Neighbors unite to clean up after Carmel tornado

By HERNAN GUTIERREZ
WISH-TV | wishtv.com

Neighbors were quick to help each other clean up in Carmel following Wednesday night's tornado, which tore through the city around 9:30 p.m.

Thursday morning debris started to pile up along the curbs in the Cool Creek subdivision, just across the street from Badger Memorial Park.

Katie Vienneau and her husband were among a group of neighbors lending a hand. They were using a chainsaw to break down a tree at a house around the corner.

"These are our friends," Vienneau said. "This is a very tight-knit neighborhood. We know everybody. We're friends with everybody. So it's devastating to see."

Both parents were at home when the tornado warning was issued.

She recalls what she heard the night before.

"Sirens started going off, and we grabbed the three little kids who live upstairs and dragged them down to the basement," Vienneau said. "We just sat down there. It was crazy winds and some hail. It was terrifying ... We're fortunate we live in a neighborhood where everybody has a basement."

Vienneau wasn't aware of any injuries in her neighborhood.

Those in need of help due to age or medical conditions can call the Street Department for help.

Homes with structural damage should be reported to the Street Department, and the Carmel City Building Inspectors for an assessment.

The Street Department can be reached via email at street@carmel.in.gov or by calling (317) 733-2001.

Duke Energy working to restore power

The REPORTER

Duke Energy crews were working to restore power to Hamilton County customers well into the night Thursday after Wednesday night's severe thunderstorms and the EF1 tornado in Carmel. As of 7:30 p.m. Thursday, 25 active outages remained in the county, for a total of 158 customers. Click here to see the latest version of the outage map and to report an outage. You can also call (800) 343-3525 to make a report. Duke Energy serves a total of 162,123 customers in Hamilton County. Wind gusts of 65 to 80 miles per hour caused broken poles, trees in power lines, and damage to electric infrastructure. In addition, flooding is also impacting crews' ability to restore power in some areas. "We are bringing in additional crews to supplement our statewide workforce and speed power restoration," said Clint Carnahan, general manager of emergency preparedness at Duke Energy. "Our priority is always to restore service as quickly and safely as possible, and we appreciate our customers' patience while we respond." Riding the storm out: be wary of scammers cashing in on chaos

Attorney General Todd Rokita warns Hoosiers of storm scams

The REPORTER

With severe storms hitting across Indiana recently, Indian Attorney General Todd Rokita is alerting Hoosiers to stay vigilant against storm-related scams. As communities deal with storm damage, scammers are poised to exploit the situation, targeting residents with fraudulent repair offers and deceptive schemes. "Storms can be unpredictable and devastating, but the aftermath can be even worse, potentially leaving you vulnerable to financial ruin," AG Rokita said. "Our office stands ready to assist Hoosiers and hold scammers accountable. Together, we can work to prevent fraudsters from derailing recovery efforts." Unfortunately, storms often bring out unscrupulous individuals who prey on homeowners by promising quick fixes, only to disappear with down payments or deliver inferior work. Attorney General Rokita is committed to protecting Hoosiers and offers the following tips to avoid falling victim to storm-chasing scammers:

- Be skeptical of anyone offering immediate cleanup or repair services without proper vetting.

- Know the facts: FEMA does not charge application fees. If someone demands payment to help you access FEMA funds, it's likely a scam.
- Research contractors: Check reputations through references, online reviews, or the Better Business Bureau before hiring.
- Verify credentials: Ask for IDs, licenses, and proof that the contractor is bonded and insured.
- Get multiple estimates: Compare offers to ensure fair pricing and scope of work.
- Insist on written agreements: Don't trust verbal promises. Get everything in writing.
- Avoid risky payments: Never pay with wire transfers, gift cards, cryptocurrency, or cash, and never pay the full amount upfront.

If you suspect a scam, AG Rokita encourages you to file a complaint at indianaconsumer.com or call his office at 1-800-382-5516. LET THEM although they may now have quite the demand for it!) While Jan talked about how the book helped her with people who didn't like her, or judged her, etc., the book helped me more with giving up trying to control other people's behavior. I'm sure I'm the only one who wants to do this, right? Well, at least that's what it used to feel like. Turns out that most of us want to control others. We want to whoosh in and stop them from, say, unhealthy habits or behaviors ... or from leaving their dishes out on the counter when the empty dishwasher is right there ... or from making poor financial decisions ... or thousands of other examples. And yes, we should certainly guide children, as Mel Robbins points out. But adults? Sure, we can help them - if they ask for help or advice. But otherwise, we need to Let Them. Let them eat two pieces of cake when they're supposed to be watching their sugar.

Let them leave the dishes out, knowing they'll get to it later ... later than you want, but still, later. Let them buy the brand-new car when you know that a gently used one would make more sense. It's difficult in the beginning. I remember the first time I used this theory one weekend morning when someone in my household wasn't doing something the way I would have (gasp!) I had to quietly repeat "let them" to myself 15 times that day - no exaggeration. But guess what? Instead of each of us getting grumpy with the other, we ended up having a wonderful Sunday morning. I was so thrilled that I drove over to Jan's house and hugged her to thank her for loaning me the book. As Jan also pointed out, the Let Them process doesn't stop with that first step. You have to move on to step two, which is Let Me. Let me take a deep breath and enjoy this moment instead of harping. Let me absorb the conversation around our dining room table. Let me realize that this person's way still produced the same result. And if it's a bigger issue, where you feel with all your heart and soul that this person needs to change, you're not powerless. You can still work to influence their behavior. It may work. It may not. But it's so much better than fretting and getting anxious/worked up/ready to scream all the time. My world has been so much better these last six weeks. Obviously, Jan and I are big fans of this life-changing book. We hope you buy a copy, check it out from the library, or give the audio book version a listen. You'll end up NOT trying to control others and instead, enjoy controlling your own emotions and sense of peace. Noblesville native explores nature of mysticism in honors presentation at Virginia Military Institute

Submitted
LEXINGTON, Va. – Brooks Freeman ’25, a Noblesville native and an English major at Virginia Military Institute (VMI), sought a common core between the philosophies of Jalāl al-Dīn Rūmī, a 13th century Middle Eastern Sufi mystic and poet, and Søren Kierkegaard, a 19th century Danish philosopher, theologian, and poet, in his honors presentation, “Varieties of Mystical Experience: Encountering the Absolute in Rūmī and Kierkegaard.”

Freeman found inspiration for his research after traveling to England and Morocco in the summer of 2023. In England, he studied existential philosophy and comparative religion.

“Going into the existential philosophy class, the first person we read was Kierkegaard, who is regarded as the original existentialist,” Freeman said. “He wrote extensively about faith, and I became interested in his ideas. In my comparative religion class, I learned a little about Sufism and Christian mysticism, and found those to be very interesting.”

Upon returning to VMI the following fall, he decided he wanted to compare the two thinkers for his honors thesis.

Freeman cited Pseudo-Dionysius, an ancient Greek theologian, for his definition of mysticism.

“The experiential encounter with the utterly transcendental reality that God is,” Freeman said.

“Basically, a meeting with God.”

He described some differences between Christian mysticism and Sufism.

“The first and most obvious difference would be their foundations; Sufism founded from Islam, and Christian mysticism from Christianity,” Freeman explained. “They also have different end goals. Christian mysticism is about union with God while keeping one’s individual characteristics, and Sufism is about annihilation of oneself to form a kind of oneness with God.”

Similarities he listed between the two philosophies include the individual taking an internal journey toward divine union, poetry rich in symbolism, and teaching and guidance.

“Then the final thing is this idea of the absurd that you can see in Kierkegaard’s writing,” he said. “It has to do with something that cannot be comprehended logically, but is believed through faith, which Kierkegaard wrote is extremely difficult. It is something that is present in Rūmī’s writing as well.”

Freeman defended the premise of comparing the two authors because they are still relevant, they are widely read outside of their faith tradition, there is a lack of research comparing them, and they both sought a similar mystical path.

Freeman concluded that the paths of Kierkegaard and Rūmī are similar, but warned that the commonalities are steeped in their respective traditions, so context must be appreciated. Studying them in conjunction displays that mystical experiences can at once be common and contextualist.

Freeman’s advisor, Lt. Col. Patrick Eichholz, associate professor in the Department of English, Rhetoric, and Humanistic Studies, has known Freeman for four years.

“I first met Brooks through the adopt-a-rat program, and it’s been a real pleasure to watch him develop as a scholar,” Eichholz said. “I knew there was something different about Brooks the first time he came over to my house. When the other rats asked for the Netflix password, Brooks asked for book recommendations. After Breakout, I saw a lot less of Brooks, but I was not surprised when I heard all the updates that Brooks was joining the honors program, preparing for the LSAT, and traveling overseas for various study abroad opportunities.”

Freeman is minoring in Arabic. He is an alumnus of Culver Academies and the son of Lee and Rose Freeman. He plans to attend law school following graduation.

Shaffer commends Carmel’s first responders

Dear Editor:
Let’s take a moment to offer heartfelt thanks to the first responders who insured the safety and security of us all during the Great Storm of 2025.

While most of us headed for the basement when the tornado warnings went viral, our police, fire, and city roads and streets crews took to the streets to serve the community.

We take these folks too much for granted.

They are everyday heroes and we’re fortunate to have them with us.

"We are incredibly grateful to MIBOR for their support, which will allow us to expand our efforts to make our recreational spaces more inclusive," HCPR Director Chris Stice said. Indiana American Water taking part in annual spring cleaning in Noblesville

Hydrant flushing enhances quality, reliability & fire protection

The REPORTER

Indiana American Water will start its annual water main flushing in its Noblesville District, beginning overnight Sunday, April 13 and continuing through Wednesday, April 16 in the downtown area from 10 p.m. to 6 a.m.

Flushing of the remaining areas of Noblesville will start on Wednesday, April 16 and run through Friday, June 20 on weekdays from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m.

The company conducts the annual maintenance program of its water distribution system to continue to provide customers with high-quality, reliable water service. In addition, it provides the opportunity for the company to make sure its fire hydrants are operational. Indiana American Water is responsible for nearly 32,000 fire hydrants in its 50-plus communities across the state.

"Flushing our system helps to clean out any buildup of mineral deposits and sediment inside the pipes. These deposits can occur when there is a reduced water demand," Kari Brito, Indiana American Water Vice President of Operations said. "We also flush our hydrants to confirm they are operational and to check fire flows in our system."

Customers may experience a slight drop in water pressure or temporary water discoloration while this program is underway. Customers should refrain from doing laundry during the time the flushing program is taking place in or near their neighborhood.

If tap water is discolored, Indiana American Water recommends allowing several cold-water faucets to run for a short time until the water runs clear. Using more than one faucet allows the water to clear more quickly. Customers who have questions about hydrant flushing may call our Customer Service Center at 800-492-8373.

Civic Theatre to stage Joseph and the Amazing Technicolor Dreamcoat

The REPORTER

Here is the latest news from the Civic Theatre, 3 Carter Green, Carmel.

Opening April 25
"Sha la la, Joseph, you're doing fine! You and your dreamcoat, ahead of your time!"

One of the most enduring shows of all time, Joseph and the Amazing Technicolor Dreamcoat is a reimagining of the Biblical story of Joseph, his father Jacob, 11 brothers, and the coat of many colors.

Told entirely through song with the help of a main character Narrator, the musical follows preferred son Joseph. After being sold into slavery by his brothers, he ingratiate himself with Egyptian noble Potiphar, but ends up in jail after refusing the amorous advances of Potiphar's wife. While imprisoned, Joseph discovers his ability to interpret dreams, and he soon finds himself in front of the mighty but troubled, Elvis-inspired, Pharaoh. Joseph's solution to Egypt's famine elevates him to Pharaoh's right-hand man and reunites him with his family.

The magical musical is full of catchy songs in a variety of styles, from a parody of French ballads ("Those Canaan Days"), to country-western ("One More Angel in Heaven") and calypso ("Benjamin Calypso"), along with the unforgettable classics "Any Dream Will Do" and "Close Every Door."

Appropriate for all audiences and groups, Joseph is performed hundreds of times a year by schools across North America, the U.K., and around the world. (Concord Theatricals)

Letter to the Editor

Carmel reader: all voices must be heard on wildlife management

Dear Editor:

The Indiana Natural Resources Commission’s decision to cut off public testimony at their March 18 meeting was undemocratic. Many concerned citizens had signed up to speak about the bobcat trapping issue, yet their voices were silenced without proper consideration.

Public input is crucial in a democracy, especially on issues that affect wildlife and public safety. The Commission’s actions undermine trust in the process and show a disregard for the public’s right to be heard. Many Hoosiers took time off work, prepared and practiced testimony, and traveled great distances – just to be denied an opportunity to voice their concerns.

If we are to ensure ethical wildlife management, we must insist that all voices be allowed to speak.

A recent poll conducted by Remington Research Group found that 60 percent of Hoosiers believe that the interests of Hoosiers who value the welfare of wild animals should be considered proportionally with the interests of hunters and trappers. Wildlife conservation isn’t about giving trappers the opportunity to kill as many animals as possible. It’s about deciding as a society the kind of environment we want for ourselves and future generations, our moral values, and minimizing the suffering that we inflict on our wild neighbors.

Conservation has always been a public process, and I am disappointed in the Commission’s decision to disenfranchise the public.

Medicaid users rally against proposed work requirements

By GARRETT BERGQUIST
WISH-TV | wishtv.com

Medicaid users and their supporters say proposed work requirements and eligibility checks could throw people off of the program even if they’re still eligible on paper.

More than 100 Medicaid advocates rallied at the Indiana Statehouse Tuesday, urging lawmakers and Gov. Mike Braun to reject legislation to add work requirements and impose quarterly eligibility checks for the Healthy Indiana Plan, a Medicaid program that covers able-bodied adults without children.

Susan Brackney is a freelance writer who uses the HIP program. She has rheumatoid arthritis and treatment-resistant depression that requires the use of a hard-to-find medication. Brackney told News 8 she would not be able to work at all if the HIP program didn’t allow her to afford her treatments.

“It’s not easy but it’s something I’ve cobbled together to get by and without it, I don’t know where I would be,” she said.

Legislative Republicans, particularly Senate Appropriations Committee Chair Sen. Ryan Mishler, R-Mishawaka, have been sounding the alarm for years over the growth of Indiana’s Medicaid program.

Earlier this session, Mishler said Indiana’s Medicaid program is now growing faster than the state’s tax revenue and, at its current rate, could overtake education as the state’s largest budget item. In addition, budget writers, as well as Medicaid users, are watching to see if Congressional Republicans cut Medicaid funding.

The federal government currently pays for 90 percent of Indiana’s Medicaid budget, with the state covering the remaining 10 percent via tobacco taxes and hospital assessment fees. Mishler has said due to a recent court ruling, Indiana would not be able to change its funding makeup if the federal government reduces spending.

Mishler’s bill would require HIP program users to spent at least 20 hours a week working or volunteering. It has several exceptions, including for pregnant women or parents of children under age 6, people receiving unemployment benefits and people who have recently been released from prison. It also would require the Family and Social Services Administration to verify eligibility every quarter instead of once a year.

Brackney said that a quarterly check could pose a bigger threat to freelance or seasonal workers than the work requirement. Her income fluctuates depending on how much work she gets, so there might be some months where Brackney’s income shows up as being too high, followed by a period where she doesn’t earn as much. In addition, she’s had instances where the FSSA used the wrong number from her tax return.

“How many other people were they doing that to, and is that a feature or a bug?” Brackney said. “In a way, that’s a way to try to kick people off and they don’t have the wherewithal or the energy to try to navigate and get back on.”

Hoosier Action Medicaid Organizer Tracey Hutchings-Goetz said the bill’s current form could remove at least 110,000 people from Medicaid coverage and possibly as many as 150,000. She said lawmakers should pressure their federal counterparts not to cut Medicaid spending. Braun has already visited Washington to lobby for continued funding, Hutchings-Goetz said.

The bill has already passed the Senate and is currently in the House Ways and Means Committee, which is scheduled to vote on it on Wednesday.

The City of Westfield and Mayor Scott Willis have announced the formation of the Westfield Mayor's Youth Council (WMYC), a leadership development program designed for high school students eager to make a positive impact in their community.

This initiative gives students an opportunity to engage with local leaders and gain hands-on experience in civic engagement while developing critical life and leadership skills.

"I'm thrilled to introduce the Westfield Mayor's Youth Council, as it provides our young people a platform to take initiative, connect with their peers, and learn firsthand about the impacts of local government and how their participation is key," Mayor Willis said. "Investing in our young people is key to shaping a brighter tomorrow for Westfield, and I have no doubt the students who join the WMYC will not only grow as leaders but also leave a lasting mark on the community." U.S. Sen. Banks tells fired HHS employee he seems 'like a clown,' says 'I won't apologize'

By FARAN FRONCZAK
WISH-TV | wishtv.com

A U.S. senator from Indiana had a message for a former Health and Human Services employee, among up to 10,000 to be fired or laid off.

Some of the laid-off employees were gathered in the basement of Senate chamber of the U.S. Capitol building when they encountered Sen. Jim Banks, a Republican, on his way to an elevator.

A former HHS employee, Mack Schroeder, shared a video of the encounter with News 8 after it became widely available. Schroeder on Tuesday night spoke with I-Team 8 about the encounter.

In the video, Schroeder said, "Hi, I was a worker at HHS. I was fired illegally on Feb. 14. There are many people who are not getting social service programs, especially people with disabilities. Are you going to do anything to stop what's happening?"

Banks, now in the elevator, said, "You probably deserved it."

Schroeder responded, "I deserved it?"

As the elevator doors closed, Banks replied, "You seem like a clown."

Schroeder told News

Banks

I feel like I didn't approach him in an antagonistic way in any way. I was just asking him what he was going to do to support constituents in his state."

Schroeder added, "It felt like a very childish attack, and it was a bit surprising because he didn't have a response to what I was saying."

Wednesday, Banks posted a video saying, "I won't apologize for speaking the truth. I 100% support President Trump and DOGE's mission to cut woke spending and government waste."

The Associated Press

8 that he was alarmed and found the senator's answer off-putting. "I was just a bit taken aback. I don't know him personally. I don't know about his work as a senator.

Banks' team for comment on the interaction, and received a statement:

"I went to Washington to decrease the size and scope of the federal government. No one is entitled to a taxpayer-funded job, especially in positions that waste those funds. I fully support President Trump and DOGE's mission to eliminate waste."

Jamming the line: cutting off crime behind bars

Attorney General Todd Rokita combats contraband cell phones in prisons

Submitted by Office of the Attorney General

Indiana Attorney General Todd Rokita announced on Wednesday a bipartisan coalition effort to address the growing threat of contraband cell phones in prisons by advocating for the use of phone jamming technology.

Joined by 30 attorneys general from across the nation, AG Rokita is calling on the U.S. House and Senate to pass legislation to lift outdated restrictions and allow state and local correctional facilities to deploy jamming devices to halt illegal activities orchestrated from behind bars.

“Hoosiers deserve to feel safe, and that means stopping criminals from running their operations from inside prison walls,” AG Rokita said. “Contraband phones aren’t just a nuisance. They’re weapons, and we’re fighting to disarm inmates.”

Contraband cell phones have become dangerous tools in the hands of incarcerated individuals, enabling them to coordinate crimes such as drug trafficking, gang violence, and even hits on law enforcement and civilians. In Indiana alone, the Department of Correction seizes hundreds of phones every year, and many more elude detection. Federal restrictions on the use of jamming technology exacerbate this problem.

The coalition’s letter to Congress highlights how inmates exploit contraband phones to:

- Direct drug trafficking operations

Rokita

- Orchestrate violence inside and outside prison walls
- Run sophisticated fraud schemes preying on vulnerable citizens
- Intimidate witnesses and terrorize victims’ families
- Plot escape attempts endangering law enforcement and the public

By disrupting illicit cell phone signals, jamming technology would sever the lifeline that inmates use to perpetrate crimes while preserving the safety of correctional officers, visitors and the public. A 2020 survey of 20 state corrections departments uncovered 25,840 contraband cell phones in a single year, a stark reminder of the scale of the problem.

TODAY’S BIBLE READING

THE BURNT OFFERING

“If the offering is a burnt offering from the flock, from either the sheep or the goats, you are to offer a male without defect. You are to slaughter it at the north side of the altar before the LORD, and Aaron’s sons the priests shall splash its blood against the sides of the altar. You are to cut it into pieces, and the priest shall arrange them, including the head and the fat, on the wood that is burning on the altar. You are to wash the internal organs and the legs with water; and the priest is to bring all of them and burn them on the altar. It is a burnt offering, a food offering, an aroma pleasing to the Lord.

The Ukulele Orchestra of Great Britain returns to Carmel April 12

The REPORTER

Formed in 1985 as an antidote to mindless pop, egocentric rock, and music business bluster, the Ukulele Orchestra of Great Britain is still thrilling audiences from Tasmania to Carnegie Hall with offbeat humor and four-stringed virtuosity. There are no drums, pianos, backing tracks, guitars or electronic trickery, just an astonishing revelation of the rich palette of orchestration afforded by ukuleles and a menagerie of voices in a collision of post-punk performance and old classics.

Come and celebrate their 40th anniversary with a white-knuckle shopping-trolley dash through nearly every musical genre, from ABBA to ZZ Top, Tchaikovsky to Nirvana, bluegrass to Broadway, all played on the “bonsai guitar.”

The Ukulele Orchestra of Great Britain will perform at 8 p.m. Saturday, April 12 at the Payne & Mencias Palladium in Carmel. Click here for tickets.

Carmel girls win Hoosier State Relays

The REPORTER

The Carmel girls track and field team soared to victory last Saturday at the Hoosier State Relays, which took place at the Indiana State Fairgrounds' Fall Creek Pavilion.

The Greyhounds totaled 86 points to win the Girls Large School Division team championship, with the bulk of those points coming from their relay success. Relays count for double points at the meet, and Carmel finished in the top two of all four relays.

The 'Hounds scored a victory in the 4x400 relay, with Gabriela Grande Rosas, Olivia Cebalo, Livi Miller and Emily Norris winning that event in 3 minutes, 50.18 seconds. Carmel then got runner-up finishes in the 4x200, 4x400 and distance medley relays.

Annabel Pollert, one of the DMR runners, placed second in the 3200 run. Norris ran on the 4x200 relay and picked up two more top-five finishes in the long jump (third) and 60-meter dash (fifth).

Hamilton Southeastern was the team runner-up, scoring 52 points. The Royals placed in the top five in all four relays, including a runner-up finish from Ciara Kepner, Addison Smith, Anissa Lammie and Chloe Senefeld in the 4x400 relay. Elia Blackmore placed second in the 60-meter hurdles.

Noblesville placed 10th as a team with 17 points. The Miller's 4x800 relay team of Riley Flynn, Kate Mumaw, Gretchen Graham and Brinkley Cooper placed fifth, while Nyla Young took sixth in the shot put.

Fishers scored 14 points to place 13th as a team. Scarlett Olson led the way with a runner-up finish in the pole vault. Westfield tied for 15th with 12 points; Alivia Lozier finished fifth in the 3200 run.

In the Girls Small School Division, Guerin Catholic placed fifth as a team by scoring 24 points. The Golden Eagles had an individual champion: Amelia Smith won the pole vault. Her best vault was 13 feet, 3 inches.

Hamilton Heights scored 18.66 points to finish ninth. The Huskies were led by the 4x200 relay team of Norah Reiger, Lizzy Smith, Gracie Bortone and Waverly Woolever, who finished second.

In the boys meet, Hamilton Southeastern was the top county team in the Large School Division, finishing fifth with 34 points. The Royals were led by their 4x200 relay; the team of Tyler Tholen, Jaxson Wanza, Liam Boyd and Christian Ortiz placed second.

Carmel scored 20 points to take 10th place. The Greyhounds also had a relay runner-up: Jack Capes, Kiefer Jay, Lucas Bartlett and Cooper Szotek placed second in the 4x800 relay.

Fishers took 14th with 13.5 points; Konrad Hayden tied for third in the high jump. Noblesville was 15th with 13 points; John Libs led the Millers with a fourth-place result in the 3200 run. Westfield finished 16th with 12 points; the 4x800 relay team of Luke Moulder, Maxim Poirier, Caleb Haney and Will Snedeker finished fifth.

Guerin Catholic finished fifth in the Boys Small School Division by scoring 28 points. The Golden Eagles' 4x200 relay team of James Moody, Nolan Ratcliff, Hayden Cler and Trevor Macey finished second.

The REPORTER

The Westfield baseball team has played and won two games this season, and both of them are Hoosier Crossroads Conference game.

The Shamrocks completed a sweep of Franklin Central Thursday at Grand Park, winning the second game 6-3. Westfield scored its first run in the first inning; Beck Jordan batted in Matt Drozlek with a center field hit.

The Flashes tied the game in the top of the fifth inning, but the 'Rocks blasted back in the bottom of the fifth, scoring five runs. Johnny Ewing scored when Anthony Cimini reached on error after a bunt to make the score 2-1.

Caden Lindsey cracked a double to bring in Cimini, then later scored on Jordan's RBI fielder's choice. Ian Wilson singled into left field to score Drozlek, then Jordan got home when Ethan Colling drew a bases-loaded walk.

Owen Swinford pitched four innings for the win, tossing seven strikeouts against three hits.

Westfield is headed to Tennessee next week to play in a tournament. The 'Rocks take on Mt. Juliet next Thursday for their first game.
