Not your parents’ book club

You should have the discussion

By AIDA KARIM
news@readthereporter.com

In our era of endless distractions, the value of reading has never been more apparent. Education Station Founder Marcia Seif has made it her mission to give children the joy of reading.

According to Seif, she started her tutoring business 48 years ago. She was inspired to start Education Station when her second-grade son began struggling with reading. Pretty soon another parent asked if she could help her child and “then the ball just started to roll.”

Seif said when her students walk through her “garage of knowledge,” it makes her realize how important her job is. Even her former students from when she first started bring their own children now.

Seif said she started her summer book club 21 years ago. “My goal was to help kids grow the love of reading through a book club,” Seif said. “It was always packed, but then the pandemic hit and I noticed that the desire to just pick up a book wasn’t there.”

Seif told The Reporter she noticed kids give up reading entirely this past summer.

“I would ask, ‘What are you reading for fun?’ And they’d look at me with a blank face and say, ‘Mrs. Seif, I’m not reading anything. I don’t have time to read. I’m doing sports.’ They couldn’t give up 15 minutes a night.”

Seif said children and parents shouldn’t underestimate the value of reading. She always tries to tell her students that reading takes them on an “adventure,” improving their vocabulary in the process.

“I’m finding that my high school kids, my ninth graders and my 10th graders, aren’t as versed in vocabulary as they should be, and it’s from not reading,” Seif said.

According to Seif, this year’s book club revival as “Literary Leaders” challenges the traditional format.

She said, “We will bring out the creative side of each of those kids, from leading discussions to publishing reviews in the newspaper.”

A lifetime love of reading, and all the benefits that come with it, are waiting in the “garage of knowledge.”

You know her. Actually, you don’t think you know her because you haven’t heard her story. It would probably shock you.

Your friend, relative, neighbor, or co-worker is a survivor of SA. Let me say what it is . . . Sexual Assault.

She’s kept her story hidden because people have made her feel ashamed and because she believes it doesn’t matter. Oh, but it does.

I recently sat with my friend, Lisa Saruga, as she told her story of being sexually assaulted by a masked stranger in college. Thirty-five years later, her case was reopened, and she faced her perpetrator. She tells her story in her book, The Trauma Tree. She is a survivor.

Imagine being 18 years old and being suffocated, knifed, and raped. A few days later, she heard whispers that suggested . . . it was her fault. She should have . . . She reported it. She waited 35 years for justice. Did she get justice? No. Too much time had gone by. Too many laws protected her rapist. You’ve got to be kidding! But she got to face him and tell him what she had waited 35 years to say.

Her story is powerful.

One in five women have a rape or attempted rape story. Look around at the women in your life.

One of the most important lessons a father can teach a child is how to respect women. Fathers, read that again. Our sons and daughters are listening and watching.

I know women in my life who have experienced sexual assault, and they will live with the trauma for the rest of their lives. Their rapists were identified, yet the file remains on a stack in the office of the university police or the county prosecutor.

To the women who have been sexually assaulted, do not let these rapists take away the joy from your life. Your rape does not define you or your life. You are strong. Your story matters. I pray that the rapists have nightmares about what they did to you.

Fear Farm is a real thriller

Going behind the scenes of the Indiana Fear Farm

By WYNNE BRUBAKER
news@readthereporter.com

Your nightmares might become a reality in the remote countryside this October at Indiana Fear Farm.

Where the Headless Horseman meets Hollywood and the sickening Slaughter Barn, the Fear Farm will test just how much terror you can take. KD Farms will host the attraction every Friday through Sunday from 7 to 11 p.m. through Oct. 25 at 6736 S. County Road 500 West, Jamestown.

Fear Farm owner Sabrina Kent-Doolan spoke with The Reporter about the unmatched horrors that await visitors at KD Farms each October.

“We’re not pulling from the same [customer base] as someone who sits right in the middle of Indy – we give you the farm experience,” Kent-Doolan said. “If you live in the city, you can go to a haunted house, you can also go bowling, and go to the movies. Or, you can drive out here to an actual family-working farm where there’s animals and fields all around you. You’re half freaked out before you even get here.”

Inside the farm, haunts lurk-

The Reporter went behind the scenes at the Indiana Fear Farm, and even with the lights on, we may not shake the haunting images until long after Halloween.

ing around the grounds will promise an unforgettable scare and priceless memories.

“You will never experience a haunted hayride like ours,” Kent-Doolan said. “I’ve made sure of that from the ground up. It has speakers on board, so the entire ride is choreographed to music that we designed. It’s very customized: a truck chases you, a combine chases you, the headless horseman tries to whip your head off with a saw, there’s explosions, people fly in the air. There is, on any given night, anywhere from 12 to 30

‘Thriller’ dancers and Michael Jackson. There is Beetlejuice flying overhead and all of the Beetlejuice dancers dancing. It’s not just about scaring you. It’s about giving you a full-on show.”

The wide range of “scare actors” around the farm also contributes to the terrifying atmosphere. Fear Farm helps schools and activities raise money by paying students and other departments to become scare actors for the night.

“The other thing that probably makes us stand apart is the fact that we support so many schools and groups that are trying to raise money,” Kent-Doolan said. “We support school groups, typically the kids that don’t get as much funding as the others. I have lost track of how many thousands of dollars we’ve poured back into not just our own community, but the surrounding communities by saying, ‘bring us your kiddos, bring us your adults, whatever you got, and we’ll compensate you and feed you for being here

Westfield Education Foundation funds 85 teacher grants

Submitted by Westfield Washington Schools

As the Westfield Education Foundation (WEF) celebrates 40 years of supporting Westfield Washington Schools (WWS), its 2026 Fall Teacher-Led Grant Cycle shows what can happen when a community comes together for students and educators.

WEF opened its Fall Teacher-Led Grant application on June 1 and received applications from educators across the district, representing more than $72,000 in classroom funding requests. Educators submitted ideas ranging from literacy resources and hands-on science experiences to STEM equipment, music and art materials, student wellness supports, career exploration opportunities, and creative projects designed to make learning more engaging.

Through the generosity of donors and community partners, WEF had $53,671.75 available for its Fall Teacher-Led Grant Cycle.

Collaboration across the Westfield community then helped extend that impact even further. The Advancing Westfield Foundation awarded a separate $28,000 grant to WEF specifically to support elementary schools through their PTOs. WEF, elementary PTOs, and school principals saw an opportunity to work together, review elementary Teacher-Led Grant requests, and identify classroom projects to support through those funds.

Approximately $18,000 of the $28,000 Advancing Westfield Foundation grant supported additional elementary classroom grants during the fall cycle. The remaining funds remain available to participating elementary PTOs to address future needs within their schools. That collaboration made an extraordinary difference.

All of the 85 Teacher-Led Grant applications submitted were ultimately funded.

“This is what makes Westfield special,” WEF Executive Director Ashley Knott said. “We began with the resources to fund 53 grants, but there were so many great ideas coming from our educators. By working together with the Advancing Westfield Foundation, our PTOs, principals, and community partners, we were able to say yes to 85. Those yeses translate directly into new opportunities for our students.”

From grants to classroom experiences

Health Department launches Community Resources Survey

The REPORTER

The Hamilton County Health Department invites community members living or working in Hamilton County to participate in a brief survey about their awareness of community resources including health care, mental health services, and food assistance.

The survey is open now and will remain available until 11:59 p.m. Jan. 6, 2027. Participation is confidential and takes only a few minutes to complete.

The survey will measure awareness of local resources and help the Health Department ment identify ways to make them easier to find as part of the Community Health Improvement Plan (CHIP).

LeMaster

“We have many great resources available in Hamilton County, but we know it’s not always easy to find the right help when you need it,” Health Department Administrator Jason LeMaster said. “This survey will help us understand where we can make that process easier for residents.”

To take the survey, go to bit.ly/ham-co-survey.

and give you free tickets.’ In return, we get to put on an attraction that houses way more people and physical bodies than you have ever seen before. You won’t come out here and see under 75 people entertaining you.”

However, fear is not the most valuable element of the Fear Farm experience.

When running for your life with the ones you love, you tend to discover new depth within your relationships.

“[Our target audience is] families, hands down,” Kent-Doolan said. We’re in a hot industry where everybody says, ‘I want the teenagers, I want the twenty-somethings, I want the cool kids that are into Halloween.’ I don’t. If you pay attention, I don’t say that it’s going to be the scariest encounter you have. What I am going to say is you are going to have an amazing time. You’re going to make memories for a lifetime, and we are going to fully entertain you.”

Along with prioritizing family fun, Kent-Doolan said Fear Farm strives to create an enjoyable experience for unconventional customers.

“Our demographic is the entire family, and we try to market to them and make it appealing,” Kent-Doolan said. “Grandma and Grandpa may want to be a part of the fun for the night, but Grandma and Grandpa don’t want to go into the barn and have their hearts explode out of their chests. We’re not going to charge them in the park; it only costs you if you actually buy tickets to go to an attraction. Grandma and Grandpa can sit out in the safe zone in the fire pit area in the middle of the midway and see when their family members and grandchildren are in the line for the barn. They can watch their family get scared by the roaming actors, but they’re completely safe because we don’t let the actors go in there. They can get a s’mores or a hot chocolate and sit and hang out with them all night.”

Families are not simply in attendance at Fear Farm, they are also built on staff. Kent-Doolan spoke to The Reporter about her experience building a community in costume.

“The biggest family that most people don’t consider is our staff,” Kent-Doolan said. “Fear Farm doesn’t have employees or workers, they’re all volunteers. We feed them and we give them a little bit of gas money, but they don’t get a lot out of helping with Fear Farm. However, there’s been multiple marriages from people that have met at Fear Farm on our staff. There’s people that are engaged right now, and friendships for life. They get this community that they never had. They get to be a part of this insanely crazy family that comes together 15 days a year. And you can always reach out to this extended Fear Farm family and the Kent-Doolans, and we’ve got your back.”

As someone who grew up prioritizing family, Kent-Doolan said her personal values were crucial to Fear Farm’s success.

“There used to be four generations that lived on this farm,” Kent-Doolan said. “Now there’s two. We were originally a horse farm, and then we became a traveling carnival. Whether it was the two generations now or the four generations then, we have always done whatever we’ve done together. We live in a way that most people don’t live anymore.”

Scares and thrills are their business, but Fear Farm is run by a kind family with benevolent core values.

“We’re Christians, and we’re very vocal about that. I was raised with very high standards. If the world standards are at my neck, my standards are way above my head. You’re accountable for your actions. We need to be good Christians, and we need to be good humans. We need to be kind and have grace. It is our job to love everybody, regardless. So when people come in to join this team, that’s what we start with. The world can be a very unkind and lonely place. The older I get, the more I realize that’s the truth. Our team wouldn’t be amazing if they didn’t rise to the standard that was set.”

For Kent-Doolan’s family, the Fear Farm has served as an outlet of creativity and passion over the years. Nevertheless, it all started with a love of horror.

“My mother was a huge prankster,” Kent-Doolan said. “She loved all things scary, like those sorts of things where people go out in the woods with ghosts. [My mother and I] would watch these movies, and then my mother would always mess with me and do things to me that had happened in those movies. So I’d wake up to all the cabinets being open, or sticks being made into stars. She was always a prankster and always messing with me. I think that’s where my love [of horror] comes from.”

To test your limits and have a night of dreadful excitement, go visit Indiana Fear Farm at 6736 S. County Road 500 West, Jamestown, on Fridays through Sundays until Oct. 25. See IndianaFearFarm.com/tickets to purchase tickets.

Noblesville Schools inducts Hall of Fame Class of 2026

Beaver, Crow, Farley & Hitchcock comprise second group of honorees

The REPORTER

On Tuesday, Oct. 6, Noblesville Schools inducted its Hall of Fame Class of 2026 members at the Noblesville Schools Community Center. The four inductees are:

- Chris Beaver, an NHS graduate, Miller Ambassador, district sponsor, and president of the Miller Backers athletic boosters;
- Sally Crow, a former educator who taught Language Arts at Noblesville Schools for more than 30 years and whose coaching led the high school to its first IHSAA championship in 1987 for any Noblesville girls team;
- Fred Farley, who served the district for 34 years as a facilities supervisor and director of the Transportation Department; and
- Bruce Hitchcock, who taught social studies for more than 40 years and created the Washington, D.C. study program.

“We’re honored to recognize the significant contributions of these special individuals who have played an important role in strengthening our schools and the Noblesville community,” Superintendent Dr. Dan Hile said.

This is the second year of the district’s new Hall of Fame program, which celebrates the legacy of those who have positively impacted the students, staff, and overall success of Noblesville Schools. Nominations are open for future Hall of Fame inductees. Eligibility criteria, nomination guidelines and the application to nominate can be found at tinyurl.com/NoblesvilleHoFnominations.

Where to rewatch Indiana Secretary of State debate

The REPORTER

The second Indiana Secretary of State debate took place Wednesday evening, Oct. 7.

The four candidates in this year’s Nov. 3 election are Independent Greg Ballard (who is running under the Lincoln Party banner), Democrat Beau Bayh, Republican Max Engling, and Libertarian Lauri Shillings. University of Indianapolis political science professor Dr. Laura Merrifield Wilson served as the moderator.

The debate was put on by the Indiana Debate Commission. You watch a video of the debate at WFYI.org and at IndianaDebate-Commission.com.

Carmel’s College Wood Elementary earns ‘Blue Ribbon’ designation

The REPORTER

On Monday, Oct. 5, Governor Mike Braun announced recipients of the second annual Indiana Blue Ribbon Schools designation. This year, 16 public and private schools across the state were selected for this recognition for their exceptional academic achievement and commitment to student success.

College Wood Elementary Schools in Carmel is among the designees.

“Indiana’s Blue Ribbon Schools represent our state’s commitment to ensuring every student has the opportunity to thrive,” Gov. Braun said. “These schools continue to set the bar high and show what is possible when families, schools, and communities work together to create classrooms where students are supported and prepared for the future.”

CLUB

According to Seif, publishing their very own review will give kids an opportunity to develop critical literary analysis skills at a young age. Students will learn not to just tell audiences about a book, but show it through examples and evidence in a story.

Seif said she wants the children to have fun and engage meaningfully through activities like “theater” where students would bring in props from home and reenact scenes from their novel.

“It’s just not a book club,” Seif said. “They are not just reading silently and answering questions. They’re growing a toolkit of skills that will continue to benefit them the rest of their lives.”

There is still time to get your children involved in this program. Education Station is registering new students until Oct. 17. The cost is $125, including all materials, for four weeks.

5th District race: Spartz & Ford agree on need for AI regulation

By GARRETT BERGQUIST
WISH-TV | wishtv.com

Both candidates for a north central Indiana congressional seat say Congress must establish guardrails for artificial intelligence.

Rep. Victoria Spartz, R-Ind., seeks a fourth term representing Indiana’s 5th Congressional District. The district covers Hamilton, Tipton, Howard, Grant, Madison, and Delaware counties. It is one of only two Indiana congressional districts with a single-digit partisan voting index rating from the Cook Political Report, currently at R+8. On Friday, the Cook Political Report changed its projection for the race from “Safe Republican” to “Likely Republican.” This means analysts still do not consider the race competitive but believe it has the potential to become so.

Spartz faces a challenge from J.D. Ford, a Democratic state senator. In 2018, Ford flipped party control of the 29th Senate District, which includes portions of Carmel and Zionsville as well as the west side of Indianapolis.

Spartz

Although Hamilton County is historically a Republican stronghold, the suburbs close to Indianapolis have drifted toward the Democratic camp. Donald Trump’s electoral margin there shrank between 2016 and 2024.

Both candidates sat down for interviews with All Indiana Politics.

Spartz frequently criticizes health care costs and hospital pricing policies. She blames those costs for the U.S. national debt topping $40 trillion. Spartz wants to strengthen a price transparency law Congress passed two years ago.

“There’s a lot of flaws in that bill. So that bill has to be fixed,” she said. “I was hoping we can get it done in

DISCUSSION

I ask this question. Are our daughters safe? It’s 2026, and I still hear men talking and making excuses. She should have ... SERIOUSLY??? What if it were their daughter? Does it have to be someone close to them before they show empathy?

Fathers, teach your children well. They are listening and watching how you react to commercials, athletes, politicians, and entertainers when women are disrespected in any way.

I grew up with a dad who respected my mother and the women in his life. Dad said a man’s words speak loudly when it comes to moral character.

There are no excuses for disrespecting a woman in any way. Husbands, your children listen to how you talk to your wife and how you treat her. Respect is both taught and caught.

Again, teach your children well.

When respect, common decency, and moral integrity are not taught at home, our society fails to do right by women, including holding those who harm them accountable.

To the women reading this who have a story to tell, I’m sorry you endured such violence. I’m sorry you felt you had to stay silent. I’m sorry you never received justice. I’m sorry you are still dealing with PTSD.

Dads, coaches, youth workers, and teachers: you need to have this discussion with the young men in your circle of influence.

My friend, Lisa, is now a licensed professional counselor and trauma therapist. She has written about trauma in her book, The Trauma Tree: Going Beyond Survival, Growing Toward Wholeness. I recommend her book to survivors and to those who know them. She has quite a story to tell, especially about her healing.

Survivors, your voice matters. I hope you feel seen and heard.

So, do you know her? If you know at least five women ... you probably do.

It’s time to have the discussion. Perhaps they should have it when they have the sex talk.

will bring hands-on science experiences to approximately 100 kindergarten students, encouraging curiosity and exploration through interactive learning.

At Monon Trail Elementary, Literacy for All Learners will provide kindergarten classrooms with hands-on, multisensory resources designed to strengthen letter recognition, phonemic awareness, and early phonics skills. The reusable materials can support students and educators for years to come.

At the newly opened Midland Crossing Elementary, Building Tomorrow’s STEM Explorers will provide reusable STEM materials for more than 120 second-grade students each year. Students will have opportunities to plan, build, test, and improve their designs while strengthening creativity, collaboration, problem-solving, and perseverance.

At Shamrock Springs Elementary, Cut. Build. Create. will give approximately 500 students access to tools that transform recycled cardboard into sculptures, architectural models, and original creations while incorporating art, engineering, and problem-solving.

At Washington Woods Elementary, the All About That Bass grant will add new instruments to the music classroom, expanding opportunities for students to learn and perform.

At Cool Creek Elementary, Building Successful Learners Through Mindful Breaks will provide third-grade students with screen-free opportunities to recharge and refocus, supporting student wellness alongside academic learning.

The impact continues as students move through Westfield Middle School.

Through the A Street Through Time project, WMS students will use illustrated resources to visualize civilizations and better understand how people lived throughout history. The Career Exploration for All grant will help about 800 eighth-grade students participate in Junior Achievement JobSpark, connecting classroom learning with careers and future possibilities.

At Westfield High School, Teacher-Led Grants continue that investment, providing educators with additional resources to create relevant, engaging learning experiences as students prepare for college, careers, and life beyond Westfield Washington Schools.

These are just a few examples of the 85 educator ideas now becoming opportunities for students across Westfield Washington Schools.

Made possible by the community

WEF’s Teacher-Led Grant Program is possible because of the generosity of individuals, families, businesses, and organizations that believe in Westfield’s students and educators.

The Westfield Education Foundation extends special thanks to the community partners supporting the Teacher-Led Grant

WEF also extends its sincere appreciation to the Advancing Westfield Foundation for its $28,000 investment in Westfield elementary schools and to the elementary PTOs and school principals who worked alongside WEF to identify classroom needs and maximize the impact of those resources.

Together, these partnerships show an important part of WEF’s work: bringing together the community’s generosity and resources and connecting them directly to the needs of students and educators.

Heights names six September Coffee Bean Award recipients

Submitted by Hamilton Heights School Corporation

Hamilton Heights High School recognizes the following students who were named as Coffee Bean Award recipients for the month of September. They include Gavan Hite, Lillie Hooper, Fiona McDonald, Tyler Miller, Addison Mize, and Addison Webb.

The name and award, inspired by The Coffee Bean, a book written by Jon Gordon and Damon West, delivers a simple, yet powerful message on positive change. All students nominated receive a certificate of recognition. At the end of the month, the names of the students who were nominated during the month are included in a drawing where the first seven names drawn are called down to the office to enjoy a hot chocolate or coffee and a donut.

The monthly award objective is to encourage more acts of kindness, positivity, school spirit, and help foster a closer sense of community at the high school. Students and staff can nominate students. You can send a nomination by visiting our Student Services page at hs.hhschuskies.org.

HCCF receives $35,000 grant for workforce training

The REPORTER

On Tuesday, Oct. 6, the Duke Energy Foundation announced it is awarding $35,000 to the Hamilton County Community Foundation to support workforce development efforts.

HCCF plans to advance three goals with this funding: build a coordinated employer engagement model for Hamilton County adult workforce programs; expand Ivy Tech Community College student internships with local employers; and establish the multi-county Suburban Indy Workforce Partnership.

The shareholder-funded grants aim to equip Hoosiers with in-demand skills and industry-recognized credentials to meet the needs of the region’s employers.

September. Maybe after the election, Democrats will actually work better with us.”

Spartz, who became a U.S. citizen through naturalization, supports the Trump administration’s deportation strategy. She said some recent controversies regarding immigration raids happen because of the high number of people believed to be in the country without legal documentation, estimated at 12 million. In some cases, raids have affected U.S. citizens or lawful permanent residents. She said her office is ready to help if that happens.

Spartz said Congress needs to provide regulations for AI. She said previous data privacy legislation would have addressed some concerns about AI, but Congress missed an opportunity to lead on the issue.

“We have to have a serious conversation because there are a lot of threats with national but international threats because this could be also by our adversaries,” she said.

Ford said he is running because too many people struggle to pay for gas and groceries. He attributes that problem partly to the war in Iran. Ford said Congress has failed to meet its responsibility under the War Powers Act and needs to use its control over spending to limit the conflict.

While Ford supports the idea of enforcing immigration laws, he believes the Trump administration’s deportation efforts are excessive and racially motivated. He said Immigration and Customs Enforcement agents should wear body cameras and obtain warrants before making arrests. He also said agents should not wear masks. Ford said he supports a path to citizenship for people brought to the country as children and for those who have been working and paying taxes.

“They’ve demonstrated that they’ve been good citizens to our country, but yet, people are being arrested for showing up to court hearings,” he said. “They’re being arrested for just simply existing and I don’t think that’s right.”

Ford, who served on the Indiana General Assembly’s AI task force, said Congress should pass legislation to regulate AI. He said he is willing to work with anyone in that body, regardless of party. Ford criticized Congress for going on recess after AI CEOs warned that unchecked technology could pose an existential threat to humanity.

“AI does good things but can also be used for nefarious reasons and we want to make sure we put some guardrails around that,” he said.

On the national debt, Ford said the Trump administration’s Department of Government Efficiency, or DOGE, was a good idea in theory but suffered from poor execution. He said the government can rein in the debt by cutting waste and avoiding conflicts like the war with Iran.

Early voting is underway through noon Nov. 2 at local election offices. Election Day is Nov. 3 at polling places.

Westfield Lions Club celebrate 96 years of service with Anniversary Dinner & awards

By JEFF LARRISON
Westfield Lions Club

The Westfield Lions Club celebrated 96 years of service to the community on Oct. 1 with its annual Anniversary Dinner, recognizing several members for their outstanding contributions to the club and the community.

Twenty-seven Lions received Perfect Attendance pins at the meeting, including Ted Engelbrecht, who was recognized for 55 years of perfect attendance, and Bob Benson, who has achieved an impressive 57 years.

Joel Davis was awarded a Richard Miyamoto Fellowship for his dedicated service to the club and the community. The award is named in honor of Dr. Richard Miyamoto, renowned for his work in audiology and speech and language pathology. The fellowship was presented by Past District Governor Eric Schuman, a trustee for the Indiana Lions Speech & Hearing Project.

Lions Bill Nesbitt and Dr. Kathleen Busby received the Indiana School for the Blind and Visually Impaired Fellowship for their volunteer efforts involving vision screening of elementary school students and collaborating with the club to provide eye exams and glasses for those in financial need.

The Mark Hallett Memorial “First Responders Award” was presented to Lions Jacqui and Dennis Lloyd. The award recognizes new and newer Lions who have been quick to answer the call to service, going above and beyond in fulfilling the Lions Club motto, “We Serve.”

The award was established in memory of Lion Mark Hallett, a retired fire fighter who passed away unexpectedly in 2025. Although Mark was a new Lion, he made an immediate impact on the club through his hard work and willingness to serve others.

The Melvin Jones Fellowship, one of the highest honors in Lions Clubs International, was presented to Carrie Larrison. Carrie was recognized for her extensive service to the club, including volunteering at numerous events and projects, recruiting several new members, and serving the community.

The Roy O. Hadley Lion of the Year Award was presented to Linda Hallett. Linda’s hard work on the Club’s Golf Outing Committee was instrumental in the success of this year’s event. She has also recruited numerous members into the club and regularly volunteers at club events and projects.

In addition to the awards presentation, Hamilton County Commissioner Mark Heirbrandt provided the Lions with an update on several major developments taking place throughout the county. He discussed several infrastructure projects in the works and provided an update on the County’s flood recovery efforts.

About the Westfield Lions Club

The Westfield Lions Club was founded in 1930 and has been serving Westfield and the citizens of Hamilton County for 96 years. The club is always looking for men and women who are interested in stepping up to serve others and make a difference in their community. HAND opens six new affordable homes in Carmel

Home Place Duets demonstrates a collaborative approach to creating housing & supporting families

The REPORTER

Hamilton County Area Neighborhood Development (HAND) recently celebrated the opening of Home Place Duets, marking the completion of six new affordable three-bedroom rental homes in Carmel.

HAND welcomed community partners and supporters to the property Tuesday, Sept. 29, for an Open House and Ribbon Cutting, giving guests an opportunity to tour the completed homes before residents begin moving in.

Located at the corner of 108 & McPherson Street in the Home Place area, Home Place Duets includes three duplex buildings designed to fit naturally into the surrounding neighborhood, with an emphasis on quality, durability, and long-term community benefit. One of the six homes is handicap accessible.

Residents will be referred through Prevail, Inc. and Family Promise of Hamilton County. HAND will own and manage the homes, while the two organizations will continue providing services and support to the families they refer.

“Home Place Duets is a great example of what can happen when organizations bring different resources and expertise together around a shared need,” said Andrea Davis, HAND Executive Director. “HAND brings our experience developing, owning, and managing affordable housing, while Prevail and Family Promise bring the relationships and services they provide to families. Each organization brings something different to the table, and together we can provide both a quality place to call home and ongoing support.”

Each home has a property-based housing voucher that remains with the unit. Qualified residents will pay 30 percent of their income toward rent, with utilities included. To qualify for a referral to Home Place Duets, applicants must be experiencing homelessness or fleeing domestic violence.

The opening comes as HAND continues to see significant demand for affordable housing. From January through August 2026, 560 people completed HAND’s online housing interest form asking to be added to its waiting list. With the completion of Home Place Duets, HAND now owns and manages 163 affordable homes across 12 rental communities in Hamilton, Boone, and Tip-ton counties.

Home Place Duets represents one response to that need: adding quality housing in a community where affordable options can be difficult to find. The small-scale development adds six homes while fitting into an established residential neighborhood, giving families the opportunity to remain connected to the community.

“At the end of the day, this work is about more than completing a development,” Davis said. “It’s about making sure people have the opportunity to live in a quality home and remain part of the communities where they work, raise their families and build their lives.”

The collaborative approach extended to the development itself. The $3 million Home Place Duets development was made possible through a combination of public and private investment, including HOME-ARP funding through the Indiana Housing & Community Development Authority, Hamilton County Community Development Block Grant funds and financing from Lake City Bank. Home Place Duets was developed by HAND with H-E Homes serving as custom home builder, Inherent Commercial as owner’s representative and CEC Inc. as engineer.

As the long-term owner and property manager, HAND will continue caring for the homes and serving the Home Place Duets community after residents move in.

Residents are expected to begin moving into Home Place Duets in October.

About HAND

Founded in 2003, Hamilton County Area Neighborhood Development, Inc. (HAND) is a nonprofit organization that provides quality affordable housing and advocates for housing options where everyone can thrive. HAND develops, owns, and manages affordable rental communities in Hamilton, Boone, and Tip-ton counties.

Today, HAND owns and manages 163 affordable homes across 12 rental communities and continues working to build and preserve housing options for individuals and families throughout Central Indiana.

HSE Schools’ 14 National Merit Scholars exemplify journey of a student

Submitted by HSE Schools
“Excellence Starts Here” isn’t just Hamilton Southeastern Schools’ motto. It’s the standard of success that drives every facet of the district. From the athletic field to the performing arts stage, to vibrant student clubs and rigorous coursework, every accomplishment is rooted in a shared commitment to high expectations.

Nowhere is that standard clearer than in the achievements of Fishers High School (FHS) and Hamilton Southeastern High School’s (HSEHS) 2027 National Merit Scholarship Semifinalists, including nine from FHS and five from HSEHS, who were honored at a breakfast on Thursday, Oct. 1.

Congratulations to these students on this outstanding academic achievement:

Established in 1955, the National Merit Scholarship

Program remains one of the most prestigious academic competitions in the United States. The program recognizes exceptional academic achievement and identifies some of the nation’s highest performing students.

Both schools’ honorees represent the top 1 percent of high school seniors nationwide based on their performance on the preliminary SAT (PSAT). These students now advance in the competition for nearly 7,000 National Merit Scholarships, worth approximately $26 million, awarded in spring 2027.

The designation opens doors to transformative higher education opportunities. Many universities, such as the University of Evansville, recruit finalists with full-ride scholarship offers, turning years of dedication into college funding.

While the National Merit title is awarded in high school, it is not based on a single test day’s effort. It is the culmination of a district-wide journey that begins the moment a student enters kindergarten.

“One of the things that really prepares students well is to have a challenging, rigorous, relevant curriculum throughout their journey,” said Jason Urban, assistant superintendent of secondary education. “It’s a journey that starts in elementary school through having a culture of expecting high levels of learning for every student.”

To ensure every student stays on target, HSE uses early testing as a growth tool rather than a hurdle. Freshmen and sophomores take practice exams to gain skill-by-skill feedback, giving parents, teachers, and counselors actionable data to tailor schedules and challenge students through Advanced Placement (AP) and Dual Credit courses.

“There isn’t an ideal ‘type’ of student,” Urban said. “Every student brings their own learning style and experiences. What they all share is a love of learning. If you love to learn and you’re in an environment at school and at home that reinforces that, great things happen.”

HSE Schools’ Journey of a Student framework serves as the blueprint for nurturing well-rounded, capable leaders. By focusing on key skills, attributes and dispositions throughout their school years, the district prepares students to excel in any discipline.

“It was rewarding to see the work I had put into preparing reflected in the recognition, and I’m grateful to have earned the opportunity to be a part of this group of scholars,” said Allison Svilenov, a scholar from FHS. “Having teachers that genuinely cared about their students and were passionate about teaching had a tremendous impact on the type of student I am today.”

HSE Schools intentionally elevates academic milestones to match the energy of athletic state championships or performing arts accolades. Both Fishers and Hamilton Southeastern high schools celebrate National Merit honorees with special family breakfasts, giving academic excellence the spotlight and community praise it deserves.

“Being named a semifinalist feels less like validation and more like a shared achievement with my school,” said Thomas Bezza, a scholar from HSEHS. It reminds me how fortunate I am to be surrounded by passionate HSE educators, my thoughtful friends, and my supportive family. It also serves as fuel for tackling future academic challenges. Work hard, play hard, and on test day, trust yourself and your preparation.”

Ultimately, these milestones celebrate far more than individual test scores. They recognize the vast support system behind each child – the family members, mentors, teachers, and community members who poured into them along the way. Honoring the student honors that collective journey.

Brewing up fall fun at Clay Terrace

By AIDA KARIM
news@readthereporter.com

What better way to tap into the Halloween Spirit than through a family-friendly night of fall festivities? On Saturday, Oct. 17, from 2 to 6 p.m., Clay Terrace, 14390 Clay Terrace Blvd., Carmel, will hold its annual Boo ‘n Brew Fall Festival, which will feature renowned pumpkin-carver Eric Jones.

The Reporter spoke with Christine Foulke, Marketing & Events Manager at Clay Terrace, about the 14th annual festival.

According to Foulke, Boo ‘n Brew started off as a community trick-or-treating event.

“We wanted to drive foot traffic to the center,” Foulke said, “but also be known as a place for community gatherings where people feel safe, where they can hang out, and see what else we have going on here.”

Foulke told The Reporter the trick-or-treating is the main attraction of the event.

“We have youngsters coming in costume, trick or treating with their parents or family,” she said.

Foulke said children will also have the chance to enjoy an educational Silly Safari show. She said in years past Silly Safari showcased a variety of animals from reptiles to eagles.

According to Foulke, Boo ‘n Brew doesn’t exclusively cater to children. Clay Terrace will bring in Upland Brewing, Field Brewing, and Bier Brewery to curate a “family-friendly beer garden.”

This year the event will welcome acclaimed pumpkin-carver Eric Jones. He is a 2023 Guinness World Record Holder, Winner of Food Network’s Outrageous Pumpkins, and a finalist in Food Network’s Halloween Wars.

Community members have the chance to watch Jones in action as he carves pumpkins during the entire event.

Foulke said families can engage with an assortment of additional activities like hay-riding, pumpkin decorating, a corn maze, and a pet costume contest. While families enjoy the festivities, local bands Jam Box and Toy Factory will perform.

“[The bands] bring the energy and kind of set the mood for the whole event, and you can hear the music all throughout the center,” Foulke said.

Foulke said she knows there are always numerous events hosted for families year-round.

“We truly appreciate people coming back year after year,” she said. “We talked to families each year, they say they’ve been coming since their kids were babies and now their kids are 7.”

According to Foulke, Boo ‘n Brew has become an annual event for a lot of people, and Clay Terrace “enjoys putting it on for the people who love it.”

St. Christopher’s Pumpkin Sale, now through Oct. 31

Submitted

Fall is here, and St. Christopher’s Episcopal Church has brought back its annual Pumpkin Sale.

There you’ll find more than 600 pumpkins and gourds in all shapes and sizes – star gourds, swan gourds, and elf houses – perfect for decorating your home for fall. Everything will be available through Oct. 31 on the side lawn of the church.

St. Christopher’s is located at 1402 W. Main St., Carmel. The pumpkin sale has something for everyone, from the perfect porch pumpkin to colorful gourds for fall decorating.

Even better, 100 percent of the proceeds benefit the Hamilton County Harvest Food Bank, which provides food to more than 30 local food pantries serving neighbors throughout Hamilton County. St. Christopher’s loves that this simple fall tradition directly helps to put food on the tables of neighbors right here in Hamilton County.

So pick a pumpkin and make a difference.

Family Fall Festival brings community together at Bethel Lutheran Church

Submitted

A growing partnership between Legacy Christian School and Bethel Lutheran Church is once again bringing families together for an afternoon of fall festivities and community connection.

The two organizations will hold their third annual Family Fall Festival from 1 to 5 p.m. Saturday, Oct. 17, at Bethel Lutheran Church, 20650 Cumberland Road, Noblesville. Geared for kids in preschool through fifth grade, this free event has fun in store for the whole family.

The festival will feature a huge corn pit, pumpkin station, face painting, hayrides, game alley, pedal cars, basketball, frisbee golf, line dancing, campfire foods, fall treats, touch a fire truck, police car and tractor and many other family-friendly activities.

While the festival is a relatively new tradition, the relationship between Legacy Christian School and Bethel Lutheran Church began several years ago.

Legacy Christian School, a PreK-12 Christian school located on Lakeview Drive in Noblesville, was looking for additional space as the school expanded to include its state-accredited high school. That need led to a partnership with Bethel Lutheran Church, which opened the doors of its educational wing to Legacy’s preschool program.

The preschool is now in its fourth year at Bethel, bringing young children and their families to the church campus throughout the school week.

For Bethel, the partnership has provided an opportunity to use its existing facilities to support a growing ministry in the community. For Legacy, it has provided a home for its preschool program while creating new relationships between the school, church, and families.

The partnership also reflects a shared emphasis on serving others.

Bethel Lutheran Church supports a variety of community and outreach ministries, including a bi-weekly food pantry, Scouting America troops, Classical Conversations and Bible Study Fellowship, among others. The church’s outreach is centered on using its resources to serve and bless others in the community.

Legacy Christian School similarly emphasizes service and leadership alongside academics rooted in a biblical worldview. Students are encouraged to look beyond themselves and find ways to serve others throughout their school experience.

The Family Fall Festival grew from those shared values, providing an opportunity for the church and school to welcome the broader community onto the Bethel campus.

Now in its third year, organizers say the event is becoming an annual tradition for local families. In addition to providing an afternoon of free activities, the festival offers an opportunity for families to meet their neighbors, build relationships and enjoy the fall season together.

The event is free and open to the public, and families from Noblesville and surrounding communities are invited to attend.

The Family Fall Festival is made possible in part through the support of local businesses and community sponsors, including Russell Farms Pumpkin Patch, Blake’s Cottage Bakes, Well’s Amish Furniture, Without Borders, The Collective on the Square, Brammer Financial, Harbour Town Martial Arts, 10th Street Photography, ADS Cabinets, and Carter’s Play Place.

Organizers invite families to join Legacy Christian School and Bethel Lutheran Church on Oct. 17 for an afternoon of fall fun, fellowship, and community.

No tricks, all treats at Grand Junction Plaza in Westfield

Submitted by City of Westfield

Celebrate the Halloween season with an evening of candy, entertainment, and family fun from 4:30 to 8 p.m. Friday, Oct. 23, at Grand Junction Plaza, 225 S. Union St., Westfield, for Trick-or-Treating in the Plaza, presented by NSpire Church.

This free community event will feature more than 60 local businesses and organizations handing out treats and candy to children of all ages. Costumes are encouraged but are not required to participate in the fun.

“One of Westfield’s greatest strengths is the way our community comes together,” Mayor Scott Willis said. “Trick-or-Treating in the Plaza is a fun, safe way for families to celebrate the season, make memories and enjoy time with neighbors.”

In addition to trick-or-treating, families can enjoy a full evening of Halloween entertainment throughout Grand Junction Plaza. Guests can enjoy live dance performances, while a magician will perform the four shows throughout the evening in the amphitheater. Guests can also join in the fun at a silent disco party, enjoy complimentary face painting, take a ghost tour through Old Friends Cemetery and other historic areas of downtown Westfield, and purchase a Ghoulish Game Card for $10 to participate in carnival games throughout the Plaza. Proceeds from Ghoulish Game Card sales benefit Family Promise of Hamilton County.

At 6 p.m., the Great Lawn will transform into an outdoor movie theater for a showing of Goosebumps on the big screen. Attendees are encouraged to bring blankets and lawn chairs and settle in for the movie.

Attendees can also help support local families through a donation drive benefiting Family Promise of Hamilton County. Guests are encouraged to bring one or more of Family Promise’s Top 5 Most Needed Items: canned foods, all-purpose cleaner, hand soap, Clorox wipes, and body wash. Donations can be dropped off at the NSpire Church booth during Trick-or-Treating in the Plaza.

Versiti Blood Center will also hold a blood drive during Trick-or-Treating in the Plaza. Community members are encouraged to make an appointment in advance to donate blood during the event. Register to donate blood with Versiti at tinyurl.com/Ssd222kb.

Free parking is available in designated on-street spaces along Union and Mill streets, as well as the public lots at Park and Poplar streets. Parking in The Union garage is free for the first three hours, with a small fee for each additional hour. A complimentary shuttle will run for the duration of the event between the Westfield Washington Public Library, 17400 Westfield Blvd., and Grand Junction Plaza.

Official trick-or-treating hours are 5 to 8 p.m. on Saturday, Oct. 31. Motorists should use extra caution when driving through residential areas as there may be heavier foot traffic. Trick-or-treaters, please be cautious of vehicular traffic when crossing streets.

Get for Carmel Clay Parks & Rec’s Sensory Friendly Trick-or-Treat Trail

The REPORTER

A not-so-spooky Halloween celebration is returning this October with Carmel Clay Park & Recreation’s (CCPR) Sensory Friendly Trick-or-Treat Trail. Individuals with disabilities and their families are invited to enjoy an afternoon of fun on Saturday, Oct. 24, from 1 to 3 p.m. at River Heritage Park, 11813 River Road.

The event offers a sensory friendly alternative to traditional trick-or-treating, allowing participants to enjoy the fun of Halloween without loud music, frightening decorations and other spooky surprises. Friendly volunteers dressed in non-threatening costumes will hand out treats along River Heritage Park’s fully accessible trails, with seasonal games and activities available at the end of the trail.

“Everyone, regardless of age or ability, should have an opportunity to enjoy Halloween,” said Kelvin Solares, CCPR Inclusion Program Supervisor. “Sensory Friendly Trick-or-Treat Trail gives individuals and their families a chance to celebrate in a way that feels comfortable for them while still enjoying what makes the holiday special.”

Registration for the Sensory Friendly Trick-or-Treat Trail is $7 per trick-or-treater, while accompanying family members are free. Preregistration is required at this link. Trick-or-treaters should bring their own bag or basket for candy.

Want to get involved? Volunteers are needed to hand out treats, host activities, and help with set-up/teardown. Sign up to volunteer at tinyurl.com/k2er4kdb. Local organizations are also invited to participate by handing out candy, promotional items, or other goodies along the trail. Organizations interested in participating can contact Kelvin Solares at kso-lares@carmelclayparks.com for more information.

Sheridan’s Phi Beta Psi Sorority thanks community for successful Lasagna Dinner

Submitted by Tina Vawter

Sheridan’s Theta Alpha Chapter of Phi Beta Psi’s annual Lasagna Dinner, held before Sheridan’s Homecoming football game, was a tremendous success thanks to the generous support of our friends, families, and community members.

More than 200 guests enjoyed a delicious meal of lasagna, salad, breadsticks, and dessert. Thanks to everyone who attended and supported this important fundraiser, the chapter raised more than $1,900.

A special thank-you goes to Sheridan Community Schools for allowing us to use the cafeteria and kitchen. We are also incredibly grateful to the wonderful SHS cafeteria staff – Nancy Mosna, Susan Gossard, and Kim Phillips – for their assistance and support.

We extend our sincere appreciation to all of our chapter members for their hard work in preparing, serving, and organizing the dinner, as well as for providing the delicious desserts enjoyed by our guests.

The Lasagna Dinner is the chapter’s main fundraising event and helps provide two scholarships to Sheridan High School students pursuing careers in the medical field. We are proud to support the next generation of healthcare professionals and grateful to our community for helping make these scholarships possible.

Working together across generations

By AIDA KARIM
news@readthereporter.com

Each generation has something to learn and something to teach.

The Carmel Mayor’s Advisory Commission on Senior Living invites any and all community members to the Intergenerational Day for Seniors: Connecting Generations, Enriching Lives conference on Friday, Oct. 16.

The full-day event will take place from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. at University High School, 2825 W. 116th St., Carmel.

The Reporter spoke with Carol Applegate, co-chairperson of the Mayor’s Advisory Commission on Senior Living. As part of her responsibilities on the commission, Applegate has served as the key organizer of the conference for the past four years.

According to Applegate, community members can expect a keynote from Dr. Carolyn Goerner of the Kelley School of Business at Indiana University Bloomington.

“Her message is going to focus on the power of collaboration across generations and what happens when generations work together in our community,” Applegate said.

Applegate told The Reporter speakers and activities will focus on a variety of community issues like housing for the elderly, leaving a legacy, AI usage, and combatting loneliness.

She said the conference strongly encourages volunteerism, with the commission inviting a retired fireman who is still giving back to the community through his service.

“There are always things to volunteer for because Carmel is such an active community,” Applegate said.

According to Applegate, her interest in intergenerational connection started during a national mentorship program.

For the program, Applegate connected with a young man, meeting over Zoom to talk each week. She said her pupil explored deep personal struggles with her, sharing how his experience in an active school shooting affected him.

“After that six-week period, the young man wrote me a letter about what he learned from me,” Applegate said. “And I found that experience to be really touching for me because at first I thought, ‘I’m much older and he’s younger ... his life looks a lot different.’ But we really connected.”

As Applegate’s grandchildren grow older and start college, she said her experiences with young people continue to deeply resonate with her.

“We need to pay attention to intergenerational connections,” she said. “It’s a really big part of growing older and becoming a senior, looking at our own mortality and what have we done to affect the world around us.”

Applegate said she hopes the intergenerational connection in the conference will remind the seniors to not only make their own lives richer, but enrich the lives of young people.

“Our younger generations are the ones who are going to carry through for us,” Applegate said. “So problem solving with our younger generation is how we make Carmel become a community where generations don’t simply live together, but we truly know each other and make each other feel safe.”

This event is free and open to the public. You can register online at intergenerationalday-forse.rsvpify.com.

Universal Cares helps where needed, one family at a time

Universal Cares' third annual Cars, Condos & Cares Fundraiser was held Wednesday evening, Oct. 7, at Motor District Garage Condos, 1516 W. Tournament Trail, Westfield. Fishers YAP receives $100K to expand academic support

The REPORTER

Indiana Youth Institute (YI) has awarded Fishers Youth Assistance Program (FYAP) a grant totaling $100,000.

IYI made the grant in connection with Strengthening Youth Programs in Indiana (SYPI), an initiative Lilly Endowment Inc. launched in 2023. The initiative seeks to help youth-serving organizations working throughout the state improve their abilities to promote the academic, physical, and social well-being of young people ages 5 through 18.

With this support, FYAP will further build on its academic remediation programs. The funding will allow FYAP to expand its small-group and individual tutoring programs to serve greater numbers of students. This work will help more local students strengthen their reading skills, address academic challenges, and build a stronger foundation for future success.

"We are incredibly grateful for this investment in Fishers Youth Assistance Program and in the students we serve," FYAP President Debbie Mann said. "This grant will allow us to expand the academic support we provide and reach more students who can benefit from additional help. By investing in students during the summer and throughout the school year, we can help them strengthen their skills, build confidence, and be better prepared for the year ahead."

FYAP is one of 168 youth-serving organizations awarded SYPI grants totaling more than $40 million. A full list of grant recipients is available at tinyurl.com/SYPIgrants2026.

About Fishers Youth Assistance Program

Fishers Youth Assistance Program (FYAP) walks alongside children and families in the Fishers community by connecting them with resources and services that help them overcome challenges and thrive. FYAP provides family education, tutoring, mentoring, counseling, and assistance with food, clothing, and financial needs. Through partnerships with schools, community organizations, volunteers, and donors, FYAP works to strengthen the well-being of local youth and families. To learn more about FYAP, click here.

About Indiana Youth Institute

Indiana Youth Institute's mission is to improve the lives of all Indiana children by strengthening and connecting the people, organizations, and communities that are focused on kids and youth. IYI is Indiana's premier source for high-quality data on child well-being and data-informed action to address challenges Hoosier children face. It leads the FIVE by 50 vision as a connector and convener to ensure that every child will have a network of five caring, supportive adults in their life by the year 2050. Although the Endowment maintains a special commitment to its founders' hometown, Indianapolis, and home state, Indiana, it funds programs throughout the United States, especially in the field of religion.

Carmel resident with young-onset Parkinson’s has passion for helping others overcome similar challenges

Submitted by the Parkinson’s Foundation

If you see Carmel resident Kylee Pagán at the Parkinson Foundation’s “Moving Day Indianapolis” celebration at Conner Prairie later this month, you’ll see someone full of energy, optimism, and zest for life. The path to getting here, though, has been hard at times.

When she was in her mid-30s, Pagán began noticing physical difficulties in simply trying to navigate day-to-day life. She felt clumsy and uncoordinated. She repeatedly lost her balance and fell. Her left arm hung stiffly at her side rather than swing normally when she walked.

“My symptoms kept getting worse,” Pagán recalls. “It caused tremendous fear, frustration, and heartache.”

A veteran who spent 10 years serving her country in the U.S. Air Force, Pagán was accustomed to challenges. But the changes occurring in her body were unlike anything she’d ever faced. And even more frustrating was the fact that the medical professionals she saw at more than 160 appointments in 2017 and 2018 had no clue what was causing her issues.

“I think it’s impossible for most people to imagine what it’s like living with an unknown health condition having such a devastating impact on your physical and mental state,” Pagán said. “It was hard accepting the harsh reality that no one knew what was wrong.”

Finally, in 2019, just days before her 40th birthday, Pagán met with an Indiana University Health movement disorder specialist who immediately diagnosed Pagán’s condition.

She had Parkinson’s disease.

Today, Pagán is one of more than 20,000 Hoosiers battling the neurodegenerative brain disease in which nerve cells that produce dopamine gradually break down and die. The condition causes a range of motor symptoms such as balance issues, rigidity, slowness, stiffness, and tremor – along with non-motor symptoms like anxiety, brain fog, and insomnia.

Nearly 90,000 new cases of Parkinson’s are diagnosed each year in the United States. There is currently no cure, but advocates and researchers are determined to change that.

Pagán is one of more than 300 people planning to take part in the Parkinson Foundation’s “Moving Day Indianapolis” fundraising celebration from 9 a.m. to noon on Sat., Oct. 17, at Conner Prairie, 13400 Allisonville Road, Fishers.

“The mission of the Parkinson’s Foundation is to help improve the lives of those living with Parkinson’s disease by supporting cutting-edge research, care and education programs,” said Kerrie McKeough, Advancement Director for the foundation’s Midwest Chapter. “In everything we do, we strive to have a world where there is a cure for Parkinson’s disease. There are over 1.1 million people in the United States living with Parkinson’s, and the number continues to grow.”

Moving Day Indianapolis is a celebration of movement and exercise, which are proven to help manage symptoms. Community members at the event will experience workout demonstrations, a resource fair, and activities for kids of all ages. Those in attendance can also take photos with Freddy Fever and the 1939 Chevy used as the Hickory Huskers’ team bus in the movie Hoosiers, widely regarded as the all-time best example of sports cinema.

“This is our third year hosting the event in Indianapolis,” McKeough said, “and each year we have seen an increase in attendance. Our Moving Days across the country have raised over $55 million to support our work.”

As for Pagán, she continues dealing with the realities of Parkinson’s. But today – with the support of her husband, sons, and a “village” of other family and friends – she is hopeful about the future.

“Parkinson’s may have changed the way I move,” she said, “but it never changed my reason to keep moving. I’m not the person I was before Parkinson’s. I’m stronger, wiser, and a new version of me. I choose to move, I choose to live, and I choose to make every step count.”

Veterans Coffee: reconnecting through camaraderie

By Tiffanie Ditlevson
For The Reporter

Ask veterans what they miss most about military service, and one answer comes up again and again: the camaraderie.

When we take off the uniform, we don’t stop being veterans. But we often lose the built-in community that came with serving – the people who understood the experience without needing an explanation.

That connection matters. Veterans continue to experience disproportionately high rates of suicide, and many veterans are unaware of – or simply aren’t using – the benefits and resources they earned through their service. In Indiana alone, 149 veterans died by suicide in 2023.

That’s why fellow veterans Matt Rapp, USN; Scott Billman, USMC; and I, Tiffanie Ditlevson, USAF, are launching Veterans Coffee in Fishers.

The idea is simple: create a welcoming place where veterans can reconnect, meet other veterans in our community, share information about available benefits and resources, and enjoy something many of us have missed since leaving the military: camaraderie.

Veterans Coffee begins Saturday, Oct. 24, and will meet every fourth Saturday of the month from 8:30 to 10 a.m. at F.C. Tucker Company, 10404 Olivo Road, Fishers.

No speeches. No big agenda. Just coffee, conversation, camaraderie, and an opportunity to make sure veterans in our community know about the people, benefits, and resources available to them.

All veterans. All branches. All generations.

To RSVP, call or text (317) 446-0416.

Tiffanie Ditlevson is a veteran of the U.S. Air Force, and she serves on the Fishers City Council.

Veterans & Athletes United auction returns to Cyntheanne Christian Church

The REPORTER

Cyntheanne Christian Church will play host to the 17th annual Veterans and Athletes United (VAU) Auction at 10:30 a.m. Saturday, Nov. 7, a free, family-friendly event raising funds and awareness for veterans with disabilities.

There is no cost to attend. Lunch will be available.

Every dollar raised at the auction – 100 percent of proceeds – goes directly to VAU, an organization dedicated to supporting those who have served.

The day’s centerpiece is the Fallen Heroes Memorial Wall, on public display in the church parking lot and bearing the names of service members who gave their lives in defense of the country. Visitors are invited to view the wall and read the names before or after the auction – a striking, visual moment of remembrance that photographs and films well for media coverage.

“This auction is one way we can help these heroes regain some aspect of their normal lives,” Senior Minister Larry Renihan said.

Cyntheanne Christian Church is located at 13151 Cyntheanne Road, Fishers.

Thanks to Feeding Team volunteers and the team at Gaylor Electric, students at “The Crossing” High School inside Gaylor Electric now have access to good, non-perishable food for them and their families.

Education on an empty stomach? Not around here

Hunger can hit every demographic here in Hamilton County. We routinely see neighbors from across the socio-economic spectrum at pantries, drive-through food pick-ups, and even at our in-office food pick-ups.

One of the nasty things about hunger is that it can come from nowhere. Some tragedy hits, or a job loss or an illness, and all of the sudden you find yourself in need. Often, it’s a need that’s new to these neighbors. They don’t know what to do, what to expect, or how to begin to seek help.

In this column we want to touch on a subset of those amongst us. Young adults within the working poor who are working hard to get to a good life. I’m talking about “The Crossing” High School inside of Gaylor Electric (crossingeducation.com). This is a special school for kids that need alternatives to finish high school and maybe learn a trade. The students experience an innovative path to graduation. By pairing classroom learning with real-world experience alongside Gaylor Electric staff, students acquire essential, hands-on business, and technical skills.

In partnering with Gaylor over the years, we have watched this school grow from idea to reality. We also saw young adults trying to make a life for themselves, trying to do what is right, trying to get on the right future path. We saw these folks struggle to get by. Many of these students are living on their own, some come from very tough backgrounds, some are even parents, but many have limited means. It was a perfect place for a Feeding Team pantry.

When we recognized the opportunity to make a positive difference in these kids’ lives, we went to get permission to drop pantry number 82 inside their high school inside the Gaylor Electric property. After a few conversations, the pantry was deployed.

Now, kids who were skipping meals or slamming ramen once a day now have non-perishable meals available to them and their families. Instructors that were bringing supplemental food for the kids can now breathe easier and students can focus on academics.

This isn’t a typical Feeding Team pantry location. We look for high-visibility locations near areas where gap families reside or congregate. As a reminder, gap families are those with four or more

Life is a gift

I met my friend Rainey in middle school. Throughout the years, we have been through a lot of life together. In high school, she didn’t miss a beat and helped me so much after a major surgery our senior year. We were college roommates and she has always been one of my most supportive friends. I love her dearly.

Four years ago, she shared with me that she was diagnosed with breast cancer. While a multitude of emotions ran through me, all I wanted to do was show her the same support she always has shown me. Rainey is one of the strongest women I know, and I am proud to call her a friend.

During her diagnosis and treatment time, she shared some thoughts with me about my disability. Throughout her battle, she was able to relate to me in ways she never could before.

October is Breast Cancer Awareness month, and I want to highlight, support, and respect those who have battled or are battling this disease. Disability can happen to anyone at any time.

Her diagnosis came as many do, a complete shock. She was on a college visit with one of her sons when she opened up her MyChart message and saw the word, “carcinoma.” In the months that followed, she had countless doctor’s appointments, followed by a bilateral mastectomy. From there, it was a long and grueling road to recovery.

She feels “lucky” that her cancer was caught at the earliest detection point possible. As a nurse, she had put off her mammogram for two years because of life and all that comes with working and raising children. She put her health on the back burner as many women do, and now she works to advocate for regular mammograms, and women prioritizing their health.

After her surgery, she lost many abilities due to minimal range of motion in her arms. She had to adapt and rely on others during this time. She and I had several conversations during this time about her loss of independence and how she felt lonely, even though she had a wonderful support system.

She was determined to not miss a moment of her kids’ activities and school events, even on the toughest days. She went to a school events in a wheelchair and reached out to me sharing her thoughts on those experiences.

“I thought about you a lot on those days. It was like a day in the life of Amy. I remember my son pushing me through crowded high school hallways and stopping to talk to people who seemed unaware of my presence. I was not always included in the conversations above me except for a brief, Hey, good to see you out and about! Feeling ok? Sometimes those talking around me would turn the conversation away from me and I was left in the wheelchair facing a wall.”

AMY SHINNEMAN
Disability in the City

When I asked her if her perspective shifted or changed in the way she views disabilities or chronic illness since her diagnosis and fight against breast cancer, this is what she said:

“Yes, thanks to you. I was minimizing my experience by saying things like, it could be a lot worse, or I am lucky I don’t need chemo. That’s true, and I have a cousin who was diagnosed with more advanced breast cancer than mine on the day of my mastectomy. She had a much harder and longer fight than me. I told myself I was never going to feel sorry for myself again because I had it easy compared to her. I remember telling you that and you stopped me right away and told me it is ok to feel bad about what was happening to me. You told me it could be worse, but it could be a lot better, too. Thank you for that important lesson, friend. You have no idea how much that helped me come to terms with my diagnosis and the loss I felt.”

Finally, I asked her if her diagnosis changed the way she views me and my disability. She said, “As adults, you have taught me so much about the parts of people’s lives we don’t see and how challenges can become opportunities. You are a realist and an optimist at the same time when you write and talk about your disability, and that is exactly what I needed to inspire me to get through my battle with cancer and to encourage me to try and help others through theirs.”

Rainey ran in support of Humbly Courageous shortly after her diagnosis (which was truly remarkable), and before her surgery. She also ran with us at the last Indianapolis Mini-Marathon. She said if there is one thing that her battle with cancer taught her it is that “life is a gift, no matter how hard it can be at times.”

For my full “interview” with Rainey, please visit my website, humblycourageous.org.

Garba: a dance of unity in a circle where everyone belongs

As the rhythm of the dhol fills the air and colorful outfits swirl beneath the night sky, something beautiful happens. Hands clap in rhythm, feet follow familiar steps, and strangers become dance partners. This is Navratri, a festival that celebrates devotion, culture, and the power of coming together.

The word Navratri comes from two Sanskrit words: Nav, meaning nine, and Ratri, meaning nights. Across these nine nights, we honor the divine feminine in the forms of Maa (Mother Goddess), celebrating her strength, courage, wisdom, and compassion. For many of us, Navratri is a time of prayer, reflection, music, and dance. But it is also a beautiful reminder of what it means to build a community where everyone belongs.

One of the most cherished traditions of Navratri is Garba, a folk dance originating in Gujarat, India.

Dancers move in a circle, clapping and stepping in rhythm with the music. The circle is more than a dance formation; it is a symbol of unity, continuity, and life itself.

What I love most about Garba is that there is room for everyone. You do not have to know every step to join the circle. You might miss a beat, turn in the wrong direction, or look to someone beside you for guidance. And that is perfectly fine. Someone smiles, someone makes room, and someone helps you find the rhythm.

Isn't that what diversity and inclusion should look like in our everyday lives?

In our communities, we come from different backgrounds, speak different languages, follow different traditions, and carry stories shaped by our own experiences. We may not all know the same steps, but we can learn from one another. We can slow down when someone needs support, make space for someone new, and ensure nobody is left standing outside the circle.

In Garba, every step matters, but no single dancer owns the circle. The beauty comes from moving together, respecting the rhythm, and recognizing that each person contributes something unique. If someone falls out of step, the circle continues to welcome them back.

Perhaps our communities can learn from this simple yet powerful tradition. Belonging is not about expecting everyone to move exactly as we do. It is about creating a space where people feel comfortable learn-

Masks

Hamilton County, get ready for an onslaught of superheroes, dinosaurs, pirates, and princesses! Halloween is right around the corner, and we'd better be prepared with lots of treats!

Halloween can be a fun time in part because of having the chance to put on a costume, possibly with a mask, and "becoming" another "being," at least on Oct. 31!

As we get older and leave our childhood behind, we can put on other "personas," wear other "masks." We may value "authenticity," but when have we ever been less than "authentic" putting on a different "face" in a particular situation?

Unfortunately, we probably have experienced someone who treated us politely like a friend only to "turn on us" later. Or perhaps we experienced someone using "friendship" as a ruse to exploit us in some way and then dropping us like a "hot potato" when not of use to the "friend" anymore!

Sadly, human nature is broken. Deception, betrayal, and exploitation are often rampant.

In his 1895 poem "We Wear the Mask," Paul Laurence Dunbar comments on Blacks needing to hide their suffering from injustices by wearing masks of "smiles" to hide their pain and to exist in society. He writes:

We wear the mask that grins and lies / It hides our cheeks and shades our eyes / This debt we pay to human guile / With torn and bleeding hearts we smile ...

How can we relate kindness and authenticity to "civility"? The bottom line is that to create trust in a relationship, we need to be authentic. That also means embracing some level of vulnerability. Not easy. And it takes time in a relationship to build trust. We have to spend this valuable currency of time in order to invest in a relationship worthy of trust.

In a genuine relationship, however, we can honestly disagree "without being disagreeable." We can do so with civility, not trying to persuade but instead understand "where the other person is coming from." The goal of our conversation is to understand the other person and to continue the relationship.

And I can be authentically passionate about my views (but not by yelling or storming out of the room) while disagreeing – and still maintain the relationship. Indeed, we need to learn how to be both authentic and civil while disagreeing with others, treating others with dignity and respect.

To be authentic do we need to be able to share our deepest sorrows, any teenage risk-taking adventures, any regrets? Of course, the answer is "No, we do not." Wisdom and discernment and good judgment are always needed before sharing what's personal. Being "authentic" to me is "walking the talk" and "practicing what I preach." It's acting with integrity when no one is looking.

So, what about those "little white lies" when we are being less than completely honest? For instance,

From the desk of Hamilton Heights Superintendent Dr. Derek Arrowood

Update No. 181

There is something extraordinary about the people who choose to work in public education. It is not a profession one drifts into. It is a calling. It is one rooted in service, in hope, and in a belief that young people deserve adults who will show up for them with consistency, compassion, and conviction.

Today, more than ever, that calling is being tested. Public education sits under a spotlight that is often harsh, unfair, and disconnected from the daily realities of the work. Our teachers and staff carry expectations that grow heavier each year, while the voices questioning their value grow louder. And yet, despite all of it, they continue to walk through our doors each morning with purpose. They continue to teach, guide, encourage, listen, and love our students in ways that matter more than most people will ever fully see.

At Hamilton Heights, we are fortunate to have educators and staff who embody the very best of what this profession can be. Many of them live here, raise their families here, and invest their lives in the same community they serve each day. They are heroes in the quietest, most meaningful sense of the word – not because they seek recognition, but because they choose to make a difference even when the world makes that choice harder than it should be.

Our teachers and staff are the ones who notice when a student is struggling before anyone else does. They are the ones who celebrate small victories that others might overlook. They are the ones who create classrooms where students feel safe to learn, safe to try, safe to fail, and safe to grow. They are the ones who stay late to help, who show up early to prepare, who give their energy, their creativity, and their hearts to the young people entrusted to them.

Much of their work is seen. But even more of it is unseen.

It is in the thoughtful pause before responding to a student who is hurting. It is in the extra time spent planning a lesson that will finally "click." It is in the quiet encouragement offered to a colleague who needs support. It is in the belief they hold for students who have not yet learned to believe in themselves.

These moments rarely make headlines. They rarely appear in reports or metrics. But they are the moments that shape lives. They are the moments that define Hamilton Heights.

To our teachers and staff: you are the heartbeat of this district. You are the reason our students feel known, supported, and capable. You are the reason families trust us. You are the reason Hamilton Heights continues to be a place where relationships matter, where values guide our work, and where students thrive not because of programs or policies, but because of people like you.

The work you do is noble. The impact you make is profound. And the way you show up for our students, day after day, year after year, is nothing short of heroic. Thank you for choosing this profession. Thank you for choosing Hamilton Heights. Thank you for choosing our students, even when the world makes that choice difficult. It is one of the greatest honors of my career to know you, to work alongside you, and to witness the difference you make.

You shine in ways that strengthen this community, and we are immeasurably better because of you.

Information about two upcoming ballot measures

Indiana has two statewide ballot measures certified to be on the ballot on Nov. 3.

The state legislature has referred a constitutional amendment to the ballot that would require city and town court judges to reside in the county where the court is located or in a county closest to the court which borders the county where the court is located.

The legislature has also referred a constitutional amendment to the ballot to provide offenses other than murder or treason are bailable unless the accused poses a substantial risk to any other person or the community if the presumption is strong, and the state proves that no condition of release will protect the community.

The path to our dreams brings more than expected

Once upon a time, there was an eight-year-old girl growing up in Northern Indiana who dreamed of being an author. She happily plunked out stories on her K-Mart “Snappy Blue” typewriter, which produced only capital letters.

As the girl matured into her teen years, her mother gave her a real typewriter. Soon she created entire books, which she entered into various contests. She never won, but she kept trying. The girl took creative writing in high school and went on to be a Journalism and English major at Indiana University, Bloomington.

As she transformed into a young woman, her head filled with dreams of being a famous author, working full-time and traveling around the country – and beyond – on book tours. The woman figured she’d work at newspapers and write her books on the side until she could be a full-time author.

After graduation, she worked in newspapers selling advertising vs. working on the editorial side. But the woman enjoyed her work. She kept reading books and newspapers, turning often to columnist Erma Bombeck, whom she’d loved ever since she was a girl.

Time passed, and the woman fell in love with a wonderful man and had two sweet little boys. She still wasn’t a full-time author, but she discovered an amazing career where she could use her writing skills – that of a grant professional.

While she still wrote books on the side thanks to her sons’ naps and evenings/weekends, she fell in love with helping nonprofits secure funding to make a difference in the world. The woman also began to write a column for a local newspaper, hoping to be at least half as good as her idol, Erma.

As her sons grew, so did her grant professional experience. The woman went on to work for her city and county, writing and self-publishing books along the way. She didn’t travel much beyond her hometown but did attend Grant Professional Association conferences around the country and often talked to her kind readers. In fact, she began to reach more readers thanks to writing at a new local newspaper and one in Kokomo, too.

One day, she took a plunge she never imagined: she started her own fundraising consultancy. This gave her more freedom to grow in all aspects of her writing. In her early 50s, the woman learned about writers’ conferences – something she had never heard of – and attended her first one at Taylor University.

The annual conference opened her world and gave her new friendships – and strengthened existing ones. It nurtured her mind and soul and opened the gate to a new, traditional Christian publisher for her books. Her friends, the Word Warriors, began meeting with her once a month. Both the event and her Word Warriors helped her grow her faith and opened her mind.

Suddenly, as a conference keynote speaker said one year, she realized her writing path shouldn’t necessarily focus first on sales. Instead, it should lead to souls – helping others make their lives better. The woman also knew her writing path, though different from what she had envisioned as a girl, was better than she had ever imagined.

The woman is still on her journey. Whether or not she becomes a full-time author, she’ll keep writing. Whether it’s newspaper columns, grant proposals, or books, she’ll continue to embrace the twists, turns, and discoveries on the path to her dreams. She hopes others do the same on their paths.

And the woman lived happily ever after.

A few words on ‘wellness’

Wellness: the state of being healthy, especially when it is something that you actively try to achieve. (Cambridge English Dictionary)

I just adore words, reading them, writing them, listening to them ... you get the picture. Of course, there are exceptions; chief among them are words which are considered performative, obscene, or worse yet, useless.

Now I am not saying that the word “wellness” is any of those ... or am I? I will get to that explanation, but I will remind my readers that the earliest known written use appears in a 1654 diary entry by the Scottish statesman Sir Archibald Johnston, Lord Wariston, who wrote, “I blessed God for my daughter’s wellness.” Profoundly sincere and simply stated.

Of course, I, and others like me who teach fitness classes and certified as a nutrition and wellness consultant should be “all in” on “wellness” particularly as it is defined by Cambridge. However, it is difficult to turn on the computer, check social media, watch a television commercial (if you actually do that!), read a magazine, or peruse the book shelves without seeing the word “wellness” to attract your attention. The 21st Century advertisers, in particular, have used the word “wellness” to sell everything from toothpaste to vitamins and everything in between.

As much as I incorporate the word wellness in my writings, I frown to see it used in ways that are commercially self-serving and confusing. So let’s get into the definition of that word as it pertains to us personally and in our everyday lives.

While I am not licensed or certified to give medical evaluations, I am a keen observer of what can appear to be a lack of wellness. Chief among these are obvious: a person who is a smoker, heavy drinker, one who partakes of fast food and/or non-nutritional or “junk food” items, and one who declines to make movement an integral part of their daily activity. None of these characteristics or habits can incorporate a healthy lifestyle, or basic wellness. Similarly, those persons who do not stay focused intellectually and mentally and find ways to make a difference in their surroundings also lack a basic concept of wellness.

Can we encompass wellness if we are disabled, elderly, a size or two above our ideal, dealing with chronic issues such as diabetes or high blood pressure? The answer is yes! I am familiar with folks meeting some or several of these issues yet they find time, they make time, they use time, to do their very best to be the best they can; physically, mentally, intellectually, and more than anything – to enjoy life. I find that the word can also be intimidating. Wellness can be achieved without a great deal of cost, knowledge, effort, or time. I know people who are undergoing chemotherapy and other serious illnesses whom I would declare that they are examples of wellness through their attitudes and their focus on what is best for their bodies and minds.

My column here is tagged “Be Well” because that to me is the basic goal of our human lives and we can get there with our mind-body connection and attention to what is truly good for us. As individuals, families, neighborhoods, regions, and as a country we need to eat better, move our bodies, read frequently, talk, and listen to each other more, and smile!

Be Well!

Investing in education & delivering results for students

Indiana students are making significant academic gains. Reading scores are reaching new highs, math proficiency has improved, high school graduation rates are higher than ever before and we're better aligning our education system with real-world careers.

These gains have come alongside robust and increased investment in Indiana's students, teachers, and schools.

One of the clearest examples of Indiana's progress is in early literacy.

After Indiana refocused on the science of reading, strengthened early interventions, and aligned curriculum with proven strategies, third-grade IREAD scores increased for the fifth consecutive year in 2026. Nearly 89 percent of third graders are demonstrating reading proficiency, and literacy rates have climbed 7.5 percentage points since 2021, surpassing pre-pandemic levels.

On the 2024 National Assessment of Educational Progress, Indiana ranked sixth in the nation in both fourth- and eighth-grade reading. A separate national analysis released this year ranked Indiana sixth among states for reading recovery.

Hoosier students are making progress in math as well. Student math proficiency on the state's ILEARN assessment increased 5.2 percentage points from 2021 to 2025, with gains across every tested grade level.

We're also better connecting high school with what comes next – whether that's college, a career, the military, an apprenticeship, or additional training.

Indiana's redesigned high school diploma is giving students more opportunities to gain work experience, earn credentials and make career connections before graduation. Indiana ranks fourth nationally in total active registered apprentices.

We're also helping college-bound students better prepare while saving families money on college costs. Indiana leads the nation in the percentage of high school students completing at least one college course, with the average student earning 15 college credits before ever stepping foot on campus.

Expanded options and increased relevancy are helping students succeed. Indiana's high school graduation rate recently reached a record high of nearly 92 percent – higher than the national average.

Now, let's talk about funding.

Since 2014, Indiana has increased education funding by 46 percent – a $3 billion increase. In the most recent state budget, Indiana increased K-12 tuition support by $640 million, a 5 percent increase over the biennium, to its highest level yet. State tuition support for public schools alone has increased 30 percent over the last decade.

At the local level, funding has increased as well. And to be clear, our public schools statewide are receiving more – not less – in property tax funding this year than they did last year.

Indiana has also made raising teacher pay a priority. Through increased state investment and requirements that more education dollars reach the classroom, the average teacher salary has grown by nearly 16 percent since the 2020-2021 school year and now exceeds $60,000 a year.

At the same time, we've expanded options for Indiana's families, putting parents in the driver's seat and empowering more families to choose the education environment that's best for their student.

Indiana has refocused on the fundamentals, better connected the classroom to real-world success, provided ongoing investment and expanded educational opportunities for families.

There's more work ahead, but Indiana is moving in the right direction and delivering real results for Hoosier students.

House Speaker Todd Huston (R-Fishers) represents House District 37, which includes a portion of Hamilton County.

Our skillful son Tony

If you have been reading my series of columns on how Mrs. K and I are dealing with the August floods that ravaged our home, you have read about our son, Tony. He is Donna's son from a previous marriage, but I call him my son because that is the role he has taken on in my life.

It is Tony who came to our rescue when we needed a place to stay – driving his RV to our property. It is Tony who has contracted all the labor we have used and who has done much of the hands-on work himself.

Tony is a brilliant ace of all trades. He performs at a top and precise level in carpentry, electrical work, plumbing, car repair, designing and building, handyman work, appliance repair ... anything and everything to do with hands on-problem solving.

Working under the banner of his company, Anew Look, he provides his customers with all the above, and has gained a reputation for his hard-working, honest and thoughtful services. He has been the engine to our recovery from the flooding disaster we have been through.

COLUMNIST

But Tony's skills are not the only inspiring thing about the man. His path to his successes has been a rocky one at times, to say the least. His present state is a testament to his ultimate strength of character – a strength that was not always at the fore, but which had to be discovered and decided upon.

Tony was born the middle child of Mrs. K's five children. As such, he strove for attention with silly antics, daredevil stunts, and a general look-at-me attitude. As he grew, he wasn't immune to getting in trouble and causing his mom more than a few gray hairs as he tested life with minor crimes and eventual drug use. More serious problems followed and Tony found out what it was like to be incarcerated.

Eventually after several such episodes of loss of freedom and dangerous downward steps into drug use, Tony figured things out. He developed his faiths in God and in himself. He decided to take a different tack. The result was a 180-degree change in the direction of his path in life.

Somehow, Tony always has had the talent for understanding the mechanical arts. By observing others, as well as trial and error, he learned to do just about every hands-on skill you can think of. I call him a genius in his special abilities. I have never seen him at a loss when it comes to figuring out spatial problems or knowing about the workings of literally every kind of system.

One of my favorite Tony stories is about how a brother-in-law was having some trouble with the engine in his car, an Acura. No one could figure out the problem or how to resolve it. When Tony heard about it, he attacked the situation – first going into an auto parts store and finding a book with an exploded diagram of an Acura engine. He memorized the diagram. From that he disassembled the Acura engine in his sister's driveway, laying all the parts out, found the problem, cleaned and fixed the troublesome part, then reassembled the engine. His sister's husband said the car ran better than it ever had. Then he fixed his sister's Lexus. Same results.

Nowadays, Tony is much in demand for a variety of services. He has been working hard every day on the recovery of our home, the same home he grew up in. From the very first post-flood days, his contractor's network of workers, skilled and unskilled, have provided the repairs to our walls and floors, working at special rates for him, saving us money.

Tony is a man who has been at the bottom of life's pile. I saw him there. He turned his life around because he saw that where he was heading was a dead end, emphasis on the dead. He had enough, and found that the escape hatch was in himself – he only had to turn the knob.

Tony's story is an inspiring one and it is an ongoing tribute to his mother's creed: "Never give up." She never gave up on her middle son, and she has been rewarded.

Noblesville taxpayers kept their end of the deal

I'm a Noblesville resident, a homeowner, and the state director of Americans for Prosperity-Indiana. On Nov. 3, I will vote no on the property tax referendum on our ballot.

A lot has been said about my team and this referendum over the last few weeks. Some of it deserves a direct response.

Let's start with the claim that Americans for Prosperity-Indiana is some "out-of-state" group coming into Noblesville.

I live here. I own a home here, pay property taxes here, and currently pay the referendum tax we're debating. The volunteers knocking on doors and making phone calls with us include dozens of Noblesville residents who have just as much at stake in this referendum as anyone else.

People are welcome to disagree with us. But we are part of this community, too. Let's argue about the tax itself.

Supporters describe the proposed property tax levy in terms of how much more taxpayers would pay compared with the current levy.

There is just one inconvenient detail: The current referendum levy expires Dec. 31.

Noblesville taxpayers agreed in 2018 to pay that levy for eight years. We did. An eight-year tax doesn't magically become permanent when those eight years are up.

If the new referendum fails, taxpayers aren't skipping out on a bill. The tax voters approved in 2018 will have reached its scheduled expiration.

The ballot authorizes a maximum rate of 57 cents per $100 of assessed value, allowing the district to collect up to $43.8 million annually. At that maximum rate, the state-approved ballot language estimates an annual increase of $955 for a median-value home.

The school board has a committed to a 38.5-cent rate in 2027 and limiting annual increases to 4 cents. But voters are being asked to authorize a maximum rate of 57 cents.

When I vote, I won't rely on the promises of local elected officials. I'll look at what the ballot actually authorizes.

The school board knew for eight years exactly when the current referendum levy would expire. Eight years is plenty of notice. Yet the district now relies on those temporary referendum dollars to fund ongoing expenses, and taxpayers are being warned of significant consequences if they don't authorize another.

That's not something Indianapolis did to Noblesville. It reflects decisions made here about how to budget referendum revenue and what would happen when the levy expired.

The school board members aren't the only local elected officials whose choices deserve scrutiny.

Mayor Chris Jensen is publicly campaigning for the referendum. He has argued that strong schools are an investment in Noblesville and that the additional cost to taxpayers is relatively small.

But Mayor Jensen has championed major taxpayer-backed investments of his own, including the new $93 million Riverview Health Arena at Innovation Mile.

The money used to finance the arena isn't simply interchangeable with school funding. But taxpayers don't experience local government one taxing unit at a time. They experience the cumulative cost.

Mayor Jensen thinks the arena is a great investment, and he is welcome to defend it. He thinks this referendum is a good investment, too. Voters are entitled to look at all of those choices when local leaders ask families to pay more.

Good leaders plan ahead. They don't build budgets around taxes everyone knows expire.

Noblesville taxpayers kept our end of the 2018 deal.

Local government should have planned for theirs.

NOTICE OF PRELIMINARY DETERMINATION OF HAMILTON COUNTY, INDIANA TO ISSUE BONDS

Owners of real property, and registered voters residing in, Hamilton County, Indiana (the "County"), are hereby given notice that the County Council of the County (the "Board"), having held meetings and two separate public hearings pursuant to Indiana Code 6-1.1-20-3.1 and Indiana Code 5-3-1, on October 7, 2026, at 7:00 p.m. in the Commissioner's Courtroom at of the Hamilton County Government and Judicial Center, 1 Hamilton County Square, Noblesville, Indiana 46060, adopted its Ordinance No. CC 09-02-2026-A (the "Ordinance") making a preliminary determination to issue general obligations bonds (the "Bonds") to finance two separate and distinct public improvement projects in the County consisting of (i) the refinancing of the County's Redevelopment District Bond Anticipation Notes, Series 2023, dated May 25, 2023, which were issued to provide interim financing for the construction of sewer and water systems to initially serve the Bakers Corner community and surrounding area (the "2023 BAN Refinancing Project") and (ii) a certain water and sewer public improvement project in the County including (a) a new water main connecting to the water main on the east side of US 31 north of 241st Street, then running east along 241st Street to Anthony Road, south along Anthony Road to 236th Street, and the east along 236th Street to Deming Road, (b) a new regional lift station on the north side of 236th Street west of Deming Road and sanitary force main to the wastewater treatment plant, and (c) a new water main and low pressure sewer system south of 241st Street to serve approximately 6 homes in Twilight Hills who have requested utility service (the "Water/Sewer Improvement Project" and together with the 2023 BAN Refinancing Project, collectively, the "Projects"). Each of the Projects is a "controlled project" as defined in Indiana Code 6-1.1-20-1.1 and is subject to certain additional procedures under Indiana Code 6-1.1-20, as amended, including those as outlined in Indiana Code 6-1.1-20-3.1.

The total maximum original aggregate principal amount of the Bonds will not exceed $22,000,000 with not more than $9,615,000 of the Bonds allocable to the Water/Sewer Improvement Project and $12,385,000 allocable to the 2023 BAN Refinancing Project. The maximum term for the Bonds will not exceed twenty (20) years. Based on the estimated interest rates that will be paid in connection with the Bonds of a maximum rate of 7.00%, the total maximum total interest cost associated therewith is $18,006,431 for the entire issue Bonds with $7,868,810 of such amount allocable to the Water/Sewer Improvement Project and $10,137,621 allocable to the 2023 BAN Refinancing Project. The purpose of the Bonds is to provide financing for the Projects, including cost of issuance of the Bonds. The County's current total debt service fund tax levy is $19,771,877 and the County's current debt service fund tax rate is $0.0510 per $100 of assessed value. The County's estimated total debt service fund tax levy for 2026 pay 2027 is $19,768,331 (inclusive of all of the Bonds), with $2,093,953 allocable to the Water/Sewer Improvement Project and $2,697,702 allocable to the 2023 BAN Refinancing Project. The County's estimated debt service fund tax rate for 2026 pay 2027 is $0.0514 (inclusive of all of the Bonds), with $0.0054 allocable to the Water/Sewer Improvement Project and $0.0070 allocable to the 2023 BAN Refinancing Project, per $100 of assessed value. The estimated total maximum debt service fund tax levy for the County and the estimated total maximum debt service fund tax rate for the County after the issuance of the Bonds is anticipated to occur no earlier than 2026 pay 2027 and will be $19,768,331 (inclusive of all the Bonds) and $0.0514 (inclusive of all the Bonds) per $100 of assessed value (see above allocations for respective Projects). The percent of the County's outstanding long term debt after the issuance of the Bonds, together with the outstanding long term debt of other taxing units that include any of the territory of the County, compared to the net assessed value of taxable property within the County is approximately 11.09%.

The estimated amount of the County's debt service levy and rate that will result during the following 10 years if the County issues the Bonds, after also considering any changes that will occur to the debt service levy and rate during that period on account of any outstanding bonds or lease obligations that will mature or terminate during that period is respectively as follows for the debt service allocable to the Water/Sewer Improvement Project, the 2023 BAN Refinancing Project and collectively for the Projects:

You have been sued by your spouse in a divorce case. The case has been opened in the state and county listed above.
If this form has an Order Setting Hearing form attached to it, you must go to court on the date and time written on the Order Setting Hearing form. If you do not go to the hearing, evidence may be heard and the court may make decisions without you. If a Temporary Restraining Order is ordered by the court, it will go into effect immediately when you receive the order or when you know the order has been given by the court.
If you would like to hire a lawyer to represent you in this divorce case, you should do so before the date that is written on the Notice of Provisional Hearing form.
If you take no action in this case after receiving this Summons form, the court can finalize the divorce case and/or make decisions that may include but are not limited to the following issues: paternity, child custody, child support, maintenance, parenting time, property (real or personal), or dividing any other assets and debts, lawyer fees and costs.

— WESTFIELD —

NOTICE OF THE ADOPTION OF A DECLARATORY RESOLUTION BY THE WESTFIELD REDEVELOPMENT COMMISSION AND OF A PUBLIC HEARING THEREON (EAGLETOWN ECONOMIC DEVELOPMENT AREA)
Notice is hereby given that the Westfield Redevelopment Commission (the “Commission”), being the governing body of the Department of Redevelopment of the City of Westfield, Indiana (the “City”), on August 17, 2026, adopted its Resolution No. 30-2026 (the “Declaratory Resolution”) making certain proposed amendments to the declaratory resolution and the economic development plan (the “Plan”) for the Eagletown Economic Development Area, each as previously amended (the “2026 Amendments”). The 2026 Amendments (i) designate certain additional parcels within the City as an economic development area (such new area, the “2026 Area”) and consolidate the 2026 Area with the existing Eagletown Economic Development Area (collectively, the “Area”), (ii) designate all of the parcels in the 2026 Area as an “allocation area” (the “2026 Allocation Area”) and consolidate the 2026 Allocation Area with the previously established Eagletown Economic Development Allocation Area into a consolidated allocation area, (iii) remove a certain parcel from the Area and the Eagletown Economic Development Allocation Area, (iv) remove certain parcels from the Eagletown Economic Development Allocation Area, and (v) adopt the Plan, as supplemented by a supplement thereto (the “2026 Plan Supplement”) as the development plan for the 2026 Area, all of more particularly described in the Declaratory Resolution.
A detailed description of the proposed 2026 Amendments, together with maps and plats of the 2026 Area, the 2026 Plan Supplement and copies of the Declaratory Resolution, can be inspected at the office of the Director of Economic Development, 2728 E. 171st Street, Westfield, Indiana 46074.
Notice is hereby given that the Commission will conduct a public hearing on Monday, October 19, 2026 at 6:00 p.m. (local time), in the Assembly Room of Westfield City Hall, located at 130 Penn Street, Westfield, Indiana 46074, to receive and hear remonstrances and objections from all persons interested in or affected by the 2026 Amendments and the proceedings pertaining thereto. Written remonstrances to the 2026 Amendments may be filed with the Commission prior to the public hearing at the office of the Director of Economic Development, 2728 E. 171st Street, Westfield, Indiana 46074, and via email to jfairman@westfield.in.gov. After considering the evidence presented at the public hearing, which may be adjourned from time to time, the Commission will take final action determining the public utility and benefit of the proposed 2026 Amendments and whether the proposed 2026 Amendments are reasonable and appropriate when considered in relation to the Plan, and confirming, modifying and confirming, or rescinding the Declaratory Resolution. Prior to taking final action on the Declaratory Resolution pursuant to Section 17(d) of the Act, the Commission has expressed its intent to modify the Declaratory Resolution to consolidate the 2026 Allocation Area with the existing Eagletown Expansion Allocation Area rather than consolidating the 2026 Allocation Area with the existing Eagletown Economic Development Allocation Area.

NOTICE TO TAXPAYERS AND ALL OTHER PERSONS AFFECTED BY ADOPTION AND CONTENT OF RESOLUTION OF THE SHERIDAN REDEVELOPMENT COMMISSION AND OF A PUBLIC HEARING
Notice is hereby given that the Town of Sheridan Redevelopment Commission (the “Commission”), being the governing body of the Department of Redevelopment of the Town of Sheridan, Indiana (the “Town”), on September 22, 2026, adopted a resolution (the “Declaratory Resolution”) (i) declaring that a certain area within the Town of Sheridan, Indiana, designated as the “Sheridan Residential Housing Program Area” (the “Program Area”), is an economic development area within the meaning of Ind. Code § 36-7-14 et seq, as amended (the “Act”), (ii) establishing a residential housing development program for the construction of new residential housing and the renovation of existing residential housing (the “Program”) in accordance with Ind. Code §36-7-14-53, (iii) approving an economic development plan (the “Economic Development Plan”) to implement the Program in the Program Area, and (iv) designating the Program Area as an “allocation area” for the purpose of allocation and distribution of certain property taxes (commonly referred to as “tax increment”) under Sections 39 and 56 of the Act.
A detailed description of the Program Area is included in the Economic Development Plan included with the Declaratory Resolution and can be inspected at the office of the Clerk-Treasurer at 201 S. Main Street, Sheridan, Indiana 46069 during normal business hours.
Notice is hereby given that the Commission will conduct a public hearing on October 27, 2026 at 6:00 p.m., local time, at the Sheridan Community Center, 300 E. 6th St., Sheridan, Indiana 46069, to receive and hear remonstrances and objections from all persons interested in or affected by the proposed projects for the Program Area and the proceedings pertaining thereto.
Following the public hearing, the Commission will determine the public utility and the benefit of the proposed projects. Maps and plats have been prepared and, along with the Economic Development Plan, can be inspected at the office of Clerk-Treasurer at the address set forth above.
A copy of this notice has been filed with the agencies, boards and other departments, bodies, and offices of the Town having to do with planning, variances from zoning ordinances, land use, or the issuance of building permits as required by the Act. These agencies and officers shall take notice of the pendency of the hearing and, until the Commission confirms, modifies and confirms or rescinds the Declaratory Resolution, or the confirmation of the Declaratory Resolution is set aside on appeal, may not (1) authorize any construction on property or sewers in the Program Area, including substantial modifications, rebuilding, conversion, enlargement, additions, and major structural improvements; or (2) take any action regarding the zoning or rezoning pf property, or the opening, closing or improvement of streets, alleys or boulevards in the Program Area. This prohibition shall not prohibit the granting of permits for ordinary maintenance or minor remodeling, or for changes necessary for the continued occupancy of building in the Program Area.
Individuals needing special accommodations to participate in the public hearing are encouraged to contact the office of the Clerk-Treasurer during normal business hours no less than 72 hours prior to the meeting at (317) 758-5293.

Chasing sunsets

We recently spent a week on a beautiful vacation. Each evening, we enjoyed going to a special spot and viewing the sunset. There’s something special about watching the sunset with your favorite people that makes it extra beautiful. We were blessed with gorgeous weather and relaxing days spent on the beach. There were long walks into town, ice cream, and lots of time spent with stunning views. The sunset each night was just the cherry on top of beautiful days.

Whenever we go on a trip, I think it’s normal as it’s winding down to feel a bit of a twinge of sadness as it ends. I’m so grateful for the time spent together and the memories made. I feel blessed to be able to share them with our children and family, but as it winds down, it makes you wish you could pause time. You could keep everything as it is right now. I wish the kids would stay this little for a while longer.

As the week came to a close, we packed up all of our things and headed back home. Even after a great trip that I’m sad to leave, I welcome being home in my own bed and seeing our dogs. I don’t need a vacation from my life. I enjoy our normal reality and home. Even so, I was still bummed the week was over.

I really struck me after we got home from our trip that my son was in the backyard playing and excitedly ran in the house and told all of us to get outside and check out the sky that night. He was so excited to see the sunset in our own yard.

It made me pause as I looked up in our backyard when I saw the sunset that night. It literally looked like what you would picture if God painted a watercolor in the sky.

Sometimes we go chasing sunsets in places where all we need to do is look up at the sky from our own backyard.

I was equally delighted with the fact that my son on his own made it a point to notice something I wasn’t even paying attention to. In fact, something that would have passed me right by without him pointing it out to me.

It made me remember that you don’t need to do extravagant things to make memories with your kids. You don’t have to spend a bunch of money for the time to be priceless. Sometimes all we need to do is open our eyes to beauty in our everyday lives.

Don’t go chasing sunsets. Don’t live your life for a vacation. Just look up at the sky from your own backyard.

CURTIS COOPER
Think on These Things

In Mark 11:27-33, Jesus had just cleansed the temple by overturning tables of the money changers, driving out those buying and selling, and declaring His Father’s house to be a house of prayer.

The religious leaders were furious.

Now Jesus was back in the temple, and the Jewish leaders had questions for Him: “By what authority are You doing these things? And who gave You this authority to do these things?” In other words, “What gave You the right to come into our temple and tell us how to run things? Prove Your credentials!”

Honestly, it was a legitimate question, and Jesus would have answered it if they had sincerely asked it. Instead, He asked them a question: “The baptism of John – was it from heaven or from men?” If they answered His question, He would answer theirs. They knew the answer. John’s baptism was from heaven. But admitting that would force them to face an uncomfortable conclusion about Jesus.

So, they refused to answer. They were more concerned with the consequences of their answer than with the truth of it (thinking like a politician).

Jesus was not trying to show them up, but to lead them to the answer to their own question: Jesus has authority from God.

So, does authority come from Heaven or man? When it comes to authority, these are the only two options. Everything we do has a source of authority: God or man. We cannot simply say, “Authority doesn’t matter.” The moment we do, we make ourselves the source of authority.

Therefore, in everything we do and believe, we should ask: “Does this come from God’s authority or man’s authority?” When it comes to our worship, church practices, church organization and government, and everything we teach and preach – God or man? The decisions I make in my family and relationships – God or man? My life, my actions, and my words – God or man?

If something does not come from God, then ultimately, it comes from man.

We learn a couple of lessons from this:

No. 1: Authority Matters

What is authority? Merriam-Webster defines it as the “power to influence or command thought, opinion, or behavior.”

Who had authority in your home growing up? Dad? Mom? Both? Think about the influence they had on what you believe and do today. Yet even your parents should have recognized that there was someone above them.

Who has authority over the church? Is it your preacher? Is it the elders? Is it a denominational organization? Even those who lead a church must recognize that someone is over them. Yet, that is not always the case. Ephesians 1:22-23 says, “He put all things under [Jesus’] feet and gave Him to be head over all things to the church, which is His body.” Jesus is the Head of the church. The church is His body, and the Head has the right to direct every part of the body.

Have you ever watched a game on TV when the referee made a call you did not like? Suddenly, everyone on the couch becomes an expert referee. We may yell at the television and tell the official exactly what he should have done. But the game does not stop because we disagree. Why? Because our opinion does not carry any authority, unlike the referee. That is how authority works.

Yet authority is even more important when it comes to spiritual matters. Souls are on the line. The stakes are eternal. When we are talking about God and eternal life, authority is not something to play around with.

No. 2: The Source of Authority Matters

There are many different sources from which people claim authority. Yet, ultimately, the basis is either God or man. We will consider some of those in the columns that follow.

God is the Creator, Giver, Owner, and Ruler of all things. Jesus is the standard. He made us, and He knows what is best for us. He gave us the church. He paid for it. He owns it; that is, if we are part of a church that belongs to Him.

It makes sense, then, to go back to Him to find out how it all is supposed to work, how we should worship, what the structure of the church is, how we are to live, what He expects, and what pleases Him (Ephesians 5:10, 17). Jesus has the authority to tell us how His church and our lives should be (Matthew 28:18).

The question Jesus asked is still a relevant question we need to ask today: Is it from heaven or from men?

Visitors are welcome and valued. We meet at 15530 Herriman Blvd., Noblesville. Our phone number is (463) 287-0664. We meet for Sunday morning Bible Study at 10 a.m. and have classes for all ages. Worship begins at 11 a.m. and we have a Bible Study Wednesdays at 7 p.m. A warm welcome awaits!
