR has been late to the hybrid party.

A hybrid prototype was introduced by Toyota and Audi during the 2012 FIA World Endurance Championship season with Audi winning the 24 Hours of Le Mans that year. Formula 1 introduced its first hybrid regulations during the 2014 season and has announced a second-generation hybrid power unit, which is set to be used during the 2026 season.

Hybrid technology has been introduced into motorsports because of its significant increase in efficiency and performance. The recent drive toward carbon neutrality and sustainability has affected vehicle manufacturers and all forms of motorsports. The goal of the hybrid technology being introduced in INDYCAR will be to decrease fuel consumption and carbon emissions. Perhaps more important, the hybrid system comes with a significant power advantage. Additional energy stored in the power unit can be deployed by drivers, resulting in increased horsepower.

It is hard to predict what and how the racing in INDYCAR will change. The push-to-pass system that was a feature of the prior engine regulations will be accompanied by new features. Drivers will "harvest" electricity that will be stored in the new power unit and deployed at the drivers' discretion, similar to Formula 1 power units. The new power units will be significantly heavier than INDYCAR's prior engines. This will affect the balance of the car and tire degradation. To this point in the season, tire wear and degradation has been minimal. Going forward, I believe tire strategy will play a much larger role.

Probably the biggest question will be the balance of power on the grid. I expect that the performance gap between the large teams and small teams will increase. The larger teams will have had more testing opportunities and will likely have a better grasp on performance and handling. Moreover, the larger teams simply have more resources to better understand the new power unit and its performance.

I am curious to see who climbs and falls in the standings. The championship battle has been tight all year long. Less than 100 points separate the top eight drivers. If one driver or team hits on this new power unit, they could run away from the field.

I have no idea how these new regulations will play out, especially in the middle of the season. About the only thing I am willing to say is that Ganassi and Penske will be fast.

29D06-2406-EV-006320 Hamilton Superior Court 6 SMALL CLAIMS EVICTION COMPLAINT HAMILTON SUPERIOR COURT 6 One Hamilton County Square, Suite 215 Noblesville, Indiana 46060-2231 Telephone: (317) 770-4450 Plaintiff I Carla V. Garino Defendant I Michael LeSure 209 E. 175th Street, Suite A 112482 Brookline Court Westfield, IN 46074 Carmel, IN 46032 (317) 765-1818 Attorney Kristin N. Korbacher Attorney number 37982-29 309 E. 175th Street, Suite A Westfield, IN 46074 (317) 656-1818 kkorbacher@websterlegal.com TO THE DEFENDANT(S): You have been sued by the Plaintiff as set out below. You must appear in the Hamilton Superior Court No. 6 in person or with your attorney on July 18, 2024 @ 10 AM to contest the claim for eviction, past-due rent, and damages. NOTICE OF CLAIM FOR POSSESSION AND RENT DUE On or about ____, the Plaintiff rented to the said Defendant(s) property at 12482 Brookline Ct., Carmel, IN 46032 for a term of month to month. The Defendant(s) agreed to pay rent at $1200 per Month payable in advance on the 1st day of each Month. Rent is now past due in the amount of $2,400 and the Defendant(s) remain in possession. Defendant(s) have otherwise violated the lease as follows: Failure to pay utilities WHEREFORE, Plaintiff demands judgment for the immediate possession of said premises and $To be Determined and court costs of this action. Date: 06/07/2024 Kristin N. Korbacher (#37982-29) (Plaintiff) NOTICE This claim is a demand for the possession of the above property. If any past-due rent remains unpaid 10 days after your receipt of this claim, you will be subject to immediate eviction. Payment of all past-due rent within this period may be a defense to eviction in some cases. IMPORTANT INFORMATION CONCERNING THIS CLAIM 1. The Plaintiff or the Defendant may represent themselves individually or be represented by an attorney. A Small Claims Litigant's Handbook is available at the offices of the Clerk or Court (or at the website at www.state.in.us/hcc) for each party's benefit. The Plaintiff and Defendant should bring to trial all documents in their possession or under their control concerning this claim. Time does not permit trials in every case set for first hearing. However, trials will be held on possession issues in eviction cases and in such other cases where both parties are prepared for trial and time allows. 2. A default judgment may be entered against the Defendant if he or she fails to appear for a first hearing or any trial date, and if the Plaintiff fails to appear, the case will be dismissed (but may be refiled once more). A "damages hearing" is a trial on the issue of damages. 3. If the Defendant does not wish to dispute the Plaintiff's claim, the Defendant still may wish to appear to allow the Court to establish the method for paying the judgment. 4. Any request for a continuance of a trial date by either party should be filed with the Court at least five days before the hearing date. Forms requesting a continuance are available at the Court's office or on the website. The party requesting a continuance must contact the other party regarding the request. 5. Any counterclaim against the Plaintiff must be filed with the Clerk in time to be mailed to and received by the Plaintiff at least seven calendar days before the trial. Forms are available for this purpose. 6. If a settlement of this claim is made out of Court, it should be in writing and signed by the Plaintiff and Defendant. Settlement forms may be obtained from the Court or from the website. The settlement shall be filed with the Court and will be entered in the Small Claims Docket and shall have the same effect as a judgment of the Court. 7. The filing of a Small Claim waives the Plaintiff's right to trial by jury. The Defendant may, no later than 10 days following service of the Notice of Claim, make a demand for a trial by jury in writing, in accordance with Indiana Code 33-29-2-7. If a jury trial request has been granted, it may not be withdrawn without consent of both parties. Both parties should then obtain attorneys. The Defendant must pay a $70 fee at the Clerk's Office within 10 days after the jury request has been granted; otherwise, the Defendant gives up the right to a jury trial. 8. Any exhibits you may offer at trial will be retained by the court for no less than 45 days and no more than four months after any hearing that results in a judgment. You may make arrangements to pick up your evidence with the court reporter any time beyond the 45 days after judgment has been entered. If an appeal is filed, those exhibits will permanently remain with the court. You will receive no further notices regarding your evidence. R4604 7/8/24, 7/15/24, 7/22/24
